The civics committee of the Montreal Women's Club is urging that special emphasis be laid on colonization rather than on immigration. They contend that women should play some part in the preparation of immigration schemes, and that women should have a larger share in administration of present colonization schemes. Thirdly, they hold that some training scheme should exist, in order to fit girls coming to Canada to become competent domestic servants. The fourth point on the programme is that British teachers should be encouraged to settle in the Canadian West.

A RICH EXHIBIT OF COSTLY FURS

Wm. Lech and Sons Are in Manufacturers' Building—65 Years in Business.

In their space at the Manufacturers Building at the Peterborough Exhibition, William Lech and Sons have their fine exhibit of costly furs. Prominently situated in the centre row of the righ aisle it cannot fail to catch the eye of the throngs that crowd this building all the time. The rich seals, Hudson seals, sables, coon and other skins, made up by the firm in its own workshops, make a display that is not measured in dollars and cents value, but in genuine cold weather comfort and beauty.

The William Lech and Sons' firm have been in busines in Peterboro for sixty-five years, one of the very longest established businesses in the city. It is really a part and symbol of Peterborough's growth and prosperity.

Lech's furs are known far and wide, and have been worn by our local ladies and men for half a century, and more

On your rounds of the fair by all means stop and see Lech's exhibit.

GREATER INTEREST IN HUDSON SUPER-SIX CARS

A new carburetor and manifold which result in better gasoline mileage, announced by the Hudson Motor Car Company in its latest super-six series, is meeting with wide public interest, according to C. L. Brewer, Hudson-Essex distributor.

This improvement is of particular interest, said Mr. Brewer, because all the familiar power and smoothness of the Super-Six motor is retained; in fact certain phases of performance are actually bettered. A considerable number of tests have been made with the new cars, it is said, all with the result that added reason has been found for enthusiasm among Hudson Super-Six fans. Still further tests are being made, results of which will be made public. Together with the new bodies in attractive colors, the Hudson motor improvement is attracting a record-breaking number of buyers. Every indication is present, it is said, that the present autumn season will be the most active that Hudson ever has known in this vicinity.

"Now that all announcements of new models are out," said Mr. Brewer, "an outstanding fact is the number of so-called "new" things which have been regular Hudson Super-Six features for many years. I suppose the most important step forward this year has been a widespread attempt to gain greater motor smoothness. Yet Hudson has used a patented and exclusive design of crankshaft for eleven years which is inherently balanced in itself, and which also cares for the other forces in a motor which otherwise would set up vibration.

"In other words, the Hudson design prevents vibration before it is ever set up. There is a vast difference between that and "dampening" vibration once it is under way. Hudson owners have enjoyed this smoothness for many years. Each season has seen this effect improved with better manufacturing methods in the industry. Our new cars are no exception to this general law of progress.

"Hudson results are obtained by, and founded on simplicity. A gasoline strainer is built in; air is warmed and cleaned before it ever reaches the carburetor; the design of the oiling system keep down oil dilution. These effects are all obtained as a matter of course without the use of added accessories. They always have been fundamental features of Hudson Super-Six design." —Advt.

The ladies see a prospect of cake for a long time ahead if they can win one of the magnificent cakes offered as prizes. These cakes are in three layers, beautifully iced, and an appetizing appearance. They were baker by L. Potvin and Boorman's Bakery, East City, and are to be given free to the person holding the winning number on a ticket handed out free at the booth to all who call.

The brands of flour that are featured are Maple Leaf and Cream of the West, for bread, and Monarch, Jenny Wren and Silver Moon flours for pastry.

Attractive bags give promise of satisfactory contents, and the reputation of these flours is a guarantee of their sterling quality.

RUSSIA ROUSED BY CRIME WAVE

SUMMARY EXECUTION.

MOSCOW, Sept. 17 (Associated Press).—A crime wave throughout the country which is growing more and more violent got its first definite check yesterday in the death sentence of Zabachti, a Charkov gangster convicted of killing a laborer. The central executive committee of the Ukraine promptly approved the sentence, serving notice of a beginning of a fight to a finish against hooliganism.

The outbreak of crime began soon after the Government sanctioned the sale of vodka of 40 per cent. alcohol, and grew steadily worse until in the last few weeks the crimes against women and men became so frequent and violent that the country was aroused. A strong demand was voiced that the Government class hooligans with bandits, who may be shot without a regular court trial. In Moscow alone in the last three months 12,450 complaints of gang crimes were made. In Leningrad all the labor bodies demanded that the death penalty be inflicted on the leaders of a gang of youths who had attacked a girl.

Evening Examiner "Ideal Fashions" by Jean Belle Hamilton

Simple Lines Aspire to Honors

Here is the type of frock the well-dressed woman loves—the kind of frock that day in and day out serves her staunchly and with smartness. Sparing of trimming, it has a simplicity of which you will never tire, and lines that were chosen to make those who are "not as slim as they used to be" look their slenderest. The dress opens at the center front under a row of buttons from neck to hem and has a collar to be worn high or turned back in revers, while the long, plain sleeves are finished with tailored cuffs. NO. 1333 is in sizes 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust. Size 40 requires 4⅛ yards 39-inch, or 2⅞ yards 54-inch material, with ⅝ yard contrasting color for collar, pockets and cuffs. FOR SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1926.

Fair fortune appears to be forecast for most Earth activities under this planetary government, according to astrology.

Jupiter is in benefic aspect presaging good fortune for all sorts of commercial initiative. It is a first-rate sway for making beginnings in any new field of business.

There is a sign favoring political work and promising campaigns of unusual keenness in competition.

Municipalities in all parts of the country are likely to have spasms of reform, but little progress will be made against corrupt government.

National movements to purge politics of graft and dishonesty of every sort are to be started, but they will be slow in accomplishing appreciable results, the seers prophesy.

While this rule prevails there may be a tendency toward irritability, which should be overcome, for there is a threatening aspect for domestic harmony.

Divorces will increase so amazingly in the next five years that marriage becomes a contract of recognized uncertainty and changes in the laws are forecast.

Uranus is in an aspect making for all sorts of eccentricities and mental obliquities. Intrigue and deceit will be widely practiced while this configuration prevails.

Egotism, which the seers declare has been alarmingly prevalent, will be increasingly apparent in women, it is foretold. Many new forms of vanity will be noticeable.

Wise men and women will work constantly for mental poise and solidity of character at this time when there will be many subtle corrupting influences.

Great Britain is to have a period of continued anxiety in regard to colonia matters and Western Europe is to experience sensational changes.

One of the reconciling forecats indicate that beauty is to be sought in American cities and landscapes as never before. Gardeing will become, one of the most fashionable pastimes it is prophesied.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have rather a trying year but should be fairly successful, if tact and wisdom are expercised. Tools and other implements should be handled carefully.

Children born on this day probably will have unusual mental endowment. These subjects of Virgo often have

JOHN'S TRIBUTE

John Meredith sighed. I hadn't answered him as he would have liked me to.

"I expect you are right, Judy. You have shown me that if instead of being so cowardly and self-contained I had stayed in town at my mother's home and taken my medicine standing, it would have been much better for everyone concerned.

"I certainly would have kept my sister from the great sorrow she is going through. But Judy, I have one excuse, I was very young, merely a child when I had to make my great decision, yet I am ashamed of all those years that I was skulking behind my crippled arm and leg, while I left Joan to the temptations of the world after our mother died.

"If I had only someone like you then, to show me the right way, I would have seen what a weakling and coward I was.

"Judy, dear Judy, you have taught me more of life in the comparatively few hours that I have known you than I have learned in all the years that have gone before.

"Oh, I don't want to lose you now, just when I have found you."

"Don't worry, John, you won't lose me."

I knew I had to be flippant for if I was not, I should break down and sob.

"When I was a very little girl, my mother told me that nothing would go out of my life that something better would not come into it. That may be a sophistry or false philosophy, but it has been a great comfort to me.

"If I go out of your life, John, I am sure someone else will come into it who will make you happy." As I said this, my heart grew heavy, for I was beginning to feel that no one could come into my life who would make me happy."

"However," I continued gravely, "you know, John dear, there are many other things that you must find and keep and the greatest of all these is to find and keep yourself."

While we had been talking, I had an uneasy feeling that Mr. Symington had been hovering about near, and I was greatly relieved when I heard him walk across the drawing-room and enter the hall where we were standing.

I knew by his expression that he was consumed with curiosity as to just what his friend and patron had been saying to me—just what we had been talking about.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

A strange combination is form today's talismanic and natal gems. The former is the bloodstone while the latter is the turquoise. Good and evil are cleverly balanced by this combination. Ancient legend reads into it the belief that riches will be acquired with the coming of distressing news. The riches will consist of land, houses and abundant crops, so said the ancients. The turquoise is believed to protect these possessions from loss by fire or flood. It is also a talisman againstunwise investments, and is believed to have a restraining influence against those possessed by the gambling madness.

Light red is the lucy hue for today. It represents health and vigor and the wearing of it is supposed to attract these qualities.

The yellow rose is the flower for today. It is not lucky since it indicates jealousy and quarrels.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain—How To Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Condition—A skin that chaps easily or becomes rough with changes of temperature.

Treatment—Very frequently this is the result of hasty drying of the face. It is as necessary to dry the face carefully as it is to wash or cleanse it thoroughly. Always, after washing the face, rinse it in cold water and dry with a soft cloth by pressing it against the skin so you absorb the water rather than rub it dry. It is often only hasty rubbing with a too harsh towel that makes the skin irritated and rough.

A Fashion Model's Diary

TAFFE DANC FROCK

Madame is always practical in what she advises for her clients. I am sure this is one reason for her wide popularity, for no matter how much money people have, they like to spend it for frocks which will serve practical needs as well as mark them of the fashionably elite.

Just at this season she is designing everything with an eye to Fall needs.

For instance, young Miss Brown, who spends her Summers on Long Island, came rushing in quite out of breath yesterday.

"We're planning to stay in the country till October," she told Madame "I want a dance frock I can wear there, and which will still be just right for Fall wear in town when I get back."

Madame assured her she made all her late Summer and early Fall frocks with an eye to their wearability far into the Fall, and then they turned to a discussion of colors and material and line.

"You would look well in the new wine shade which is going to be very smart for Fall," Madame advised her. "It is lovely with fair skin such as yours."

"I'd love that!" the young girl replied enthusiastically. "The rest I'll leave entirely to you. I always like your choices for me, and it gives me a thrill to wait and see the frock when it's nearly done."

This suited Madame exactly. She never goes wrong on a design and she loves to have full sway in deciding the way a frock is to be made.

Madame has Miss Brown's measurements in her book, so the work progressed rapidly all day yesterday, as we happened to have time to start on the dress immediately.

I stood for a fitting in the late afternoon, as Miss Brown and I are nearly the same size.

Wine-Colored Taffeta Is Used to Develop This Gown of Spanish Influence.

She came in today for the only fitting she will have to bother with, and was simply in ecstasies over the frock.

"The bolero and wide overskirt are built on the lines of a Spanish dancing girl's frock," Madame told her. "The short, jaunty skirt will go well with your slim legs."

The overskirt was covered with short ruffles, finished with simple frayed edges of the material. Oxidized silver thread made a simple design on the hem of the foundation skirt and on the bolero jacket, and the dress really is stunning.

FASHIONS

By GIEVES, LTD.

The Old Bond Street Tailors to H. M. the King and H. R. H. the Prince of Wales.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—(United Press).—Dressing well is not so much the addition of a few items of proper wear to the "well dressed man's wardrobe as is the complete revision of an improper wardrobe."

There is practically no one who does not like to have his fellow beings say, "He is one of the best dressed men in town," or "Doesn't he always look nice in what he wears."

The question is how to attain the very desirable position of being well dressed or looking nice.

It is a fact that many of the men who daily pass through Bond street, London, Fifth avenue, New York, or even the Florida in Buenos Aires who are regarded as well dressed, have educated themselves to dressing. Some have been known to clip all newspapers and carefully file away for future reference the edicts of fashion from clothing houses which are recognized.

A certain man in London, who is generally known to be one of the best dressed men in town, maintains a complete index of newspaper clippings relating to the proper thing to wear upon all occasions. This man never enters a clothing store with the purpose of making a purchase. When a new season approaches, he merely looks in the index under "Spring," "Fall," etc., and finds there are necessary type and color of garments he must buy to be dressed properly during the anticipated season. He then instructs his valet to make purchases of gear that is not necessary for his personal election, and instructs his tailor to wait upon him with patterns and make the selection of suits that he will require.

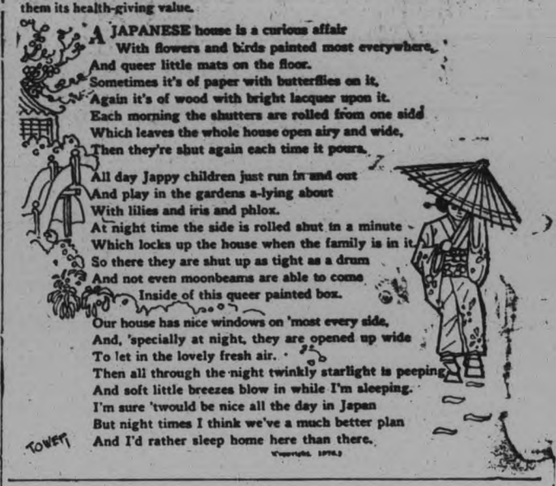
The average Englishman who does not have a valet to do the purchasing of his hosiery supplies for him, knows the moment he enters a shop the type and color he desires and seldom does he ask, "What do you have in fall styles?"

Education in proper dress has almost become a science with the Englishman, and the man who wishes to perfect his wardrobe need not add to what he has so much as make a "start fresh" on the principle that $100 invested in a dress suit or Tuxedo is ineffective compared with adding another $100 and making his entire evening kit the correct thing, meaning, of course, the purchase of evening overcoat, silk hat, patent leather shoes and other necessary accessories.

Jappy Homes

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

WHEN we are so thoroughly converted to wide open windows at night it seems strange to think of a land where it is against the law to leave the shutters open. In Japan a sliding side of the house is open wide all day but at night the house is closed tight as a box, for the police claim any opening tempts and encourages robbers and thieves. Experience has taught us that if a thief wants to get in he gains entrance anyway. We have a great deal of faith in our police force and we are absolutely convinced of fresh air's boon to health, so we leave our windows open. Moreover, we train our children to sleep in the fresh air and teach them its health-giving value.



A JAPANESE house is a curious affair
With flowers and birds painted most everywhere,
And queer little mats on the floor.
Sometimes it's of paper with butterflies on it,
Again it's of wood with bright lacquer upon it.
Each morning the shutters are rolled from one sidd
Which leaves the whole house open airy and wide,
Then they're shut again each time it pours.

All day Jappy children just run in and out
And play in the gardens a-lying about
With lilies and iris and phlox.
At night time the side is rolled shut in a minute
Which locks up the house when the family is in it
So there they are shut up as tight as a drum
And not even moonbeams are able to come
Inside of this queer painted box.

Our house has nice windows on 'most every side,
And, 'specially at night, they are opened up wide
To let in the lovely fresh air.
Then all through the night twinkly starlight is peeping
And soft little breezes blow in while I'm sleeping.
I'm sure 'twould be nice all the day in Japan
But night times I think we've a much better plan
And I'd rather sleep home here than there.

UNCLE WIGGILY'S MEMORY BELLS

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Yes, I would dearly love to have something like that, but I don't know where to get one," Mrs. Longears was saying.

The best way is to have them given to you," barked Mrs. Bow Wow, the lady dog, who was visiting the rabbit in her hollow stump bungalow.

I wonder what it is they are talking about?" thought Uncle Wiggily, who was getting ready to go out adventuring. It can't be a fern basket my wife wants, for I made her one the first of the week," and he laughed to think how Aunt Lettie, the goat, thinking the ferns in the hanging bark basket were watercress, or something like that, ate them all.

Yes, memory bells have a beautiful thought about them," went on Mrs. Longears. Tell me what they are like."

Well, my cousin, who lives in the big city was speaking about them," said Mrs. Bow Wow. It seems that in a country called Japan, pieces of glass, painted with pretty flowers, are fastened to strings, and then they are hung dingling and dangling on the porch. When the wind blows, the pieces of glass tinkle pleasantly in the breeze and that makes memory bells. When you hear them you remember the one who gave them to you.

It sounds most poetical," said the rabbit lady. 'I shall try to buy some, if on one gives me a set of memory bells."

"You will not need to do that," said Uncle Wiggily softly to himself, "I'll get my wife a set of memory bells."

But this was more easily said than done. For though Uncle Wiggily inquired at the three and four cent store, they had no memory bells.

"We have lead pencils, though, and you could write down the name of some one you wanted to remember-said the mouse girl clerk.

"No, I must have tinkling memory bells," said the bunny gentleman. So he went to the eight and nine cent store.

"We have tack hammers," said the little pussy girl clerk, "and if you hit anybody on the thumb with a hammer he would remember you a long time."

"It isn't the same thing, 'at all," said the bunny, and he thought he would never find some memory bells for his wife when, all of a sudden, as Mr. Longears was hopping beneath a pine tree in the woods, he heard a gentle tinkling, tankling sound that he knew must be the same as the music made by the memory bells of which Mrs. Bow Wow spoke.

"Can there be a five and ten cent store up in that tree?" asked the rabbit gentleman of himself, he being all alone. But there was no store in sight, only an old black crow. And, as the bird hopped around, again came that tinkling sound.

"Have you memory bells?" called up Uncle Wiggily.

"Oh, no," cawed the crow. "But I am cleaning out my nest, getting ready to fly south for the winter. I have a tin spoon, some pieces of tin, a glass bottle and a lot of string, all tangled together. See!"

The crow held up in one claw a lot of shiny, tinkling things fastened in a wad of string, and when the wind blew there was a pleasant musical sound.

"Why, those are just the same as memory bells!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily. "Where did you buy them?"

"I didn't buy them—I made them," cawed the crow. "You know we black birds are very fond of shiny thigs, as are the magpies of England. Often, when my wife and I were making our nest, we would pick up an old spoon, a bit of tin, a glass bottle or a boy's broken whistle. It's just a sort of fad. But, I don't want these things any more, so I am taking them out of my nest. Next year I'll gather more tinkling things."

"Then please give these to me!" begged the bunny. "They are just what I want for my wife's memory bells." And, when the things from the crow's nest were hung on the porch of the hollow stump bungalow, the wind tinkled and rattled them and Mrs. Longears said:

"How jolly! When I hear them I shall always think of my husband and Mr. Crow." So everything came out all right, and if the lead pencil doesn't bounce on its rubber head and make a black mark on the white cat, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the Wogglejigs.

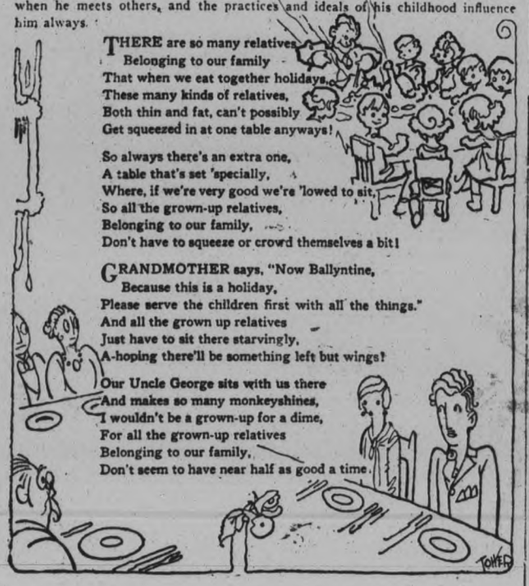
The Extra Table

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

A FAMILY is a wonderful institution. If one ever feels that he sees too much of relatives, all he has to do is put himself in the position of one who has no one to care or bother, and a family will seem a precious thing. It's an excellent place to get the sharp edges rubbed smooth, and to learn to adjust oneself to larger groups. The way a child reacts within the family determines his qualities when he meets others, and the practices and ideals of his childhood influence him always.



THERE are so many relatives
Belonging to our family
That when we eat together holidays,
These many kinds of relatives,
Both thin and fat, can't possibly
Get squeezed in at one table anyways!

So always there's an extra one,
A table that's set 'specially,
Where, if we're very good we're 'lowed to sit,
So all the grown-up relatives,
Belonging to our family,
Don't have to squeeze or crowd themselves a bit!

GRANDMOTHER says, "Now Ballyntine,
Because this is a holiday,
And all the grown up relatives
Just have to sit there starvingly,
A-hoping there'll be something left but wings!

Our Uncle George sits with us there
And makes so many monkeyshines,
I wouldn't be a grown-up for a dime,
For all the grown-up relatives
Belonging to our family,
Don't seem to have near half as good a time.

OLD COUNTRY WORK A UNIQUE DISPLAY

Needlework From Great Britain Draws Many Tributes.

TORONTO, Sept. 17 (Canadian Press).—Hon. Mrs. Ralph Glyn, one of the most outstanding women connected with the Women's Institute movement in England, has been a visitor here. Mrs. Glyn, who is especially interested in the handicraft side of Institute work, came in connection with the display of work from the Old Land. One of the most interesting pieces unpacked was a copy of an old Staffordshire smock — gardener's pattern. The smocking thereon drew enthusiastic tributes, as did the cobwebby drawn thread work and almost infinitesmal tucks on a baby's dress. From the handsome 'Jemima Puddleduck' to curly dogs, rabbits, monkeys and other toy animals, the collection was unique and charming.

Daily Short Story

DON'T SING—I O SING

(By Dorothy Mapes.)

Bob Willard settled himself as comfortably as was possible under the circumstances, among the numerous cushions left beside him for that purpose. He had had a pretty nasty skid on greasy roads and would have to lie up in his studio for a number of weeks yet. It was a great trial but Willard was thankful to have got off as well as he had.

The capable little nurse who came in daily to care for him had tidied up the place so thoroughly that he hardly recognized his own studio. She treated him as if he were a mighty infant and stayed on duty until the return of Willard's room-mate, Jim Wilson.

Willard glanced at the clock and shivered. It was nearing the hour when the girl who had moved into the studio adjoining his own would sit down at the piano and for one solid hour drive him nearly mad with her singing.

The girl next door seemed possessed with a speed mania. She scrambled through her songs as if fearful of giving one single tone its value. Her hours at the piano invariably left Willard in a state of nervous exhaustion.

When she finished her noise this day, he determined to follow up the idea that had been prodding him for some time and when his nurse was out he hobbled painfully into the hall and pressed a note under the door of the girl's studio.

Returning from the kitchen where she had been preparing a light lunch Gladys Venner picked up the squared paper in her hall and took it into the studio. Her face when she read it reflected a hotch-potch of emotions.

"In the next studio next to you, separated only by a thin wall, is one who has been badly smashed in motor accident and is compelled to stay in his studio for some few weeks yet. May he ask, as a great favor that when you are singing you slow up a bit."

So in justice to the man next door Gladys admitted her singing must be pretty faulty and determined not to sing another note. At least not within hearing of the annoyed stranger.

Consequently after a few days in which Willard had listened in vane for the voice, it annoyed him more than ever that she she did not sing. He felt conscious stricken. He had robbed a human being of her pleasure in self-expression and if he had not been in such a state of invalidism the unpleasant situation would never have happened.

So when Gladys returned home after a short walk she found a second note under her door and some sheets of music. The emotions crossing her lovely face were again a hotch-potch but with far less annoyance in the mixture.

"If you don't sing these songs before twelve o'clock to-day I shall be forced to make arrangements to be taken to some hospital as I will not deprive you of your singing. You are no sport and haven't played the game. Being an invalid I thought I had the right to ask a very small favor. Bob Willard. P. S. —I would far rather remain in my studio."

Gladys smiled and looked over the several songs he had sent her. They were all carefully marked as to expression. Gladys realized intuitively that Willard was a man of his word. She certainly would not be responsible for forcing him out of his own home. She walked slowly toward the piano, her heart beating a trifle quickly.

Timidly she played the introduction to one of the songs and in the next room Willard breathed a sigh of relief.

And while he listened Gladys struggled to master faulty rendition and to give full value to tone and expression. She succeeded wonderfully well. Perhaps that unknown listener had keyed her up. When she finished she colored brilliantly for an echo of applause reached her.

Each day she sang and gradually gained such control of her voice and temperamental nature as to give Willard infinite pleasure.

Then one day she and Willard's nurse met on the landing and Gladys smiled, "And how is your patient?" she asked shyly.

"Getting along famously—now. Wouldn't you like to come in and meet him. He gets a bit fed up about this time of the day."

A second later she was standing beside Willard's couch and he was holding her hand in a firm grip. He had essayed to rise but she held him back. Nurse drew a chair up and Gladys sat down and the three of them smiled as if something very wonderful was happening.

When a week later nurse broke the news that she must go to another case Gladys promptly said she would bring in Willard's lunch each day if they thought it quite proper. It would save having in a stranger.

"It would be far more proper if you went through a little ceremony with me first. Nurse will be the maid of honor and I'll get Wilson to come up at noon and be my best man. And some day later, when I can carry luggage about, we'll go on a bit of a honeymoon and——"

"Who was it that asked someone to slow up a bit?" questioned Gladys with a laugh. "I thought speed drove him into a fever and—" she blushed hotly for Willard had dragged her into his arms while the nurse just stood by and laughed. "Besides—you said I was no sport."

"Then prove that I was wrong," swiftly put in Willard.

"I certainly won't let you say it again," said Gladys.

A BISHOP AT HIS EASE

DISCUSS DOUBLE SHOOTING

The young man wearing the cap is Gordon Ward, discussing with two Toronto detectives the case of Elmo David Aldo, aged 22, who shot his fiancee, Winnifred Colwill, 22-year-old nurse, then himself, recently in a fit of jealousy. Aldo left a note, in which he wrote: "I was speaking to that Ward fellow this morning and he is to blame, though he is only playing with Eva, as I said." Ward declares he never knew Aldo was going to marry the girl. The group was photographed in front of the stand of Ward's father at the Canadian National Exhibition. The girl's relatives refused to permit a double funeral.

MUTINY IN SPANISH FORCES IS SPREADING AND OUTBREAK IS EXPECTED IN SHORT TIME

London Paper Says Dictator Threatened To Proclaim Republic.

BUSINESS STAGNANT.

Writer Says Salvation Lies in Abdication of Alfonso.

LONDON, Sept. 17 (Canadian Press).—A special reporter to The Daily Express, who has been in Spain investigating the situation and the recent crisis due to the mutiny of Artillery, telegraphs from Hendaye a lurid picture of events. He asserts that mutiny is growing in the army and that a fresh upheaval is expected.

The correspondent gives what purports to be the truth concerning the recent trouble. Among other things he says that a delegation of Artillery officers intercepted the car of King Alphonso at Del Leon in the mountains fifty miles from Madrid while the King was on his way to the capital. They parleyed with the King who, after listening to their impassioned demands, promised to support them. Arriving at the palace, Alfonso receied Premier General Primo de Riviera to whom he related the conversation at Del Leon.

"If your majesty yields to the officers I will proclaim a republic with myself as president," the premier dictator is said to have replied.

It is said that the dictator's hold on power depends upon the army. Sullen mutiny is declared to be spreading in Artillery, Cavalry, Infantry, and Air Force, while the army in Morocco is wavering in its allegiance

"If a revolution comes," the correspondent continues, "it will be through the army and not the people, who are not allowed to know what is happening." He quotes an unnamed intellectual as stating that the only chance for the salvation of the country lies in the abdication of Alfonso in favor of his third son (Prince Juan, aged 13) with Queen Victoria as regent until the Prince attains his majority.

The writer asserts that civil justice and liberty are a mere mockery in Spain today. Business is becoming stagnant since Primo de Rivera is pressing hard for money and imposing fines right and left. It is predited that within a month Spain will be plunged in great trouble.

STEAMER SINKS CREW NOT FOUND

Italian Vessel's Sailors May Have Been Rescued By Fishermen.

COLLISION CAUSE.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The Italian steamer Ellenia sank to the bottom of the ocean yesterday off the British coast, but what has become of her crew remains a mystery. The first report to Lloyds that all hands were lost appears to have been premature, for the steamer Homeric, which rushed to the rescue of the sinking steamer, reports the possibility that the crew were picked up, as numerous fishing craft were in the vicinity, but no word has been heard of them as yet.

The Homeric was five miles from Elelnia when the distressed vessel sank. Twenty-five minutes later she was over the spot where the ship disappeared.

There was considerable wreckage, but no member of the crew was seen.

A wireless message from the Homeric by way of Valencia to Lloyds:

"Numerous sail and fishing craft and one steam trawler were in sight. The weather was fine, with slight sea. Presume crew abandoned ship and were picked up."

The commander of the steamer Olympic, due at Cherbourg, tomorrow, wirelessed the White Star Line by way of Queenstown early this afternoon: "Have been alongside Italian steamer Ellenia which is asking for assistance. Captain doesn't wish to abandon; have called other steamer to stand by and I am proceeding."

The disaster was due to a collision between the Ellenia and the British steamer Induna, which, although damaged, was able to continue.

DEMPSEY FAVORITE.

Odds in Favor of Champ Are 11 To 5—Some Freak Bets.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17 (Canadian Press).—With the Dempsey-Tunney championship bout only a week off bettors today were inclined to run to freak wagers and a number of such commissions were executed through a local firm. However, betting on the final result was extremely active and wagers aggregating $35,000 were placed by the firm at odds ranging from 11 to 5, to 2 1-2 to 1 that Dempsey will be winner.

Among the freak wagers was one of $10,000 at even money that Dempsey stops Tunney before the eighth round. Odds of six to five are offered that the champion knocks out Gene. Previous betting on this phase of the fight was at evens.

Restoration of Church Uncovers Fine Frescoes

UDINE, Italy Sept. 17 (United Press).—Important discoveries of ancient frescoes and sacred relics are reported from the town of Cividale, where, during the course of some restorations to the famous church of Saints Peter and Biagio, a magnificent fresco representing St. Biago surrounded by a crowd of the faithful was found under a layer of stucco.

Behind the altar of the chapel of St. Biagio, which dates from the fifth century, another ancient altar was found and some relics of the martyrs, Saints Lucidus and Ildrium, still bearing the untouched seals of the bishop who consecated them.

WONDERING IF BYNG'S ACTION AIDED LIBERALS

Daily Herald Says Governor-General's Action Was Decisive Factor.

TARIFFS DISPROVED.

Refusal To Dissolve Parliament Was Important Constitutional Development.

LONDON, Sept. 17, — (United Press.)—How far the action of Lord Byng in the matter of dissolution of the parliament helped Mackenzie King to achieve his victory, is a question that is being raised generally yesterday.

The Daily Herald, spokesman of the Labor party, sees the governor-general's action as a decisive factor in securing victory, and says the Canadian people have decreed by their votes at the election that the governor-general of Canada must no longer regard himself as free to accept or reject the advice of his prime minister, but must, under all circumstances, accept such advice, whatever must be his private opinion, and must act upon it." The Herald calls this an important constitutional development.

Liberal Opinion.

The Daily News, organ of the Lloyd George Liberals, says that the inference to be drawn from the result of the election in Canada is disapproval of high tariffs and also of Lord Byng's attitude in refusing to grant dissolution upon the request of Mackenzie King. Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard also said last night that the election is a serious blow to Lord Byng, but the Express, Lord Beaverbrook's morning paper, emphasizes the fact that the Dominion election was fought upon domestic issues.

All other papers maintain that Lord Byng's action had nothing whatever to do with the result and that interest in the constitutional issue declined as the campaign progressed. Most of them point out that the election was won and lost on such issues as tariffs, the Hudson Bay railroad and the reaction of the voters to the customs scandal.

Devotion To Empire.

In official quarters, the point is emphasized that the idea that Lord Byng's action influenced the election is regarded as nonsense. They point out that during the campaign both Meighen and Mackenzie King vied with one another in expressions of devotion to the British Empire, and the result of the election merely shows the determination of the Canadian people to have stable government.

Much speculation is rife as to whether Mackenzie King will be able to attend the imperial conference, even if he wants to do so. The Ottawa correspondent of the Daily News says that King will try "to escape from going to the imperial conference."

LADIES' WORK IS ATTRACTIVE

Work Done By Old Ladies Is Particularly Pleasing.

CAKES ATTRACT MEN.

The exhibit of Ladies' Work, shown in the upper room of the Main Building, and supplemented this year by a very attractive demonstration of Domestic Science skill, is exceptionally good, and there is plenty of interest for men and women alike in the large, bright room, which has been made very pretty this year through the efforts of the ladies in charge, the Misses Minnie Higgins and Mary Elliott, who have evidently spent considerable time in arranging the dainty yellow and black paper curtains which made the windows decorative adjuncts to the enclosure, and in placing the baskets of flowers and asparagus ferns and white paper coverings. The usual dainty "V" posters also form part of the decorations of the walls.

An exhibit of especial interest is that of work done by old ladies, many of whom are residents of the Peterborough Home, with one particularly fine piece of work in the double collar executed by an old lady of seventy-six years of age, and done entirely by candle-light.

In the exhibit of work done by elderly ladies are also some very fine pieces by Mrs. (Dr.) Gordon, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. J. D. Richardson, and who took first prize in crochet work done by ladies over seventy years of age.

"You can't tear them away from it," was the comment of one lady over the absorbed attention of several male visitors, whose noses were glued to the wire-netting separating them from the display of home-made cooking, which boasts of some very fine specimens of bread, pastry and cakes. Preserves and pickles in jars also make a noble showing.

The usual exhibit of fine needlework and dainty embroidery is on view in the upper room, and the vagaries of the mode are apparent in this section, as in every other walk of life.

Heavy embroideries, which formerly were "all the rage," and eyelet work and even tatting, are now not nearly so popular as formerly Work of the "lazy daisy" type appears to be in the foreground when judging is to be done.

The Household Science Departments of the Public Schools have on view some exceedingly good work in finely wroughts mall garments and embroideries, and the boys of the Manual Training Sections also have an exhibit all their own which demonstrates the excellent training they receive in this branch or education.

There is an excellent showing of painting in oils and water colors, by amateurs, and an unique piece of work in a black, ebony-like, wooden table, carved beautifully, with three legs representing elephants' heads, complete with ivory tusks and flapping ears.

The quilts on view here are an interesting portion of the exhibit, with old and modern versions of this aid to winter comfort. The antique type of "Log Cabin" quilt has a cosy look and there is interest in the single and double stitching of the "old Irish chain." The spreads on view, too, are notable, with a lovely sample of Italian needlework in the spread exhibited by Joseph Longo, a fish-net piece done in broad stitching of rose-pink silk, with cherubs and mottoes and Greek key designs in its entertaining unfolding.

Some of the braided rugs are very interesting, particularly the samples done carefully in colored rags, and there are lovely things in hand-painted pieces for milady's wear, including a shawl and scarf, the latter painted in butterflies, and both finished with heavy white silk fringe, There is also a pretty collection of finely embroidered sheets.

Behind one of the wire screens are several examples of careful fretwork, including a tiny model of a clock and a photograph frame, and in one corner is a white and cream supply of babies' wear, in bonnets and jackets and slippers of fine wool, buggy cushions and covers.

FISHERMEN'S RACE LIKELY TO BE HELD

Desire For Renewal Strong Along Nova Scotia Coast.

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept. 17 (Canadian Press).—The Halifax Herald, sponsors of the International Fishermen's race, carried the following to-day:

"It is now practically certain that the Nova Scotia fishing fleet race for the Halifax Herald trophy will be held this fall, likely early in October.

"Word from Lunenburg County is to the effect that the desire for renewal of the Nova Scotia fleet race is strong there, and it is confidently expected that satisfactory arrangements will be made to hold the contest."

SCHOONER SINKS.

Seven Men Brought Ashore at Nantucket By Coast Guard.

NANTUCKET, Mass., Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press).—The schooner Rebecca R. Douglass was sunk in Pollock Rip Slue, Nantucket Sound, in collision with the steamer Eastern Crown last night. Seven men were brought ashore from the wreck to-day by a coastguard boat.

OPENED EXHIBITION.

ROWELL'S NAME MENTIONED FOR CUSTOMS POST

One of Most Important Portfolios To Be Assigned By King.

OTHER MINISTERS.

Maritime Representation in Cabinet Still To Be Settled.

OTTAWA, Sept. 17 (Canadian Press).—One of the most important Cabinet posts to be filled by the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King when he takes over the Premiership next week will be that of Minister of Customs. Reorganization of this Department is now under way. The Liberal Government of Mr. King, as well as the Government of Premier Meighen, stands pledged to a thorough clean-up of the Customs service, and Mr. King will probably want an outstanding man to undertake the work.

The name of the Hon. N. W. Rowell, who was a member of the Union Government, is mentioned as a possibility for the Customs portfolio. Others from Ontario who may be selected for appointment, with or without portfolio, are W. D. Euler, James Malcolm and the Hon. Vincent Massey.

The date of the opening of Parliament is still a matter of conjecture, but gossip favors the latter part of November.

The Ministers of the last Liberal Government have been summoned to Ottawa by Mr. King. Several are already in the capital, and it is expected that by Monday all will be present.

The formation of the new Cabinet will involve several changes. Cabinet representation from New Brunswick and Nova Scotia will have to be settled. In addition to the Departments of Customs and National Defence, the Departments of Trade and Commerce and Immigration probably will be under new Ministers after Mr. King takes office.

SUING TIRE FIRMS.

Judge Finds Two Men Own Patents Used By Most Companies.

TRENTON, N.J., Sept. 17 (Canadian Press). — An avalanche of suits involving millions of dollars will be set in motion against leading tire manufacturers throughout Canada, the United States and other countries, as a result of an interlocutory decree handed down in the Federal District Court here yesterday by Judge Joseph L. Bodine.

The decree disposing of the suit of the de Laski and Thropp Circular Woven Tire Company against the Murray Rubber Company, declares that de Laski and Thropp possess full rights to a patented tire-making machine, which, the inventors maintain, is being used without license by fully 85 per cent. of tire factories.

NEW YORK JOINS DRAINAGE FIGHT

Will Intervene In Suit Entered By State of Michigan.

LANSING, Mich., Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press.)— The State of New York to-day joined Michigan in an effort to prevent the alleged illegal diversion of Great Lakes water through the Chicago drainage canal. O. E Ferris, Deputy Attorney General of New York, following a conference with Andrew B. Dougherty, Attorney General of Michigan, announced he will ask the United States' Supreme Court for permission to intervene as a party to the Michigan suit against the Chicago sanitary district and the State of Illinois.

GLADIOLI LEAD FLOWER SHOW

Fine Displays Made By Many Growers at Exhibition.

SPLENDID SHOW.

"One of the finest showings of flowers in some years," is the verdict of judges and patrons alike with regard to the Flower Show on view in the flower tent at the Exhibition this season The good flower season has been kind to the exhibitors this year, with one exception, possibly, in Mr Joseph Grierson, who was somewhat disappointed when an early frost took the bloom from some of his largest dahlias, all ready for the big show However, Mr. Grierson has little cause for complaint, because his non-competitive showing of dahlias is one of the interesting portions of the show, the lovely large specimens reposing on their lace-paper frills forming a very interesting exhibit.

In the big tent, where a fortuitous placing of one of the amplifiers brings pleasant music to mingle with the scent of the flowers, the gladioli reign supreme. The rise to favor of these lovely blooms has been swift in recent years, and with their aptitude for new varieties and their exquisite appearance, they bid fair to hold the centre of the stage for many seasons to come.

Someone has said that a flower without a perfume is like a woman without a soul, and although several admirers claim that the gladiolus has a faint perfume, it is almost indiscernible to the average nostril. But these "Ladies without a soul,' "Les Dames sans ame," as our French neighbors would gracefully phrase it, spread their lovely petticoats of many tints and continue to blossom in their odd, one-sided way, holding indisputably the centre of the stage. Here are the "Golden Measure," with its clear wine yellow, the pale exquisite pink of "Marshal Foch," and the odd pinkish mauve of the "Pride of Goshen," the salmon pink of the "Salmon Beauty," the rosy purple of the "Fairfax," the purity of "L'Immacole," the deep carmine of the "Challenger," the tall whiteness of the "Imperator" and the yellow-pink loveliness of Mrs Leon Douglas."

First prize in the showing for amateur growers of gladioli goes this year to Norman Andrew, with second and third awards to S. T. Harris and F. Hall, Romaine street. Among the professionals A. E Prest took first prize, the Cedar Gardens of Whitby, second, and J. H. Callander third.

Professionals exhibiting ten varieties of named gladioli, with two spikes in each plate, saw first prize go to A. E. Prest, with second to W. Young and third to J. Grierson.

Groups of palms, ferns and flowers arranged in the centre of the enclosure were exceptionally attractive, the first prize being awarded to Jordan Brothers, and the second to the Peterborough Floral Company. Messrs. Jordan Brothers also took first prizes for flowing fuchsias, ferns, geraniums and coleus.

The children have a nice showing of blooms, but the directors expressed themselves as disappointed over the absence of specimen plants, only two entries being recorded in this section, which is designed to bring into prominence the pet plant of the householder.

One of the interesting sections is the table covered with examples of Mr. J. H. Callander's cacti, prominent among them the silky beard or the "old man" variety, the eristate monstrosity with its spiny coat and the fish hook cactus, with an effective centerpiece in a miniature rockery.

Flower collections, both wild and garden variety, are interesting here, and run the whole gamut of the late summer garden, with a splendid variety on view this season. A few late roses and sweet peas are on view in vases, and there are many acters and verbenas, zinnias, those queer blooms with their odd half-tones of brick and terra cotta, of burnt umber and maroon and magenta. There are African ball marigolds, in orange and lemon yellow hues, snapdragon and geraniums and pansies with their friendly faces, and scabiosa and salpiglossis, those dainty flowers with ugly names. A novelty is the Spanish coxcomb, fan-shaped, in dull green and red.

Exceptionally lovely are the designs on view here, with some outstanding pieces in the anchor composed of button white asters and brown velvet pansies, with a motif in two pale pink roses. Another design is developed in a wreath of purple asters, studded with white lily heads. There are baskets of pale pink and yellow roses, alternated by maidenhair fern and gypsophila, and one particularly effective basket, with the three flowers used chosen in almost exactly the same shade, is made up of vermilion zinnias, gladioli and salvia.

THE STOCK MARKET

Fine Weather In Canada Causes Weakness In Wheat

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 17 (Canadian Press).—Wheat values broke sharply on the Board of Trade today during the early dealings when a flood of selling orders were dumped into the pit and found few buyers. More favorable conditions in the Canadian North-West acted as an offset to unexpected strength in Liverpool.

Starting ½ to 1 1-8 lower, wheat values quickly underwent an additional drop all around. Higher temperatures and lack of rain led to selling of corn, which opened ½c to 3-4c down, and continued to lose ground. Oats sympathized with wheat and corn, while provisions were about steady.

The market here failed to respond to the firmness of Liverpool cables, where prices advanced sharply on short covering induced by reports of snow in Canada, together with firm freight rates and light offerings of United States wheat.

Weakness in the Winnipeg market and reports of clearing weather in the Canadian North-West acted as a counter balance to firmness abroad, and proved to be depressing factors on the market here.

C.P.R. Offers Bonds To Pay For Construction

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press.) — Canadian Pacific Railway, through the National City Company, the Guaranty Company, and the Bank of Montreal, to-day offered $20,000,000 of twenty year four and a half per cent. collateral trust bonds at 96 1-2 and accrued interest to yield 4.77 per cent.

The proceeds will be used for the payment of steamships now under construction, the building of branch lines, and other corporate purposes. This issue will have priority over $100,148,537 preference stock and $260,000,000 of common shares, according to the Morning World.

Selling Orders Cause Drop At New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 17 (Canadian Press).—A sudden flood of selling orders, released by bear traders, swept over the Stock Market before mid-day to-day and carried the prices of scores of issues down from two to ten points below yesterday's final quotations. The break followed an opening period of strength.

There was nothing in the day's news to account for the heavy liquidation. While the market has been very sensitive to a possible increase in Federal reserve re-discount rates, the fact that the directors of the New York Bank met yesterday and voted no change in the four per cent. rates was thought to have relieved, at least temporarily, the uneasiness over the credit situation.

Amusement stocks which have been bid up in spectacular fashion during the past few weeks, were the first targets of bear operators. Warner Brothers Pictures A, which rose from a low of 12 to high of 60¼ a few days ago, broke 10 points below yesterday's final quotation to 52½. Fox Films A fell back three points.

High-grade indutrials suffered with specialties. General Motors, after touching a new high of 154¼ for the present stock, sold down to 151 1-8 before it encountered strong buying.

United Steel Common was quickly carried down from 147 7-8 to 144 1-8, rallying moderately from low level by early afternoon. Among other issues to sink 3 to 5 points below yesterday's closing figures were Dupont, Pullman, International Combustion, Hudson, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Mack Trucks, Continental Baking A, Montgomery Ward, Woolworth, and Atlantic Coastline.

Selling Active In Toronto Most Stocks Going Down

TORONTO, Sept. 17 (Canadian Press).—Bear selling was noticeable all along the line on the Toronto Stock Exchange today with most active issues closing considerably lower at noon. The market was active and spread over a broad list.

Industrial Alcohol eased 5-8 to 22, Gooderham and Worts 3-8 to 34 3-4, Imperial Oil 7-8 to 36, Brazilian 1 1-2 to 114 1-4, Abitibi 1 1-4 to 94 3-4, Massey Harris Common 3-4 to 67 1-2, International Nickel 1 to 36 1-2, International Petrol 1-4 to 33 3-4, and British Columbia Fishing 1-2 to 73 1-2, while the outstanding feature of the bearish tendency was Consolidated Smelters' decline of 5 3-4 to 241 1-4. Among the stocks which showed some strength were Montreal Power up 1 1-4 to 73, Canners Preferred up 1-4 to 67, Loblaw 2 points higher to 43, Dominion Stores 1 up to 62, McColl 1 higher to 24 1-2. Canadian Oil Preferred 1-2 higher to 113 1-2, and Noranda up 15 cents to 18.40. In the banks Commerce lost 1 to 220, while Dominion gained 1 1-4 to 211 1-4, and Royal 1-2 to 253.

Prices Stronger To-day Mining Exchange Active

TORONTO, Sept. 17. — (Canadian Press.) — Lakeshore made a partial recovery of its losses of yesterday on the standard board to-day with a jump of 35 cents per share to 13.95, Noranda also closed 15 cents higher at 18.40. Trading was fairly active and prices were generally stronger

Hollinger advanced ten cents to 19.10, Dome five to 10.95, Wright Hargreaves five to 8.75, Baldwin one-half to six, West Dome three-quarters to 21 1-2, Keeley three to 1.60, and Towagmac eight to 3.30. Teck Hughes declined two cents to 4.55, Vipond one to 1.73, Castle Trethewey one to 1.41, and Nipissing four to 6.11.

VINDICATION FOR MEAT EATERS

Score one point in favor of the meat eaters. After a thorough physical examination of Vilhjalmur Stefansson, a Chicago physician is quoted in Popular Science Monthly as saying that the famous Arctic explorer was in exceptionally fine physical condition despite his exclusive meat diet while in the Far North.

"Neither Stefansson nor any of his men, so far as we could determine, suffered any ill-effects from long-continued meat diet," says the report of the examining physician.

DELORO ENTERS O.B.A.A. FINALS

SCORE 17-1.

MARMORA, Sept. 17—At Deloro on Thursday afternoon in the dullest of weather Manager Elliott's Black Caps took the second game from Barrie by the total score of 17 to 1. Through this comfortable win Deloro is, for the first time, a finalist for the intermediate championship of Ontario, and will meet the winner of the Bridgeburg-Leamington play off in the final struggle. Despite the uncertainty of the game being played, a remarkably good crowd of fans from the district showed up to urge the local team on.

Shea started as pitcher for Deloro with Quinn receiving. Emnes walked. Dobson walked. Small singles scoring Emnes. Dobson out at the plate attempting to get home on a passed ball. Lynch fanned. Dyer flied to left, retiring the side.

Small on the rubber and Thompson catching were Barrie's opening battery. Bond singled through short, A. Quinn tripled, scoring Bond. Jack Bunted and was safe on first. Jack stole second. Ralph singled, scoring A. Quinn, Ralph stole second. J. Quinn hit to short, forcing Jack at the plate. Quinn stole second. Brown singled scoring Ralph. Hughes singled scoring Quinn and Brown. Burton here replaced Small on the mound. Regan hit to pitcher forcing a double play.

In the second innings Burton got a nice two bagger but no score materialized. Deloro duplicated their first inning's performance. Shea doubled, and Bond was safe on Dobson's error. A. Quinn walked, filling the bases. Jack's single scored Shea, Bond and Quinn. Ralph doubled scoring Jack. J. Quinn out at first. Brown safe on Small's error, Ralph scoring. Hughes walked, Regan doubled forcing Brown at the plate, Shea fanned.

In the scoreless third brilliant features were Bond's running catch and a double play by the home team. In the fourth both teams were again blanked.

In the seventh frame Shea was safe on Jennette's error but was caught off first. Bond singled, stole second, and reached third on a passed ball. A Quinn out at first, Bond registering. Jack singled, taking second on a passed ball. Ralph safe on Emnes' error, Jack scoring. J. Quinn out at first.

In the eighth A. Quinn made a nice pick up and throw to first retiring Burton. Regan hit a beautiful homer to right field, scoring Hughes. The ninth innings was soon disposed of, the game lasting two hours and a quarter.

The Roehampton polo ground in England was recently the scene of an amusing golf match, played by airmen, flying at a height of a hundred feet from the earth. The "links" had been prepared by drawing a small white circle on the ground, which, with a flag stuck in the middle of it, represented the hole. Golf clubs were dispensed with; instead of ordinary balls, each pilot was provided with three small bags filled with flour. The object of the game was to "hole out" in as few shots as possible, by dropping the bag into the middle of the white circle while flying over it.

The battle between Boston and Philadelphia to keep out of the cellar has now become a regular feature of the National League season.

IMPERIAL GASOLINE
With ETHYL Brand of Anti-Knock Compounds
ETHYL GASOLINE CORPORATION
Knocks out that "Knock"

A NEW AND ENTIRELY DIFFERENT TYPE OF GASOLINE

IMPERIAL Ethyl Gasoline—on sale now for the first time—is science's latest and greatest contribution to the comfort and satisfaction of car owners.

It is the answer of the combined resources of the petroleum and automotive industries to the fifteen-year old problem of producing a motor fuel that will bring out the true power and efficiency of the modern automobile engine.

Imperial Ethyl Gasoline is an epochal achievement—fully as important to the motoring world as such notable discoveries as the balloon tire and four wheel brake.

You do not need to be an expert or a scientist to measure the miracle of power and improved engine performance revealed in your car when you drive it on Imperial Ethyl Gasoline.

You feel the difference immediately, because this wonderful new fuel is better than the best gasoline you have ever used.

Imperial Ethyl Gasoline unleashes all the latent power of your car—enables it to streak up the stiff hills "on high"—gives your engine a quiet rhythm and instant response—makes your motor absolutely knockless—gives you quicker starting than you've ever experienced.

Imperial Ethyl Gasoline is a unique and wonderful product—obtained by combining "Ethyl Brand of Anti-Knock Compound" with a very special grade of gasoline. The Ethyl ingredient is a product developed by seven years of research in the laboratory of the General Motors Corporation.

No other gasoline ingredient compares with Ethyl Brand of Anti-Knock Compound. Manufactured by the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation, this remarkable product cannot be successfully imitated. It cannot be duplicated. It is absolutely unique and stands alone as a new discovery.

Ethyl Brand of Anti-Knock Compound increases the efficiency of gasoline because it controls the rate of combustion. Every time the spark jumps a powerful sustained explosion results. Power waste—as indicated by knocks—is eliminated.

The introduction of Imperial Ethyl Gasoline at this season is particularly timely. Nights are getting cool—Winter will soon be here. Imperial Ethyl gives the motorist entire freedom from those troubles which he has formerly encountered with the approach of cold weather.

It's well worth the 4c. per gallon more we charge for it.

IMPERIAL OIL LIMITED

CAUTION!

Do not confuse this wonderful new fuel with the many so-called "Anti-Knock" Gasolines on the market. And do not be misled by other gasolines purposely colored red to resemble Ethyl.

Our well-known Premier Gasoline has as much "Anti-Knock" quality as any gasoline made or sold in Canada with the sole exception of Imperial Ethyl Gasoline. The latter is more than a gasoline—it's a motor fuel of super-efficient qualities.

For your protection, no dealer or service station will be permitted to sell Imperial Ethyl Gasoline through any pump that does not conspicuously display the official Imperial Ethyl Trade-Mark as reproduced in this advertisement.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Cleveland cut New York's lead to 4½ games yesterday by downing the Yankees in a double bill, 2 to 1 and 5 to 0. In the first game Levsen outpitched Reuther and won his own game with a single in the ninth inning. Duckeye held New York to two hits in the second game, and although he passed ten batters and hit another he was effective with men on bases, New York having twelve men left on base. Ruth was passed twice in the first game and four times in the second. Although Levsen and Reuther each passed five men in the first game each was sufficiently effective to neutralize his lack of control. Levsen allowed but two hits and the only score off him was the result of a wild throw by Spurgeon to the Cleveland dugout in an effort to complete a double play. That was in the sixth inning of the first game when Gehrig doubled and Ruth walked with one out and Gehrig scored on the error when Meusel forced Ruth.

Cleveland scored its first run on a pass to Summa and a double by Lutzke in the second inning. With the score tied in the last half of the ninth, Autry, catching for Cleveland, because L. Sewell, the regular receiver, got a damaged hand, led off with a single. Lutzke sacrificed and Myatt, running for Autry, scored when Levsen proceeded to win his own game with a single to centre.

In the second game Pennock allowed but one Indian to reach first in the first six innings, but in the seventh round, the Indians bunched his off him and drove him from the box. Spurgeon led off with a single. Speaker followed with a double. A wild pitch scored Spurgeon and sent Speaker to third when he scored on Burns' single to centre. Burns took second on a passed ball and scored on J. Sewell's single to right. Summa sacrificed and Autry passed. Pennock threw wide to third in an effort to head off Sewell and the latter scored. In came Myles Thomas to replace Pennock. Lutzke greeted the relief hurler with a double and Austry scored.

Washington took two games from Detroit yesterday in the second of two consecutive double headers bringing the series for the two days to three won and one lost. The Senators took the first game, 3 to 2 when Stoner weakened in the seventh and won the second game 5 to 4 by getting to George Dauss with three hits in the eighth.

Philadelphia and St. Louis divided a double header, the Browns taking the first, 1 to 0, and the Athletics the second, 5 to 1.

The Browns got only four hits in the first contest, but Sisler's triple in the sixth, followed by Schang's single, gave them one run which was enough to win.

The Athletics pounded Ballou for twelve hits in the first eight innings of the second game. Poole hit a homer with one on in the sixth. Philadelphia made a triple play in the first inning, Gray to Wamby to Poole.

Chicago hit opportunely behind the wildness of Slim Harriss and defeated Boston 6 to 4, making it two straight in the series. The visitors outhit the locals but Blakenship tighened up in the pinches.

Newark Gets Close Decision in Twin Bill With Reading.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17 (Canadian Press)—The Baltimore Orioles took two from Jersey City yesterday while the Newark Bears were doing the same thing with Reading.

Baltimore out-hit the Jersey City Club in its own park to take the first game 7 to 5, while the second developed into a tight contest resulting in a goose-egg and a single tally for the Orioles.

Newark got a close decision of 6 to 5 over Reading in their first contest but the Bear batters ran away with the second, 10 to 2.

Toronto-Syracuse and Rochester-Buffalo double headers were postponed because of rain.

ELIMINATION SERIES

Brighton Greys to Play Home Team for the Clarke Cup.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 17. — Brighton Greys will clash with Charlie Davidson's 1926 edition of ball players at the Agricultural Grounds this afternoon at 3.15 in the first of home and home games, in the elimination series for the Clarke Cup, emblematic of the championship of Northumberland County. It will be the local's first game of the year, and fans are anxious for a glimpse of the boys in action. "Toey" Ibey, the youthful High School pitcher, will be sent against the hard-hitting Greys, and, given good support, should cause the lakeshore outfit plenty of trouble. Either the veteran Armour or Decarrall will be on the receiving end, and the rest of the team will be a mixture of youngsters and veterans, including Blakely, Shilling law, Cowell, Rev. Daniel, Eagleson, Maybee and Cook. A good crowd should turn out and encourage the boys.

CARDINALS TIE WITH CINCINNATI FOR FIRST PLACE

Phillies Lose Double Bill to Cards at Quaker City.

GIANTS GOOSE-EGGED

Robins Defeat Pirates After Losing Five Straight to Reds.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Although the Cincinnati Reds stretched their winning streak to eight in a row and goose-egged the Giants 3-0, yesterday, the St. Louis Cardinals went into a tie with the Reds in the pennant race by taking two games from the Phillies at Philadelphia.

Hendrick's men performed in impeccable style, committing no errors, but two Giant mistakes, one in the first and another in the fourth inning, accounted for scores.

Frisch of the Giants help up the game in the fourth when he was knocked out in a collision with Terry over Dressen's long one. He recovered and returned to his post after Dressen had taken two bases. Critz and Hargrave were given free passage by Barnes, filling the bases. Ford then poked a single into left, driving in Dressen and Critz for the final tallies of the game.

The Cards smothered the Phillies in the first Philadelphia game, 23 to 3 and took the 2nd game in easy fashion by the score of 10 to 2. St. Louis' 23 runs is the season's record in the senior league. The previous record for the season was made by Cincinnati, 21 runs, also against the Philadelphia team on August 11.

The first game was poorly played and the second was little better. The only pleasure the fans appeared to get out of the double header was a dispute between members of the Philadelphia team and Umpire Klem in the sixth inning of the second game. Catcher Wilson was put out of the game for making a protest to Klem and in the argument that followed manager Fletcher was also sent from the bench.

Then a yellow sign bearing the word "Catfish Klem" was hung from a window of the clubhouse and Umpire Klem held up the game until it was removed. Who hung the sign there could not be learned by the Umpire.

There was an attendance of about 8,000 and many in the crowd jeered as the Philly pitchers were sent from the mound one after another in the first contest. Six hurlers were used in the first game. It became a rout in the third inning when the pennant chasing Cardinals scored twelve runs. Knight, Kelly, Baecht and Pierce were batted from the box. Rambo retired the side finally and stuck it out until the sixth inning when Taber went in and finished the game. He yielded two runs in the ninth inning.

Rhem pitched for the Cardinals, and was relieved in the fifth only because his team was well in front and because Manager Hornsby deemed it wise to have his star twirler. Herman Bell, who replaced him, gave up only one hit, a single by Huber, who pinch hit in the ninth. The Cards made 22 hits and the Phillies used 22 men.

The second game was listless. Clarence Mitchell held the visitors fairly well for five innings, but was knocked out in the sixth when Pierce finished the game. Reinhart held the Phils safe all the way while the St. Louis team were piling up their ten runs.

The Brooklyn Robins found their first worm in six days, defeating Pittsburgh 2 to 1 yesterday, after their loss of five straight games to Cincinnati. The game was a duel all the way through, decided by two timely clouts of Marriott, Brooklyn third sacker.

The Pirates made their one and only bid for honors in the first inning when Cuyler stole second after forcing Waner, reached third on a wild throw by O'Neill and crossed on Wright's single.

Brooklyn tied it in the fourth on Marriot's triple, driving in Herman. The winning tally was scored in the 8th when Marriott again hit, driving in Felix.

The Buccanneers lots a run when Wright's long drive to centre was adjudged a three bagger. He had crossed the plate before the ball could be extricated from beneath a tarpaulin by the fence and was ordered back to third.

Boston made it five straight victories today by defeating Chicago 4 to 1. R. Smith held the Cubs to five hits.

TILDEN LOSES NATIONAL CROWN AFTER SIX YEARS

BRILLIANT RALLY

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Sept. 17 (Canadian Press).—William Tatem Tilden II., king of American tennis for six straight years, was toppled from his throne yesterday by a stripling from France, in as sensational a struggle as any national championship tournament has ever witnessed.

Henri Cochet, 24 year old French star, who was not considered formidable enough to play for his country in the Davis Cup singles, accomplished the downfall of the famous title holder in five sets after a spectacular, pulse-stirring battle that was in doubt until its closing moments. The scores were 6—8, 6—1, 6—3, 1—6, 8—6.

A crowd of more than 10,000 spectators in the big West Side Club's stadium had hardly recovered from the shock of Tilden's defeat when another flashing French racquet steped to the fore to eliminate William M. Johnston, the veteran little Californian, who has been the champion's foremost rival and his partner in Davis Cup triumphs, over seen straight seasons.

Jean Borotra, the "Bounding Basque," and holder of the Wimbledon Championship, brought about the day's closing upset with a smashing rally that carried him to victory over the tiring Johnston in five sets, decided by scores of 3—6, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4.

Altogether it was as dark and gloomy a day as tennis in the United States has ever known for Rene Lacoste, third of the major French threats, forged his way to the semi-finals by overcoming the United States Davis Cup captain, Richard Norris Williams, in straight sets, 6—0, 6—3, 8—6.

Vincent Richards, the youngest of the United States "Big Four," was the only one of the quartet to escape defeat in the French onslaught, and now stands out as Uncle Sam's sole hope of keeping the national tennis title. The convincing manner in which Richards disposed of Jacques Bugnon at 6—2, 6—1, 6—2, convinced observers that the blonde-haired New York is at the top of his brilliant game.

Today Richards faces Borotra, most furious drives into placements and smothering his rival's usually powerful service. It was a fitting climax in the final game to have Cochet, with a series of marvellous recoveries, angle Tilden's returns for three straight placements that decided the match.

GENE TUNNEY SELECTS SECONDS FOR COMING CHAMPIONSHIP BOUT

Gibson, Fink and Brix to be in Challenger's Corner.

BRONSON CHIEF AID

Retired Lightweight Champion Unable to Accept as Aid.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Sept. 17.—The fourth and fifth men who will be in the opposite corner to Jack Dempsey were named yesterday in the camp of Gene Tunney. In addition to Tunney, Billy Gibson, his manager, and Lou Fink, his trainer, the challenger's corner will be occupied by Jimmy Bronson and Lou Brix.

The acquisition of Bronson and Brix to act as seconds was negotiated last night, and their names and credentials were sent by special enussary to the Pennsylvania State Boxing Commission, which will meet in Philadelphia today.

Bronson will serve as the chief second for Tunney in the champion. ship battle, and both Gibson and the challenger sing loud his praises as an adviser. He has appeared in the same ring with Gene before, but never in Tunney's corner. He has refereed bouts in which Gene has fought and he has seconded Gene's opponents, but this will be the first battle in which he has aided and advised the ex-marine.

Brix in Corner Before.

Brix was in Tunney's corner the night he fought Tommy Gibbons and gained his greatest prestige as a contender for the heavyweight title. He has been associated with Billy Gibson in boxing enterprises for fifteen years.

Gibson emphatically denied yesterday that Jack Kearns had been sought to act as a second for Tunney, and added: "If any one has the idea that Paddy Mullins might be in our corner I'll deny that too."

There had been a rumor broadcast to the effect that Dempsey's former manager might be brought in for the psychological effect he might have on the champion.

Gibson will act in an advisory capacity to Tunney during the championship scramble, but Billy has a tendency to forget his duties after the first blow is struck, and after that some one has to be around to advise Billy. Twice when he was acting as a second to Benny Leonard he got so excited that he crushed stop watches in his clenched fist and there are tales of many other antics he has performed under the stress of excitement. However, he will at least start in as an advisor.

Lou Fink will wield the towel, manipulate the sponge and handle the other articles of necessity between rounds. His business will be to send Gene into each succeeding round feeling as near perfect as possible.

Lou Brix will act as a sort of bodyguard, with his post at the foot of the steps leading up into Gene's corner of the ring. In case of necessity he will take charge of Gibson.

Leonard Unable to Accept.

Benny Leonard was asked to act as a second for Tunney, but because the retired lightweight champion of the world had previously contracted to cover the fight from the press box he had to decline.

Tunney lost a bitter battle yesterday, but it wasn't fought in the ring. Dempsey wasn't his opponent and the weapons weren't five-ounce gloves. So it didn't matter. The scene of conflict was the Glen Brook Country Club. Tunney's opponent was Billy Gibson and the match was fought with midirons and mashies.

Gibson beat the challenger by two strokes in a nine-hole golf match, which provided practically the only workout for Tunney yesterday. The other exercise he indulged in was a six-mile jaunt over the country roads.

Gene plans five more workouts in the ring before he dons his purple trunks and steps into the roped arena against the champion. He will rest today, box a few rounds on Saturday and Sunday and lay off on Monday. Tuesday he will make his last public appearance before the residents of the Poconos and Wednesday he will depart for Philadelphia to keep the most important engagement of his meteoric career.

The prognostication of the experts who have followed the training of the challenger and the champion are varied, but there is one point on which all seem to agree; the bout will be a short one. Some expect Tunney to fight away from the murderous onslaught of the champion, for two or three rounds and then bend every effort to finish it quickly and decisively. Some are of the opinion that Dempsey will end the battle with one blow.

Tunney himself says that he is going in with the idea of fighting an aggressive fight from the moment the first gong sounds until he hears the referee toll the last of the fatal ten seconds over his opponent.

Just three years Wednesday Dempsey defended his crown against the swinging attack of Luis Firpo. The opinion here is that a repetition of that frenzied affair isn't far away.

The Nippon Club, of Ogden, Utah, has won the intermountain Japanese baseball championship this year, with a record of twelve victories and two defeats.

THIRD LEAGUE TALK PERSISTS

Not Being Taken Seriously by Leaders of Big Leagues.

MANY DIFFICULTIES

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(United Press).—Reports of a third major league baseball league, although they come from fairly responsible sources, are not being taken seriously by practical baseball men.

Two stories have been told recently. One that money outside organized baseball was being interested in a proposition to start an outlaw league and the other that major league club owners were considering a third league of their own.

Neither are new stories and the possibility of a third league seems even less practical than it would have been during the prime of Babe Ruth when baseball was drawing much better than it does now.

It was reported that Johnny Evers and several other respected and honorable men had been interested in organizing a league that would include the major league towns like Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit and Pittsburgh, where there is at present only one major league club, and some of the bigger cities in the International League such as Toronto, Buffalo, Newark or Baltimore.

As an outlaw venture a third league looks to be a sure loss. The experience that the New York Yankees had several years ago and that the Cincinnati Reds are having now in finding a place for a new park presents one of the big problems.

A club owner can't walk into a real estate office and order a lot for a ball park and when he does get it he has to have plenty of money to build a modern park. Organized baseball, with its own money, of course, would not have the park problem. It no doubt could be arranged to have the Cincinnati, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Cleveland parks used for two teams as the park in St. Louis is now shared by the Browns and the Cardinals.

The financial problem, without doubt, is tremendous but the practical dififculties to be faced are even more discouraging.

Where would they get the players?

The supply of good players isn't sufficient now to meet the demand of the sixteen major league clubs and supposing that eight new clubs would have to be stocked with 25 players each. And it must be remembered that, even if they were all working together the big hearted magnates would not break up a good team like the Yankees, the Athletics, Indians, Pirates, Reds or Cardinals to promote another league.

It is quite certain that sufficient players couldn't be attracted from organized baseball to start an outlaw league. Some of the good players might jump as they learned from the experience of stars who jumped to the Federal League years ago that they can always get back into organized baseball if they are good enough to be wanted by some club owner.

The players are rather restive now and it might be that outlaw promoters could find a number of fine players interested. The treatment that Max Carey, Eddie Moore Babe Adams and Carson Bigbee and the riding Frank Frisch received from the New York Giants started other players talking again about "slave contracts" and the possibility of forming some kind of protective organization.

The formation of a players union has been discussed off and on for several years but nothing ever came of the talk because of premature publicity. But the club owners are giving the players more cause to act by the threats for the wholesale reduction of salaries this winter.

At a recent wedding in the English village of Chertsey, the bride groom, the bride, her father, her bridesmaid, the clergyman, and the verger were all bellringers.

JONES LEADING CHICK EVANS IN GOLF TOURNEY

PLAYS SUPERB GAME

Will Oppose Francis Ouimet in Push for Final Round.

SHORT HILLS, N.J., Sept. 17 (Canadian Press) — Bobby Jones carried on yesterday through another bitterly fought duel to triumph over stouthearted Chick Evans, of Chicago, in the drive toward his third successive national amateur golf championship.

For a time during the 34 hole struggle between the veteran of many links campaigns and the 24 year old master from Atlanta, Bobby's crown swayed uncertainly. For hole after hole a rejuvenated Evans played such superb golf that it seemed to a record gallery that the champion of ten years ago was about to bring off one of the most sensational upsets in links history. But in the end, youth, power and confidence triumphed to give Bobby a great victory at 3 and 2.

Jones and Evans finished their gripping battle just behind another bitterly fought match in which the fortunes of the links smiled kindly upon another veteran — Francis Ouimet, of Boston, with a sensational finish after he had been held all square in the first 18 hole round of the 36 hole contest, Ouimet finally shook off the pursuit of Frederick J. Wright, Jr., Massachusetts State champion, to win at 5 and 3.

The verdict brought the bespectacled Boston star abreast of Jones, and today Bobby will oppose another hero of bygone days in his push to enter the final round.

The other match of the semi-finals tomorrow will bring together George Von Elm of Los Angeles, finalist two years ago, against Jones, and George Dawson of Chicago, former Illinois University star Von Elm today overwhelmed Bobby's Atlanta pal, Watts Gunn, 8 and 7, while Dawson triumphed in a gruelling battle against Eddie Held, of St. Louis, 2 and 1.

Rowing is a sport in which the women of Poland excel, and nearly every river town in the country boasts of one or more women's rowing clubs.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

COLLEEN MOORE IN "ELLA CINDERS"

The frolicsome little "Colleen Moore," with her dark mop of hair and her winsome ways, is the heroine of the feature picture, "Ella Cinders," showing at the Capitol Theatre for the last half of this week. Although the little lady has not the scope for her talents that she enjoyed in the gorgeous "Irene" picture, she does some good work as the modern Cinderella in the household of her stepmother and two haughty step-sisters, who require her to do all the hard work and wait on them besides.

The scene is laid in Roseville, whose enterprising Mayor and Fire Chief conduct a beauty contest, the prize being a ticket to Hollywood, with expenses paid. The Fire Chief has peculiar ideas about beauty, and presents the prize to Ella Cinders, whose picture has been snapped by an exasperated photographer, while she is trying to dislodge a fly from her nose. Ella has a beau in the local ice man, but she forsakes him and her unhappy home to make her way to Hollywood, where she breaks into the "jumping flickers" in a fashion peculiarly her own. She gets past a guard into one of the studios and enacts a part in a picture in entirely involuntary style, while a lion offstage spurs her into terror-stricken efforts. Later, the producer of the picture spoils what might have been a good ending by turning the ice man into a college youth, masquerading for a lark, and he and Ella elope in typical fashion, while the lady is supposed to be turning out a picture. It is an entertaining light picture, with a slight touch of draginess in the tempo.—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

RARE SETTING FOR LATEST WESTERN FILM IS OLD EUROPE

Buck Jones Has Novel, Humorous and Thrilling Story for His Latest Starring Picture "The Cowboy and the Countess"

"The Cowboy and the Countess," the Fox Films production starring Buck Jones which opened at the Regent Theatre last night has all the required ingredients of a thrilling Western picture and then some!

The action is swift, sure, natural and logical—and all of the situations are real. So real in fact, that one forgets it is only a picture and feels with the actors as they fight and ride across the screen.

The story is decidedly original, with just enough comedy sprinkled through it to make the production interesting. Buck Jones is Jerry Whipple, the handsome young owner of the Boot Jack Ranch, who follows lovely Elsa Verlaine to Europe. To save his dignity he takes his entire band of cowboys with him, and gives very successful performances in the various capitals of Europe.

Then just when things look blackest for Jerry, Nanette, Elsa's maid, brings him a message from her mistress which galvanizes him into action. His big advantage in Europe comes after his hasty visit to the Verlaine chateau—and the end of the story comes in the midst of thrilling action.

Miss May Cutaker, of New York City, at Rye's Pavilion To-night.

Miss May Cutaker has been the featured dancer of Ned Wayburn's famous dance revue of New York City for the past five seasons. Miss Cutaker is the guest of Peterboro, and has offered her services to Mr. Rye to-night. She will give a series of sensational jazz dancing in costumes. This is something out of the ordinary, and it should prove to be one of the most talked about attractions that has been offered to the dancing public of Peterboro. Pat Burd and his Royal Arcadians will furnish the music. A good time was enjoyed by all who attended the old timers' dance last night, and to-night's feature should prove to make to-night's dance a very enjoyable affair.

AVIATOR JUMPS WHEN GAS FAILS

Unable To Land With Mail Because of Thick Fog.

LANDS SAFELY.

OTTAWA, Ill, September 17. — United Press. — While an airplane spiralled to destruction through a black foggy night, Charles A. Lindbergh air mail pilot, leaped 4000 feet to safety with a parachute last night.

It was one of the few parachute jumps ever made at night, and was said to be the only one at such a great distance.

Lindbergh, flying with mail from St. Louis to Chicago, ran out of gasoline near here. In the fog and darkness he was unable to land

He jumped and drifted to a landing in a corn field ten miles from here. His abandoned plane crashed two miles from him. Three sacks of mail were taken from the splintered wreckage and sent on by train.

The air mail attendants at Maywood landing station had heard Lindbergh's engine above the field for more than an hour but their powerful spot lights were unable to pierce the thick fog to guide him to earth.

Two hours later his gasoline gave out and he turned on the emergency tank, which lasted for twenty minutes. Then he decided to make the jump.

BRYAN, Ohio, Sept. 17 United Press — After vainly trying to land the Cleveland mail in Chicago, Jack Malatzo was forced to fly 160 miles back here last night, unable to make a landing at the Chicago air mail field at Maywood.

WEDDING BELLS.

SHIELD—EDMISON

A very pretty autumn wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Edmison, Smith, on Wednesday, September fifteenth, at two o'clock, when their daughter, Sadie E., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. James H. Shield, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Shield, North Monaghan, Rev. J. W. Gordon of St. Andrew's church officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a gown of ivory georgette over satin and wore an embroidered veil caught with orange blossoms, white kid shoes and stockings to match, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and maiden hair fern. The bride's only ornament was a rope of pearls, the gift of the groom. The young couple were unattended. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Miss Mildred Fowler, cousin of the bride, and during signing of the register Miss M. J. V. Jory sang very sweetly, "O Promise Me."

Immediately after the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served to about seventy guests.

The house was tastefully decorated for the occasion with astors, gladioli and hydrangea. The bride's table was centred by the wedding cake and prettily decorated with smilax, sweet peas and pink candles. Streamers of satin ribbon hung from a white bell above the table and tied in large bows at each corner.

Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Shield left amid shows of confetti and good wishes for a two weeks' motor trip through Western Ontario after which they will reside in North Monaghan. The bride travelled in a blue needle point coat with fur trimming, canton crepe dress to match and small black hat.

MACKENZIE—FISHER.

The marriage was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 15, at 3 o'clock, at the home of the bride, 137 William Street, Lindsay, of Alice Marguerite, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Fisher, and Arthur Whittier Mackenzie, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Mackenzie, Elmsdale, N.S., the Rev. Gordon Holmes officiating. The house was tastefully decorated with gladioli, sweet peas, asters and ferns. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. C. B. Fisher, was attended by her sister, Miss Helen Fisher. Mr. John Fisher, brother of the bride, was best man. Mrs. Neil Gregory played the wedding music, and during the signing of the register Miss Daisy Davidson of Peterboro, cousin of the bride, sang. The bride wore a sleeveless gown of pleated white chiffon, made simply on long lines, with overskirt trimmed with Chantilly lace and embroidered with seed pearls and rhinestones. Her veil of tulle was held by a coronet of Chantilly lace and a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The bridesmaid was dressed in a gown of June rose taffeta with bouffant skirt trimmed with green silk net and French flowers, and black velvet picture hat. She carried Premier roses. Later Mr. and Mrs. Mackenzie left, taking the Saguenay trip, from there motoring to Oxford, N.S., the bride travelling in a smart navy blue frock, with pleated wrap and small black hat with French flowers.—Mail and Empire.

INGHAM—McCONNELL.

A marriage of interest to many in Peterboro and vicinity was solemnized recently in the United Church, Kennedy, Saskatchewan, when Doris Helen, elder daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Herman McConnell became the wife of Bruce Everett Ingham, M.A., LL.B., of Roseneath, Ontario.

The bride was gowned in ivory crepe backed satin, and wore silk veil and wreath of orange blossoms and a rope of pearls (the gift of the groom). Her bouquet was of roses, lily-of-the-valley and maiden hair fern. Her sister, Marjorie Mary, dressed in rose silk crepe de chine, and carrying pink roses, was bridesmaid. The bride's mother wore French blue satin and georgette, and the mother of the groom wore embroidered navy canton crepe.

The ladies of the church had constructed a magnificent arch of flower-decked greenery, culminating in an ivory wedding bell to match the bride's gown. Flowers and shrubs were banked in the alcove.

As the bride entered the church on her father's arm, little white-clad girls strewed flowers in the aisle, and Miss Norma Knight, at the organ rendered Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus." The ceremony was performed by the father of the bride, assisted by Rev. Millar Skea, B.A.

The bridal party left for the East that evening, and will make their home in Owen Sound, where Mr. Ingham is on the staff of the Collegiate Institute.

The bride's travelling costume was a dress of delft blue taffeta silk, with sleeves of embroidered blonde georgette, with blonde shoes and stockings, delft blue charmeuse coat and hat to match.

VOL. LVIII., No. 66 — PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1926 — PRICE THREE CENTS

NATIONAL AGREEMENT IN EFFECT SECURED BY PREMIER BALDWIN IN CONFERENCE WITH OWNERS

He Announces That They Admit Principles It Would Secure.

ADVISES MINERS.

Executive Will Consider Baldwin's Proposals—Cook Not Encouraging.

(Associated Press Cable)

LONDON, Sept 17. — If the British coal miners go back to the mines they may have what they demand—a national agreement—in effect, if not in words.

Premier Baldwin last night assured the miners of government assistance in obtaining the principle of settlement for which they are struggling if they will only admit economic facts and go back to work.

Letter to A. J. Cook.

The Premier's offer, which is contained in a letter to A. J. Cook, general secretary of the Miner's Federation, was drafted at the close of an all-day conference in Downing Street between the Premier and representatives of the owners and of the workers. The offer is regarded in some quarters as a peace formula likely to end the prolonged coal strike.

Premier Baldwin informed the miners through Mr. Cook that he had failed in his efforts to bring the owners into a conference on a national agreement covering hours and wages, but that the mine owners throughout the country were generally willing to admit the principles that such a national agreement would secure.

The Premier, therefore, appealed to the miners to return to work under provisional district agreements, while the Government prepares legislation, which will be pushed through Parliament as soon as it reassembles, to establish a national tribunal of appeal.

To Decide Monday.

The acceptance by the miners of Mr. Baldwin's proposals depends upon a vote of their Executive committee which is to meet on Monday. In any event, it is said, another conference with the Premier will be held to clear up all points in the controversy, after which the national conference of delegates of the miner's union will vote on the matter.

Speaking at Greenwich last night, A. J. Cook was not encouraging about the prospect of a strike settlement. He said: "Unless the terms put forward by the coal owners are changed very much, and unless a national agreement for negotiation and settlement is allowed, we are a long, long way from a settlement of this dispute."

The Westminster Gazette says the prospect of immediate peace in the coal strike is considerably heightened by Premier Baldwin's proposals.

Plays Piano For 105 Hours Sets New Endurance Record

OMAHA, Sept. 18 (Associated Press).—Bud Reynolds, Columbus, O., established a new world record for continuous piano playing when he completed 105 hours there late Thursday night. The former record, 103 hours, was established in San Francisco five years ago.

Reynolds was fed milk and soup by the manager of the cafe where he performed. He fainted last Tuesday, but resumed his playing eight minutes later.

His finger tips were bandaged several times during the endurance test, and he was examined by doctors twice each day. But in spite of these precautions, his finger tips became raw and his wrists and forearms swollen.

Knights of Columbus Entertain Children From Orphanage and Shelter.

FIFTY PRESENT.

The Knights of Columbus once again acted as kindly hosts yesterday to the chidren of the Shelter and the Orphanage, when they convoyed a party of some fifty youngsters to the Exhibition grounds, where through the kindness of President Denne and the directors, they were admitted to the grandstand and through the generosity of the Boyd and Liverman people, given free entry to the Midway shows. This is the second time that the Knights have treated the children in this way. They also gave them ice cream cones, chocolate bars and popcorn, and the enjoyment of the children amply repaid the members for their thoughtfulness. The members of the committee who looked after the youngsters were A. Costello, (chairman), Fathers M. M. Clancy, D. McKinnon, G. Rutherford and L. LeBarr.

TROTTING RACES ATTRACT CROWD

THREE CLASSES.

The grand stand would not hold those who wished to see the vaudeville and the horse races yesterday afternoon. The main attraction of course was the horse races, for it was the first day that the track was in shape to run any races. Yesterday the track was heavy and muddy in places, but considering these things the horses made fairly good time. Three races were run off, 2.25 Class, 2.18 Class, and the 2.50. In the first two classes four horses were entered in each and in the last one five horses. Three heats were run in each race, and each heat was closely contested, especially the 2.25 Class when the first three horses ran very close in each heat. Charlie Snow of Toronto, the starter, got the horses off well each time with very little scoring. Hal E won first money in the 2.50 Class, winning the three heats. This horse has been on the Peterborough track many times before and is owned by A. Elmhurst, Indian River. He was able to get off to a good start each time and then always held his lead.

Peter Direct, owned by George Caldwell, Port Hope, won the three heats in the 2.18, Class and Just Jack, owned by D. Elmhurst, Lang, won the three heats in the 2.25 Class.

The results of the races were:

Foreign Ministers Discuss Ways of Keeping Peace Between Countries.

REMAIN SECRET.

Political Questions Discussed at Parley Between French and German Delegates.

GENEVA, Sept. 18. —(Canadian Press). — The Foreign Ministers of France and Germany went on a motor picnic yesterday and last night M. Briand, Dr. Stresemann are reported to have achieved much progress in laying down a basis for accord betweed two countries not only on all problems existing between them directly but all problems wherein they may be mutually interested.

M. Briand would not reveal what questions were discussed at meeting which was held at a noted inn on the slope of the Jura Mountains not far from Geneva, but it is understood the gradual reduction of French forces of occupation was canvassed and also a possible pooling of economic and financial interests based on the theory that what Europe most needs at present is economic prosperity.

According to information from unofficial French sources, the two statesmen in their four hour conference also discussed the inter-allied debts and Europe's debt to the United States.

The official communique issued by both sides is couched in identical terms. It says the two statesmen lunched together yesterday at Thoiry which is just over French frontier and had cordial conversation during which they examined all problems susceptible of interest to the two countries and that they sought the best common means of solving such questions in the interest of France and of Germany and in the spirit of the treaties already signed by them."

The offical statement concludes "The two statesmen succeeded in harmonizing their viewpoints on the general solution of these questions, each reserving the right to refer matters to their respective governments. If their viewpoints are approved by their governments, they will resume their collaboration in order to achieve desirable results."

ELECTION FOR SEATS TO COUNCIL AT GENEVA WAS FRENCH VICTORY CUBA WAS INDUCED TO WITHDRAW

Elevation of China to the League Causes Ridicule in London.

CAUSES ALARM.

Delegate From Dominions Will Be Elected Within Few Years.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The election of the non-permanent members of the League Council has aroused some ridiculte and not a little alarm here. The elevation of China, which lacks a stable government, has caused more laughter than anything else, but the Morning Post sees in Ireland's application and Canada's support of the new phase in the Dominion's participation in the League. In Ireland ,Desmond Fitzgerald is coming in for hostile criticism for being precipitate in action in demanding a seat this year, and it is admitted that next year the dominions may agree upon a common candidate in advance. Undoubtedly, a representative from the dominions will be elected in the course of the next few years.

Alarm is felt, however, because it is believed that the Latin-American block and the Europeans, with the exception of Holland, are dominated by France. The intrigues by which the election of some of the non-permanents was secured is also coming in for some strong adverse comment.

Hand of U. S. Seen.

An Exchange Telegraph despatch from Geneva yesterday said the United States had applied pressure to Cuba to prevent the latter country from being a candidate for the League of Nations Council during Thursday's election.

Cuba renounced her candidacy several days before the election, although it had been expected that she would be elected easily.

Victory For France.

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—The results of the League of Nations Council election are largely interpreted by the Berlin press yesterday as a conspicuous victory for French politics, the papers of the left pointing out that the international popularity of France is a factor to be reckoned with.

Several papers, however, advise that Germany follow the example of Great Britain, and not be jealous of France's success. The Socialist Vorwaerts considers the vote, giving eligibility for re-election the only disagreeable feature, but admits that Germany's vital interests are not thereby affected.

The papers of the right remark that while the promise made to Poland at Locarno, "behind Germany's back," is now redeemed, Germany is still vainly reminding the other signatories of the vast concessions promised her.

MANY ATTRACTED BY POULTRY SHOW

Many Varieties of Fowl Exhibited—Some Large Single Displays.

Probably one of the most interesting exhibits of the Peterborough Exhibition is that of the poultry. The poultry exhibits attracted a very large crowd of visitors, who scrutinized very carefully the prize ribbons affixed to the pens.

Practically all the commoner varieties of birds were represented, both in the light and heavy classes. There were eighteen entries of single comb white Leghorns and a goodly number of rose comb white Leghorns. G. Buller, a local breeder, had no fewer than twenty-six rose comb brown Leghorns.

Among the fancy breeds were Redcaps, the property of Mrs. J. H. Knox, of Baltimore; crested white Polish and golden polish, the property of Harry Lush, of Peterborough. The heavier class of fowl was well represented by blue Andalusians, blue Wyandottes, Columbian Wyandottes, Minorcas, Rhode Island Reds, buff Orpingtons, and many more. The entry of Columbian Wyandottes was fairly large for a fall fair, these birds being much in evidence in the winter time. Clayton Sanderson, Chemong road, had a very large exhibit of barred Rocks.

Speaking of the heavier class, the judge said there were among them some exceptionally good birds, some the best he had seen during the past year. Several specimens were in view of Jersey Giants, a new breed which has only been a very few years in Canada. Old Country breeds were represented by silver grey Dorkings and speckled Sussex, practically every variety of Hamburgs, and gold and silver Campines.

Pugnacious looking little Bantams poked defiantly at each other. Prominent among the little feathered pugilists were the Old English Spangled Game Bantams. The winner in the black rose comb Bantam class was G. Smith, of Toronto, who had 30 entries of different varieties.

To the west of the Main Poultry Building in a tent by themselves, were housed the geese, ducks and pigeons. Geese entries were composed of Emdens, Chinese, grey and white, and the African, grey, a breed which is becoming very popular. Great Toulouse geese attracted a great number of passers-by. The best goose in the show was one belonging to R. M. Brown, of this city. The duck entries were Pekins, Aylesbury, Rouens, Indian Runners and black Cayugas. Three varieties of pigeons were in view, small Pouters, Carriers and Jacobins. Little white Angora rabbits attracted much attention.

Discovers Brother At Fair Had Not Met In 15 Years

KINGSTON, Sept. 18.—Walking along the Midway at the Kingston Fair on Thursday, George Bliss, who lives at the village of Elginburg, noticed a man who looked very much like his brother William, who he had not seen for fifteen years. On going up to the man he discovered that he was his brother, and the two held a great reunion. It appears that the brother who left his home fifteen years ago has been travelling all over the world with various shows.

FINE DOG SHOW DRAWS PRAISE FROM VISITORS

Official of Canadian Kennel Club Expresses Approval.

MANY ENTRIES.

Energetic Committee Has Got Together Fine Collection of Dogs.

Quality, as well as quantity, is an outstanding element in the Dog Show at the Peterborough Exhibition this year, in one of the best shows of the third year's exhibit of all breed dogs. The majority of the entries have been made by local owners, but there are dogs from Toronto, Hamilton, Hull, Detroit, Windsor, Montreal, Timmins and Brantford, as well as from towns and villages in the surrounding district. Judging was going on yesterday and ends to-day, with the judge in Robert A. Ross, of Montreal, who is one of the three Canadian judges who will act at the Sesqui-Centennial Celebration in Philadelphia.

An enthusiastic eulogy of the work of the energetic committee in charge of the Dog Show was voiced yesterday by James D. Strachan, of Toronto, secretary of the Canadian Kennel Club and editor of "Kennel and Bench." Mr. Strachan spoke in highly complimentary terms of the fine new benching provided for the dogs, obviating any danger of distemper, and of the excellent prizes given. He declared that the local show could compare most favorably with any of the shows of a similar type which he had attended in a recent three weeks' tour of dog shows in the West, from Brandon to Nanaimo.

The superintendent of the Dog Show is W. S. Merrell, and W. E. Jackson is secretary-treasurer. The committee in charge is composed of Messrs. Reg. Turner, J. J. Crowley, J. McMartin, K. Sine, W. Carey, O. R. Edwards, W. Thompson, L. Maguire, A. Lacey, J. R. Runnett, J. Sullivan, A. C. Wolfe, Dr. J. C. Green, Dr. W. Hayes, Mrs. W. K. Loescher. Ring stewards are Messrs. J. Sullivan, H. S. Routly, A. C. Wolfe, W. Welch, W. Thompson, J. McMartin, A. Lacey, W. J. Carey, R. Runnett, J. J. Crowley, K. Sine, Dr. J. C. Green, and Show Veterinarians are Dr. H. E. Ellis and Dr. W. T. Rogers.

Perhaps the biggest class this year was that of the beagles, with a large entry also in the fox hound class, in which F J. Doughty cleaned up a varied assortment of ribbons and cups with his dog, "Limber."

Robert Snook, of Montreal, took the "best of breed' award in the bulldog section with "British Sampson," a class in which the local entries were H. Zacks' "Roxin Prince," Mrs. Gordon Matthews' "Tinker" and Mrs. M. Hickford's "Sensible Dannie."

Russian Wolfhounds were not as large as last year, with only three entries in this section. Next door to them were the Irish terriers, their quick bark contrasting oddly with the weird, mournful note of the slender white Russian dogs, and across the way were a trio of black Newfoundlands, chief among them "Patsy," who uttered a dignified "woof" of reproof for the nervous yaping of "Biff," a tiny black Pomeranian who suffered from temperamental outbursts, and persisted in chewing up the "for sale" card on its cage. But "Patsy" got excited too and made quite a fuss, when a miniature specimen of a fox terrier appeared on its way to the ring.

The Poms and their more placid neighbors, the calm-eyed Pekingese, with Mrs. C. G. Graham's entry a fine specimen in the latter

LEAGUE OF NATIONS ASSEMBLY TO HOLD DISARMAMENT PARLEY IN EARLY PART OF NEXT YEAR

Leaders Discuss Idea of Limiting Armies' and Navies' Strength.

REDUCTION LATER.

Diplomats Discard Military Experts' Work—Adopts Council Seat Compromise.

GENEVA, Sept. 18.—Private conversations among the leading countries of the League of Nations on the subject of the general disarmament conference have been proceeding for the last three days, with the result that there has developed the idea of calling the conference for the first part of next year. It is realized that no great progress on reduction of armaments can now be made, but there is being formulated a plan which in brief is as follows:

The various nations shall agree that they will in no case exceed certain limits in their armaments. These limits are expected to be fixed approximately at their present military and naval strength with, it is hoped, a small reduction. When these figures are agreed on a treaty will be drawn saying that as conditions justify these limits will be reduced by agreement.

It is calculated that this will mark an advance, since it will limit the ability of any nation to embark on extended military or naval plans.

For example, the present League figures place the French Army at 700,000 men. As a matter of fact, because many of its units are skeletonized, France has now 547,000 soldiers. It is figured that under the proposed plan France could agree not to allow her army to exceed 500,000. Italy, Belgium, Poland and other Continental countries with considerable armies could agree not to exceed some figure not distant from their present strength. Once that scale is established, the League leaders think the foundation will be established for further reductions at future dates.

In working out this plan the diplomats are largely discarding the work of the military experts here the past three months. The latter have agreed on practically no issues, and this has tended to bring the belief that the proposed scientific and detailed handling of the issue will bring no progress.

Many League chiefs think the experts should report in the near future and leaves the Governments to act thereafter.

Of course, if the League calls a disarmament conference next spring it will be expected that it will relieve President Coolidge of the duty of calling one in Washington.

Fiji Girls Discard Bob Want To Become Civilized

OAKLAND, Calif., Sept. 18. (Associated Press). — Refinements of civilization have produced opposite results in America and the Fiji Islands, declares Ratu Meli Salaboga, former cannibal chief visiting the United States with a group of missionaries.

Ratu spent half his life as a cannibal but was converted to Christianity 27 years ago. He still wears native garb and speaks through an interpreter.

"Twenty years ago Fiji flappers painted their faces black, while American flappers paint their faces white at present," he commented. "A narrow cloth possibly two feet in length, once served as the sole costume of a Fijian female; also, short bushy hair was the prevailing head dress. These styles have been discarded in the South Seas and have found their way across the Pacific."

NO ELECTION IN MANITOBA

Premier Bracken Says No Necessity Before Time Set By Government.

NOT INFLUENCED.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 18. — (Canadian Press).—"They know more about it than I do," was Premier John Bracken's reply to current rumors that a Provincial election was likely to be held at an early date.

Premier Bracken declared that the result of the Federal eletcion had not influenced the Government in the slightest so far as a Provincial appeal to the country was concerned. There was no necessity, he said, for holding an election in Manitoba a day earlier than the Government had previously considered advisable.

No action has yet been taken with respect to filling the vacancy in the Legisuature occasioned by the resignation of Joseph Bernier as member for St. Boniface. Running as a Conservative candidate in the same constituency last Tuesday, he suffered defeat in a three-cornered contest.

BETHANY CHURCH JUBILEE SUNDAY

St. Paul's Church Has Been Redecorated For Special Services.

PROGRESSIVE PARISH.

BETHANY, Sept. 18.—The congregation of St. Paul's Anglican Church is preparing to hold jubilee services on September 19. Rev. Burgess Brown, of Toronto, will be in charge of the morning service, and Archdeacon Warren, also of Toronto, will have charge of the evening service.

For a rural church St. Paul's is one of the prettiest and quaintest churches around. That the people of the congregation love their church home is shown in the care they have taken of it during the past fifty years. The past year they have added a few modern features to it without in any way spoiling the effect. A new furnace was put under the church for heating, thus doing away with the two large, old-fashioned box stoves, and giving more room. A baptismal font has been added and a gasoline lighting system put in.

This past summer the interior has been decorated. The walls are done in a panel effect with a rich cream tint. The chancel has been carpeted in crimson velour, and the altar and reading and prayer desks are draped in the same color, which gives the interior an atmosphere of comfort, quietness and peace, which is noticed upon first entrance to the church.

Two beautiful bronze memorial tablets are seen upon the left-hand wall of the church. One is in memory of the late Mr. Isaac Preston, who for many years was superintendent of St. Paul's Sunday School, and previous to that superintendent of St. Mary's Sunday School, Lifford. The other tablet is in memory of Charles Herbert Morton, who paid the supreme sacrifice in the World War. Although young in years, he had been an active leader in the choir and musical partt of the church services. These beautiful tablets were placed there by immediate friends of the ones whose names they bear.

For a great many years the late Rev. Burgess was rector and friend of St. Paul's parish. The present rector, Rev. G. Fierheller, although there only a short time, is greatly loved and respected by the people to whom he ministers.

During the years that Rev. A. T. Wan, now of Omemee, was rector, a beautiful new rectory was built with every convenience, and is another evidence of the congregation's progressiveness.

Only two men are living in this community at the present time who helped in the building of the present church. They are Mr. Johnston Morton and Mr. Richard Johnston.

NOT SO NARROW.

Some of the most attractive slips have pleated flounces or have sections of ecru lace to widen the hemline.

NEW MASTER CUTLER

David Flather, New Head of Great Sheffield Guild.

LONDON, Sept. 17. (C. P.)—David Flather, head of W. T. Flather Limited, standard steelworks, and one of the bestknown men in this trade, is to be the next Master Cutler of Sheffield. In the steel and cutlery centre this office ranks only second in importance to that of Lord Mayor of Sheffield district) is comparatively of origin. Judged by the age of some of the old London guilds and companies the Cutlers' Company of Hallamshire (the historic name for Sheffield district) is of comparively recent establishment, having behind it merely a matter of a couple of ceturies' history.

Nowadays the Cutlers' Compay powers in regard to the control of trade matters are very limited, although it effects some good work in protecting Sheffield trade marks from unscrupulous foreign competitors—notably in Germany. The Cutlers' Feast, which this year will be held Oct. 28, is one of the most important events of the kind held outside London. Sheffielders like to think it is as important as the Lord Mayor of London's Banquet Sir Douglas Hogg, attorney-general will be the chief guest.

OBITUARY.

JOHN MacNAUGHTON.

NORWOOD, Sept. 18.—The death occurred on Sunday last of a highly esteemed resident of this locality in the person of Mr. John MacNaughton. The deceased, who was in his 74th year, had been in ill-health for the past three years. He was born in the township of Dummer, near Cottesloe, and about 38 years ago moved to the present home. He took an active part in the affairs of the community, being for eight years a member of the Asphodel Township Council, and also a member of the Norwood Board of Education. He was for a number of years a faithful elder and manager of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The funeral was held from the family residence on Tuesday afternoon and was attended by a great number of friends and neighbors. Rev. T. M. Wesley, of Lakefield United Church, and a former pastor of the deceased, conducted the services at the house and at the grave, assisted by Rev. F. Stillman, of Norwood United Church, and Mr. George Bennett, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Norwood.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, whose maiden name was Helen Davidson, of Campbellford, and three daughters—Mrs. Tighe, of Gore Bay; Miss Helen, of Toronto, and Miss Bessie, of Peterboro—and three sons—Messrs. Ross and Dean, at home, and George, of South Dummer.

The bereaved family have the sympathy of a large circle of friends.

class, made a good showing, and the "Samoyedes," as these little white beauties are termed, were centres of interest. A couple of long-eared bloodhounds and a trio of retrievers of the wavy type, with a single specimen of a Labrador retriever, were in the tent where judging went on.

W. Thompson, of the "Brownton Kennels," showed a large number of beagles, flanked by wire-haired and smooth fox terriers, a Kerry blue terrier, and a trio of black French bulldogs, the property of Mrs. L. L. Maguire and Dr. J. C. Green. Mrs. W. H. Hill showed the only French poodle on view, in the white "Mickey," and Mrs. B. Gardiner had two ribbons for 'Prince," her Boston bull terrier. In this Boston bull class, one of Ken Young's pups is named for "Rudolph Valentino." The Scotch terrier class had one entry, and a single whippet also was registered. In the American foxhound class, entries by George N. Graham bulked large, as was the case in the bull terrier section.

Springer spaniels were a splendid showing, exhibited by H. S. Routley, and there was a large number of Airedales of good quality. The new "Doberman Pinscher" dog, of the short-haired Alsatian breed, was shown in a trio of specimens, and there wrere a number of adult and puppy dogs from K. N. Sine's Kennels, with the leader in the champion, "Commanding Style," and other entries in E. A. Adams' "Peterborough Style," G. Golden's "Buster," V. C. Hickey's "Laddie," D. Reid's "Barney Google," and Louis Anthony's favorite, "Duke," who appeared more tractable this year than last season, when he slipped his collar to follow his master from the noisy tent.

The Alsatian Shepherd dogs, with Mrs. Max Swanston's "King Tut," a vivacious entry, were as interesting as usual, and there were some excellent entries in the cocker spaniel class, with one prominent entry in the winners' dog of two seasons back, "Sandy," owned by Mrs. Somerville of Waterloo, and entered by her brother-in-law, Mr. James Hamilton. An entry apiece was registered in the English Irish setter class.

WEDDING BELLS.

WITTHUN—WOOD.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 18.—A pretty autumn wedding took plaie on Thursday, Sept. 16, at high noon, when Helen Denike, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Wood, was united in marriage to Mr. William Witthun, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Witthun, of Hamilton. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Howard, assisted by Rev. Mr. Elliott, in the presence of the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends of the bride.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked lovely in her gown of white georgette, with pretty net veil and orange blossoms, and carrying a large shower bouquet. Miss Evelyn Irwin, as bridesmaid, wore a pretty taffeta gown and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Howard Wood assisted the groom and Miss L. Hawley, of Toronto, played the wedding march.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served, after which the bride and groom left on a motor trip through Quebec and the Adirondacks, the bride wearing an autumn rose costume, with hat and shoes to match.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Witthun will reside in Windsor.

The bride received many handsome gifts, which testify to the high esteem in which she was held by her friends. Mrs. Witthun was a valued member of St. John's choir and as a soloist was always heard with much pleasure, and will be greatly missed by all.

Out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. Witthun and Miss Witthun, of Hamilton; Mr. Carruthers and Misses Ruth and Beatrice Carruthers, of Toronto; Mrs. Wright, of Peterboro, grandmother of the bride; Misses Nellie and Annie Wood and Miss Scott, of Peterboro; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wood and Miss L. Hawley, of Toronto, and Mrs. E. Fennell, of Havelock.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

OBEDIENCE TO THE LAW.

If ye walk in my statutes, and keep my commandments, and do them;

Then I will give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit.

And your threshing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time; and ye shall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely.

But if ye will not hearken unto me, and will not do all these commandments;

And if ye shall despise my statutes, or if your soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye break my covenant:

I also will do this unto you; I will even appoint over you terror, consumption, and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart; and ye shall sow your seeds in vain, for your enemies shall eat it.

And I will set my face against you, and ye shall be slain before your enemies: they that hate you shall reign over you; and ye shall flee when none pursueth you.

And if ye will not yet for all this hearken unto me, than I will punish you seven times more for your sins. And I will break the pride of your power; and I will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass: And your strength shall be spent in vain: for your land shall not yield her increase; neither shall the trees of the land yield their fruits.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for September 19. Obedience to Law. Lev. 26:305, 14-20.

This lesson is one from which we are apt to derive very much the wrong teaching unless we consider it in the light of the whole teaching of the Bible and especially in the light of deeper and truer conceptions of God's Providence that were developed by the later prophets of Israel and that found their culmination in the life and teaching of Jesus himself.

Do people prosper in life and have an easy time, freedom from ill-health, accident and misfortune according as they do right or do wrong? Much in this lesson would seem to suggest that they do, and broadly speaking it is true that evil courses produce evil consequences, and that good living produces good consequences.

Spiritual Values.

When we come, however, to look at all deeply into life, and with any sense of spiritual values, we very quickly discover that there is no such crude material relationship between prosperity and goodness on the one hand and misfortune and evil on the other. It was in fact this very problem that the sacred writer struggled with in the book of Job: the problem of a man consciously striving to serve God who was afflicted with every manner of misfortune.

The long line of martyrs in the history of the church, the sufferings that people have endured for conscience sake in prisons, the great privations and hardships they have undergone rather than do wrong, all stand against the possible implications of this lesson: so that we must be very careful to read the lesson only in the light of the whole teaching of scripture.

To see always in the failure of crops, in blight, disease, and trouble, the hand of God punishing people for their sins is to create a false idea of God and of his loving Providence. Rather should we see with Paul that there are no circumstances that can separate from the love of God in Christ the soul earnestly devoted to the Master.

But, having seen these spiritual implications of life, how God leads men through what seemed to be unfavorable as well as through favorable paths, we should not neglect in its own place the broad teaching of this lesson which life to a very great extent vindicates. We should not minimize the amount of misfortune that comes directly to the world from a failure to recognize and obey the laws of God.

Probably far more of the troubles even of good people arise from the unconscious disobedience to certain laws than we often realize. Though we may allow for exceptions, a people that are sober, industrious, patient, persistent, efficient, will attain to prosperity and happiness while a people that are slothful, selfish, vicious, will be for the most part a people poverty stricken and miserable.

The Law of Life.

We must not neglect either the lower or the higher aspects of Providence as manifest in the application of the law of life. Also it should be remembered that where character triumphs over circumstance it is due to the outworking of a higher law. It is as certain as the universe itself that certain effects follow certain causes. Only in a spiritual survey of life we must learn to take into account all the causes as well as all the effects.

The course of Israel's life, and in fact one might say the course of the life of every people, constitutes a warning. Ways of evil end in death and ways of righteousness end in life. "There is a way that seemeth to be good but the end thereof is destruction," and on the other hand, "The path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

God leads men and blesses them affliction. Many a man has learned in time that what seemed a great misfortune has really proved a great blessing.

We must remember the divine uses of trouble and adversity. But remembering the deeper aspects and lessons of Providence we may well stress the great fact of our lesson as well—that good courses of life bring good results and that evil courses bring evil. "Verily I say unto you," said Jesus, "they have their reward."

THE HUNTSVILLE BAND

The announcement that the famous Huntsville Band, the Anglo-Canadian Leather Company organization, is to be permanently disbanded has been heard with deep regret by the people of Ontario who have looked upon this wonderful band as a triumph of Canadian achievement.

It sems a pity that the founder and backer of the organization has found it necessary to break up a musical ensemble that has few equals.

A better band was never formed in Canada and it will be a long time perhaps before anything as good will be heard in this country.

A good deal of the joy of Huntsville life will be lost in the demobilization of this truly great band.

LIBERAL-PROGRESSIVES

Street talk goes to show that there is a great deal of confusion over the exact status of the successful candidates who ran under the label of Liberal-Progressive on Tuesday.

These candidates were chosen either at joint conventions of Liberals and Progressives or were nominated by one party and endorsed by the other.

It seems reasonable to suppose that Mr. King can count upon their support even although their joint endorsation might necessitate them being regarded as independent members.

The United Farmers of Alberta are on a different footing.

They were nominated by the farmers' organization and although most of them received Liberal support they regard themselves as independent of all other parties, including the Progressives and reserve the right to support any party according to the conditions.

Miss Agnes MacPhail is in a similar position.

She contested the last election not as a Progressive but as a representative of the U.F.O.; she was most emphatic in declaring that she did not want to be known as a Progressive.

INTEREST IN ANIMALS

The Department is showing some bear cubs, a couple of beaver, a lynx, and several other small animals and the tent is generally full of interested youngsters who have to be literally dragged away by their elders.

The idea of maintaining a few of these animals at one of the city parks has been mooted more than once without receiving a very warm reception.

The nucleus of a zoo of this kind has several times been offered, but the civic authorities have shown no enthusiasm over the proposal.

Perhaps a look at the excited faces of the children who gaze in delighted wonderment at the animals in the Department's exhibit would create a new interest in the zoo suggestion.

CONGRATULATIONS

The directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition are to be congratulated upon their achievement in building up the biggest exhibition in regard to extensive exhibits, variety of amusement features and general excellence in local history.

It is generally admitted that in the appearance of the grounds, in the wonderful lighting effect and in the completeness of the general arrangements this year's Exhibition sets a new mark.

The vaudeille acts in front of the grand stand, the finished playing of Lampham's Band and the excellence of the nightly fireworks display make this department of the Exhibition stronger than ever before.

Visitors who saw the local fair for the first time have been surprised at the magnitude, and it is evident that the directors were quite justified in naming this "Expansion" Year.

Had the weather conditions on Wednesday and Thursday been good, the attendance record would have been completely shattered, as yesterday's remarkable crowd in spite of none too promising weather evidenced.

Peterborough citizens should not fail to remember that there will be a complete programme tonight and another turnout like that of yesterday will achieve the 40,000 objective.

The attendance mark for any one day in the Exhibition's history was badly beaten yesterday when the paid admissions totalled 13,105.

THE PROPER SPIRIT.

"In a British democracy," comments the Conservative Ottawa Journal, "there is but one thing to do about an election verdict. That thing is to accept the majority decision and to try to help those entrusted with the task of governing to carry on the government. The people of Canada can be depended upon to do that."

The Journal did its share to help Mr. Meighen to win, did it with whole-hearted devotion to the cause it espouses. After seeing both seats in its own city turn over and observing a decisive victory for the Liberals throughout the country it does not resort to blue-ruin propaganda and bitter recriminations, like some of its Conservative contemporaries. Instead, it accepts the will of the people with good grace, and admits that what is now important is to see that the new Government has every opportunity to administer the affairs of the country properly.

This is the spirit now needed. The Journal is to be commended for the broad-minded and patriotic stand which it takes.—The Globe.

A SELECTED EDITORIAL
THE RIGHT OF SELF-DEFENSE

(Philadelphia Bulletin)

The committee of prominent persons representing fourteen different countries which has asked the League of Nations to move for the abolition of military conscription throughut the world is setting a most difficult task. The league has been trying with indifferent success to bring about some limitation of armament. But the main obstacle is the lack of security that a disarmed nation feels.

Only a league that is a real super-state, able physically to defend its members from any possible attack, could induce its members to forego the right to self-defense to the extent that this committee asks. For the petition goes further than to ask the abolition of universal military service, which keeps a whole nation constantly in arms for purposes of possible aggrandizement. It strikes at a fundamental power of every state, which it must retain unless it abdicates to a super-state, to demand that in the emergency of war all its citizens shall serve it under arms, if they are needed.

This right exists in every state whether it is exercised or not. That every citizen on call is bound to defend his country is as fundamental American doctrine as it is the doctrine of healthly nationalism everywhere. What the league can do and ought to do, is to help its members to cut the number of men actually kept under arms to a minimum and to help create such a feeling of international security that training may as a matter of fact be restricted to those who voluntarily seek it.

That is the present practice in the United States as well as in Great Britain. But these free and non-aggressive nations must maintain unimpaired the right of the state to summon every son to its defence and the duty of the citizen to respond. That right is the guarantee by reason of which the maintenance of great standing armies are avoided.

THE ELEMENT OF SURPRISES

The salient feature of the general election was the element of surprise. All experienced politicians have from time to time been compelled to admit the uncertainty of an electoral contest. This is because of the important part played by the inarticulate voter. At one time voting took place openly, and was a matter of written record how each elector had voted; but with the coming in of the ballot, a little more than fifty years ago, the factor of secrecy was introduced. That made a vital change. It accounts for the surprises of a general election.

The body of silent voters is constantly growing, which is another way of saying that partisanship is less pronounced than it was in years gone by. These undemonstrative electors in many instances turn the tide; and what may be the influence, or influences, which sway them remains as deep a secret as the marking of their ballots. For that reason it is often impracticable to draw deductions from the general result. The personal popularity of a candidate may easily secure an election without public issues being brought into the matter at all; and back of all that are the prejudices, class instincts, and sectional emotions which turn men and women to one side or the other.

The advent of the woman voter has also multiplied the difficulties of the election prophet. Woman at the polls is a law unto herself—none may safely predict how she will vote or what factors will influence that vote.

Our democratic system will always exhibit these characteristics. Anomalies and surprises will continue to be inseparable from appeals to popular judgment. There have been occasions when some definite and easily-grasped issue has brought about a declaration of opinion which gave a clear-cut meaning to the result of a general election. It would be difficult to identify anything of that nature in the contest just ended. That is why there were so many surprises. Personal, local, racial, class, religious and all sorts of influences were factors in the struggle.

Surprises give zest to political contests. They come in like the extraordinary hand in a deal of cards. In this instance the inexplicable play of fortune in the distribution of trumps favored the Liberals. But, as has been said, no one may draw significance from such freakish happenings. Our political experience points to the folly of such a thing. At the next deal the Liberals may draw a Yarboro, so fickle are the forces which gave them many triumphs on Tuesday last.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT

Soon swimmers will be boasting that they never crossed the English Channel.

Mr. Ferguson is mentioned as Dominion Conservative leader. It would be a promotion that would get the Ontario Premier out of a tight corner in the Provincial field.

So far as the Conservatives are concerned, Hon. R. B. Bennett represents three provinces. There may be something in proportional representation after all.

The U.F.A. members of the new parliament are to form a separate group. But they won't exert as much influence as they did during the last session.

"Whether to take arms against a sea of troubles and by opposing end them," about presents Premier Ferguson's frame of mind at present.

Only one Meighen candidate was elected in the Prairie Provinces, but as that happened to be Hon. R. B. Bennett, the Conservatives of that section of Canada cannot say that they will not have a voice in national affairs.

The Toronto Telegram says there will be a Provincial election the week of November 8. The party organizations had better keep the machinery out of cold storage for a while.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—Moderately heavy receipts of cattle this week have met a fairly steady market at a 15c to 25c decline, which went into effect in the opening market on Monday. The heavy export steers took most of the decline, the minor cut going to the plain and common butcher and stocker types. Choice quality finished butcher steers and heifers were comparatively scarce and held at practically steady prices with the previous week.

Export buyers shipped overseas this week about 1,300 cattle, taking about 800 direct off this market, the balance being billed through and held over cattle. A few store cattle were included in the total shipment. About 800 cattle, finished steers and stockers, will be required for next week's quota for the export trade. The prolonged coal strike in England is blamed for the lower export cattle prices. At the close this week the export finished steers were quoting weaker at $7.25 to $7.75.

Choice butcher steers and heifers were steady from $6.50 to $7. Extra choice steers, $7.25 to $7.50. Western cattle are coming in plentifully, many direct through to the abattoirs. These cattle for the next few weeks will be strong competitors with the general run of plain and common butcher stock from the Ontario farms.

Sheep and lambs: Choice lambs sold at $12.75; Tuesday 13c, Wednesday 13½c. Yearling steep 9c to 10c, choice butchers sheep 7c to 8c; good, 6c to 6½c; heavy sheep and bucks, 4c to 5c; cull sheep, 2½c to 3c; buck lambs selling at a discount of 2c. On and other October 1st abattoirs will make a discount of $3 per hundred on buck lambs.

Calves—Choice veal calves sold steady this week at from 12½c to 13c; good 10c to 12c; medium 9c to 10c; common, 6c to 8c; grassers 5c to 6c.

Hogs sold this week at $11.75 f.o.b., $12.35 fed, and $12.75 off cars. Premium on selects $2.42 per head.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—There was some demand from foreign buyers for American grades of wheat on the Montreal market yesterday and on the break in prices at Chicago exporters were in a position to accept orders for several loads in nearby positions, but there was no business transacted in Canadian coarse grains.

Owing to the weakness that developed in the Winnipeg future market for oats, spot prices here for car lots were reduced 1½c to 2c per bushel. At the lower level there was a moderate amount of business transacted, including one sale of 50,000 bushels.

On account of the break in prices in the Winnipeg cash wheat market, an easier feeling developed in the local market for spring wheat grades of flour and prices were declined ten cents per barrel. The winter wheat situation was quiet but firm.

Under a continued good demand from all sources, prices for all grades of millfeed ruled steady. The tone of the market for standard grades of rolled oats was steady with a fair trade passing.

The volume of business done in storage and fresh eggs was again very large and prices were well maintained. The receipts were 1,255 cases.

Owing to the fact that the receipts of potatoes have been below expectations, which is attributed to the wet weather that has prevailed, the undertone to the market was firm with a steady demand. Sales of car lots of New Brunswick cobblers were made at $1.50 per bag of ninety pounds, ex-track.

Despite the fact that the trade was inactive, the butter market was stronger and prices were marked up another ½c per pound. The receipts were 3,481 packages.

The spot market for cheese was firmer and prices advanced 1-8c to ¼c per pound. The receipts were 9,741 boxes.

There was no change in beans, business being rather quiet and prices steady, with car lots of choice hand-picked quoted at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—Grain values swung downward yesterday, reversing the Thursday market. In wheat there was a lack of aggressive support until holders of bids started to take profits. Weakness in Winnipeg, better weather in the Canadian northwest and a weak technical position was responsible for the decline. At the close wheat showed a net loss of 1 5-8c to 2 3-8c, corn was down 1 3-4c to 2c, oats were off ¼ to 7-8, and provisions varied from unchanged to 3c off.

All cereal futures were under pressure most of the session, and what little demand there was, came from shorts and holders, who bought on the declines. Winnipeg recorded a bigger drop in values than did Chicago, at one time showing nearly four cents. With better weather in the Canadian provinces and a forecast for some generally fair and cool days over the territory, a resumption of threshing was assured. Farmers were said to have delivered more than 3,000,000 bushels at interior elevators, in the three provinces Thursday, making the total for the week around 12,000,000 bushels.

There was a moderate business reported at the seaboard with sales around 400,000 to 500,000 bushels domestic. Late messages indicated that there were a few orders to cancel purchases from the continent. Indications are that the world's shipments for the week will be slightly in excess of last week, largely from North America.

Little attention was paid to a forecast for heavy to killing frost over parts of North Dakota last night, and this grain averaged lower with wheat and on selling by some buyers of the previous day. Country offerings were more liberal.

Oats showed relative strength as compared with corn, although averaging lower with that grain.

Provisions were easier on scattered selling, which found support lacking, trade being about the dullest of the season.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

SUICIDE

By Dr. Frank Crane.

A man involved in the crash of some banks in Georgia some time ago blew out his brains.

Every once in a while you hear of someone's desperately committing suicide or trying to because he has lost money or is disappointed in love, or for some similar reason.

These people are the worst kind of heretics.

They are the heretics of life.

Pastor Wagner said that the fundamental belief is a belief in life. This underlies all creeds, or ought to.

Nothing is superior in importance to the value of living, unless it is some supreme question of sacrifice or patriotism where it is clearly our duty to give up life rather than honor.

This does not apply, however, to those who are simply disappointed. In contrast to these rashly importunate people are such stories as one which appeared in the press not long ago of a man who had gained his sight at the age of fifty and began at that time slowly to learn to read.

So many a man has lost his fortune and has bravely commenced to make another effort in old age. Many an invalid takes up the burden of life cheerfully and makes what he can out of the fragments remaining.

The man who kills himself because he has lost his money simply values station in life more than life itself, as Ruskin says.

Nothing that is an appurtenance to life can equal in importance the value of life itself. No one knows what the future may bring forth, and no matter how dark the prospects it is the business of a brave man to wait and see what is in store for him.

The effect of failure often is bitterness and a feeling of panic. If we weather the first effects things may take a turn. It is not well for us to pin our whole hopes upon wealth or position, or any such thing. Life has many compensations and the satisfactions of life do not always come in the way we expect them. Some compensation, however, is reasonably sure if we take our stand upon the great integrities.

JUST TIME ENOUGH

If I were going away,
I know we would not say
The things we said today.

For who would hurt a friend
Who would tomorrow wend
The journey to Land's End?

If you were leaving me
Tonight to put to sea,
How gentle I would be!

And yet I know no bond,
However fair or fond,
But has its last beyond.

With all our wealth and art
I know that heart from heart
Will sometime have to part.

So briefly we are here,
The night so very near,
The dear should be so dear!

For even lips that smile
Along life's merriest mile
Are parting all the while.

And then at last we find
There was no time designed
When hearts could be unkind—

Just time enough for bliss,
For kindness, and a kiss,
Just time enough for this.

COMPETITION IN WORDS

One who goes into the market to buy a motor car today is naturally confused.

He has read the words best and greatest so often that they have ceased to be convincing. Where all is best, he reflects, there can be no best.

Thousand-dollar cars have been described to him in ten-thousand dollar language. And vice versa.

He finds himself the target in a war of adjectives; the helpless victim in a gigantic competition of words.

And so he is forced to rely on chance—the advice of friends—or his own limited experience.

They are content with the position they have long maintained in the far more vital competition of honest value.

They have continued steadily to improve their product, not only in comfort and beauty, but basically—beneath the body and hood where fundamental values lie.

Yet they have not unduly stressed each betterment that has marked the steady progress of their motor car toward a higher perfection.

And when economic conditions or greater sales have permitted them to reduce prices without reducing quality, they have announced the fact without excessive emphasis.

Unexaggerated truth is not spectacular. But in the long run, implicit public confidence has been Dodge Brothers reward, and this they propose to preserve forever by continuing to build just a little better than they tell.

"His Majesty's Motor" An Ordinary Taxi Cab

LONDON (United Press)—Being ex-majesties, crowned heads without a country, the ex-King of Greece and his royal consort have at times been bustled about in London crowds without much ceremony.

When King Alfonso of Spain was in London, he lived at a hotel and rubbed shoulders in democratic fashion with the upper part of the non royal world. But he is ruling King and no absurd incidents befell him, such as happened recently to the ex-royalties of Greece.

"Call his majesty's motor," boomed the butler in stentorian tones. "His majesty's motor," shrilly repeated an attendant at the door, and the command was sent echoing magnificently on until it reached the first footman on the sidewalk. He remembered how their exmajesties had arrived. So he put his fingers into his mouth, whistled loud and shrill and shouted "Taxi!"

WELSH COAL STRIKERS HUNGRY BUT FAR FROM SURRENDERING

Conditions Bad in Some Districts, But Miners Can Hold Out.

RUSSIA AIDING

More Than Half Money for Communal Kitchens Comes From Soviet.

By C. T. HALLINAN

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

CARDIFF, Sept. 16.—(United Press).—As the guest of "The Iron and Coal Trade Review," the organ of the mining industry of Great Britain, a representative of the United Press, with other newspaper correspondents, was taken on a whirlwind tour of some of the South Wales coal fields "to judge whether the miners' wives and children are starving."

The editor himself accompanied the party and was quick to point out all the bright aspects of the situation, but he selected two local guides whose sympathies were strongly with the miners, and the itinerary included a mining village that looked like a small section of a slum.

The impression left upon one observer was that in the worst districts the conditions are severe—more severe than the Prime Minister was aware—but that in the better districts, where communal kitchens and similar enterprises are run, the miners can hold out for many weeks more.

Cardiff is a silent port, almost a stricken port. At least 10,000 men are out of work. Ships have ceased to come into Cardiff looking for coal. On the other hand, two or three arrive daily bringing coal, somewhat to the embarrassment of the port since the latter is equipped only for transferring coal from the land into ships, and not from ships to the land. Obsolescent cranes, with buckets filled by hand, have been pressed into service. This foreign coal goes up the valley to the various iron, steel and tin plants of Guest, Keen and Nettlefolds — the firm in which Sir Austin Chamberlain and his family are interested.

Speeding up the valley of the River Taff, the party's first stop was at Pontypridd, which the Welsh pronounce Ponty-preeth. A. J. Cook was the miners' agent here for many years. Great hills stretched away on both sides of the valley and the houses, made of brick, clung in long rows to the hillsides.

The party was escorted to the miners' recreation grounds, built from the Government's "welfare fund," which is raised by a tax of a penny on every ton of coal mined. It had a great round pond in the middle, with miners' children splashing merrily in it, and swings and round-abouts, and young people playing tennis. It was certainly cheerful, but it did not throw much light on conditions in the silent houses.

The strangest sight in Pontypridd was that of coal-blackened miners pushing carts filled with newly mined coal through the streets. The guides explained that they were "safety men" who are permitted by the union to mine enough coal for the homes of the mine manager, the pit boss and other officials—a strange little truce in a bitter warfare!

Hunting for signs of hunger in the Welsh coal fields, the party whirled out of Pontypridd up the valley toward Merthyr Tydffil. Almost immediately a strange sight met their gaze. Just outside the town, near the collieries, stood immense mounds of waste coal and slack, or "duff," and digging into the mounds, like gnomes, were hundreds of miners, many of them stripped to the waist. They were looking for free coal which they carried home in sacks. This sight was encountered all through the trip.

On the green hillsides, all through the trip, were also seen hundreds of sheep innocently feeding, and the argument was advanced that if the miners' wives and children are actually starving, then these sheep wouldn't be safe for a single night. Others pointed out that these Wesleyan Methodists and Zion Chapelites and Primitive Baptists do not take naturally to thieving or other forms of lawlessness. For example, only one broken colliery window was noticed in the whole valley.

Presently it became clear that the trip, owing to lack of time, had resolved itself into the pursuit of what the economists call "anecdotal statistics," that is, personal impressions and nothing else. The children certainly had none of that picturesque anemia popularly associated with starvation. Four weeks of skimped rations had not reduced them anywhere to skin-and-bones, so far as the layman could tell.

In the worst mining village visited — one with ramshackle stone houses and with a listless, down-in-the-heel and ragged population — the children compared unfavorably, in appearance, with the children in the congested districts of London. But in Pontypridd, and Merthyr Tydffil and Tredegar and Oakdale, the children seemed to have been fed, whether the elders went on short rations or not.

According to the guides, the children are fed in the schools by the local authorities, and the mothers go to the local guardians for food and clothing, while the miners themselves are fed twice a day at the "communal kitchens." The one at Tredegar feeds 2,500 miners daily.

The man in charge, when asked where the money came from for the communal kitchens, replied casually that "eleven pence out of every one-and-six comes from Russia." That is, 22 cents out of every 30 cents, or so.

Asked if the men seemed to be weakening any, he looked his astonishment and said: "Apparently, you don't know South Wales."

Certainly not a colliery in the whole valley was producing so much as a hundredweight of coal. It was a 100 per cent. strike.

At Tredegar the party got a glimpse of a stretch of railroad track popularly known as "the golden mile." It was a short bit of road running through Lord Tredegar's estate—a short-cut for several collieries—and Lord Tredegar gets a farthing on every ton of coal that passes along it. His income from it is believed to run into many thousands of dollars a year.

Risca was another interesting spot. It boasts one short street which has produced five Labor members of Parliament—William Brace, now in the Ministry of Mones; Vernon Hartshorn, M.P.; George Barker, M.P.; and the late William Abraham and George Winstone.

But the big sight of all was Oakdale, a garden suburb of broad winding streets, beautiful homes, a village square with a bandstand, a local club-house, all inhabited by miners.

ONE FATALITY ON RAILWAYS

1,700 Million Passengers Carried in Safety on English Lines.

FINE SIGNALS.

LONDON (United Press)—Only one passenger lost his life as the result of a railway accident in England last year and he died because his weak heart collapsed as the result of the excitement of a wreck. In 1901 and again in 1908, no passengers were killed in British railroad accidents.

In 1916, due principally to a troop-train accident, 269 passengers were killed of whom 224 died as the result of one wreck. In other years the list of fatalities has been very small, the greatest being 58 passengers killed in 1906.

In 1925, when only one passenger was "killed" and he by shock, more than seventeen hundred millions of passenger journeys were made and trains ran over sixty-two million passenger-miles.

Railway officials credit careful operation, large numbers of safety appliances and modern signalling equipment with keeping the loss of passengers' lives so low.

Bethany United Church Ladies Take Up New Study Book.

BETHANY, Sept. 18.—On Tuesday afternoon the Women's Missionary Society of the United Churh held its September meeting at the home of Mrs. (Rev.) Johnston. Nine members and five visitors were present. Mrs. Jackson presided and the meeting opened by repeating in unison the new United watchword, "And I, if I be lifted up, shall draw all men unto Me."

After singing a hymn, prayer was offered by Mrs. Johnston.

Several items of business were attended to. Mrs. Jackson then read a portion of the Faith Chapter, found in Hebrews, 11 chapter, and Mrs. Fred. Thompson gave a short interesting paper, "Faith and Adventure," which was based on this portion of Scripture.

The President then introduced the new study book, "New Days in Old India." She was assisted in this by Miss Ada Richardson and Miss Emily Griffiths. The first chapter, "Yesterday and Today in India," was very interesting, and it is expected that the book will be an interesting study for the winter months.

At the conclusion of the meeting tea, sandwiches and cake were served by Mrs. Johnston and the Misses Ada and Elsie Richardson. A social half hour was enjoyed by all present.

Nebraska Creates Dance; Englishman Describes It

LONDON, Sept. 17.—(United Press.)—Nebraska has created a new dance. More vigorous and eccentric than the Charleston, according to 'Beach Comber,' who writes a column in the Daily Express.

Of the development of the "Nebraska Wiggle," as he calls it, "Beach Comber" says:

"The gentleman utters an uncouth yell.

"The lady hunches her shoulders, cracks her fingers and yells back.

"Both kick out backwards and forwards, swiftly and vigorously.

"The gentleman does a back somersault at the same time catching the lady a stunning blow on the jaw with his right heel.

FALL rains soften the subgrade and decrease its resisting power. Exercise judgment in loading and use extreme care in operating your trucks.

Overloaded trucks—especially when driven fast—tear the very heart out of even hard-surfaced roads. Foundations are weakened. Disintegration follows, and then comes the road repair force, who of necessity make your transportation more difficult, while you have created an unnecessarily large repair bill.

While the Provincial Highway Department and the municipal authorities make these repairs, don't forget that you and your neighbors will foot the bill eventually, through taxes. It is to your interest to be public-spirited in this matter—to co-operate sincerely.

The Government believes that the majority of truck owners and drivers will avoid overloading and will refrain from speeding. Others will be given an opportunity to explain as the law will be rigorously enforced.

THE HON. GEO. S. HENRY, Minister of Highways
S. L. SQUIRE, Deputy Minister

Issued by the Ontario Department of Highways to secure the co-operation of motorists and truck operators, Automobile Clubs, Good Roads Associations and all other public spirited bodies, in abating the abuse of the roads of the Province.

Bedtime Stories

The patented Air Blast Ring in McClary's Sunshine Furnace mixes preheated air with the gases and volatiles (soot) in soft coal causing instant combustion with an intensely hot flame the heat of which is immediately felt in the rooms above. The gases and soot are utilized. They do not lodge in the chimneys or flues to clog them up. The all Cast Iron Construction of McClary's Sunshine Furnace enables it to burn coke either alone or mixed with coal without risk of cracking or burning out.

ISLAND SWEPT BY HURRICANE

Entire Sea Front of Turks Island Changed By Gale.

SAILOR KILLED.

HALIFAX, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—The hurricane that swept Turk's Island Thursday carried away all shipping wharves, completely demolished many houses and "changed" the entire seafront, according to a report received by the Halifax & Bermuda Cable Company last night.

During the afternoon the wind reached a velocity of 150 miles an hour, leaving ruin and desolation in its wake, particularly along the coast, where all houses were badly damaged. Hardly a house escaped, the report stated, and many salt lighters were lost.

At the time the message was sent no loss of life had been reported. The island's supply of foodstuffs was short, and assistance was needed.

Sailor Killed in Storm.

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands, Sept. 18.—The Norwegian steamer Hanna Skogland, bound from the Azores for the Panama Canal, put in here with five members of her crew seriously injured as a result of passing through a storm Tuesday night. One sailor died after reaching here. Two passengers also received medical aid.

The sailors were injured while they were at the stern of the vessel repairing the steering gear. A tremendous wave dashed them against the machinery, resulting in broken arms, broken ribs and other injuries.

STORM SWEEPS FLORIDA.

Causeway of Miami Flooded and 'Phones Out of Order.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press.)—Reports to the telegraph companies in Atlanta to-day said that a storm swept a triangular area roughly between Fort Pierce, Okeechobee, and Key Largo, and the wind in some places was blowing between 80 and 100 miles an hour. All wires to Miami and vicinity were down. An unconfirmed report through Key West said that water was flowing over the causeway between Miami and Miami Beach, roofs had been blown off some smaller structures in Miami Beach, and that the flooding of manholes had put the telephone lines out of commission.

Only those officials in the British Civil Service receiving $5,000 a year or more are allowed to have carpets in their offices.

KING CABINET TAKING FORM

POST FOR FORKE.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18. —(Canadian Press).—The Liberal Cabinet which will be announced next week is beginning to take fairly definite form. It is stated here now that Lucien Cannon, who held the portfolio of solicitor general in the last Liberal cabinet, will be post-master general when Mr. King's ministry is announced next week.

From Ontario, James Maicolm now seems to be almost a certainty for the portfolio of trade and commerce and Hon. J. C. Elliott will again take over the department of labor and possibly the department of soldiers civil re-establishment.

There will likely be more than two ministers from Ontario. It now seems extremely likely that Robt. Forke will take over the department of agriculture.

The opinion that Mr. King will attend the Imperial Conference has now gained strength. It is likely that an acting Prime Minister will carry on at least during the opening days of the new parliament while Mr. King is abroad.

ORGAN IN USE FOR LAST TIME

St. Paul's Church Is Having New Instrument Installed.

LATEST MODEL.

After being in use for over forty years, the organ of St. Paul's Presbyterian church will be used tomorrow for the last time, previous to being dismantled and replaced by a new organ, built by the Woodstock Pipe Organ Builders.

The present organ, a three manual instrument with twenty-nine speaking stops, was installed by the congregation in 1885, and through the generosity of Messrs. Richard Hall and C. McGill, trustees of the estate of the late Charlotte Jane Nicholls, was enlarged in 1907. The late D. D. Gallatly was choirmaster at the time of installation. J. Parker was the organist. Six other organists, Messrs. Parker, Arlidge, John Crane, Wildgrist, Allan, Tattersall, and the present organist, Martin Chenhall, have presided at the instrument since its installation. Incumbents of the pulpit since then have been Dr. Torrance, Rev. R. Pogue, and the present pastor, Rev. W. Allan.

D. H. Moore, who has completed forty-nine years as a member of the choir, is the only remaining member of the choir of 1885. The new organ will be a four manual electric instrument, with fifty-eight speaking stops, with all the latest devices, including an echo organ of eight stops to be placed above the ceiling or tower. The new organ is expected to be in use n December 10.

LARKIN DENIES HE IS RETIRING

Says Canada Is Making Progress In Exending Market.

COMPETITORS ACTIVE.

MONTREAL, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner in Great Britain, set at rest rumors regarding his retirement when he landed here to-day from the Canadian Pacific liner Montcalm. He said there was "no truth in the reports." He explained that in accordance with custom he is making his annual visit to Canada, a trip which was postponed in the middle of the summer owing to the political situation, and that he will present a report to the Government on matters pertaining to the extension of Canadian trade in Great Britain. Mr. Larkin emphasized the point that Canada is making progress in extending her markets for produce in Britain, but that Canada must not rest on her laurels else she will find her competitors cutting deeply into the market.

Canada needs to worry more about intensity of production as regards foodstuffs and produce than about her market in Great Britain or the demand there for her merchandise, declared Mr. Larkin.

MOTHER-IN-LAW CASE

Man Would Sacrifice Home to Escape Wife's Mother.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept 17. (C. P).—In a "mother-in-law" case in police court the complainant laid a charge against her daughter's husband, of contributing to the delinquency of his children by using bad language. She also accused him of beating his wife. The magistrate, listening to a counter claim of "interference" suggested that they keep away from each other. "I will sell my house for $1,000, and it is worth almost three times that, to get away from her," the man replied.

Left Penniless . . to fight it out alone

Frail and sorrowful she faces the future with despair.

What work can a woman of sixty do to eke out a precarious living?

If there had only been some insurance—

But Tom had said they'd have enough laid by to tide them through old age without spending money on life insurance.

If Tom could have foreseen the future would he not have carried life insurance? We think so, don't you?

How clearly can you foresee the future? Might not your widow be left as Mrs. L. was?

Why take a chance?—especially when the profits earned by Mutual Life Policies make the cost of insurance so very reasonable.

THREE KILLED IN COLLISION

Two C. P. R. Freights Meet Head-on Near London To-day.

TWO MEN HURT.

CHATHAM, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—Three men were killed, one is dying, and another is seriously injured as the result of a head-on collision on the Canadian Pacific Railway near Kent Bridge, just east of Chatham, at 6.45 o'clock this morning. The trains figuring in the collision were two freight trains. Both were travelling at full speed, and while the track at that point is perfectly straight the trains did not realize their danger until too late to avoid the crash owing to a heavy fog which impaired visibility.

The dead are: David Brown of London, engineer of the west-bound freight; Albert Willsie of London, fireman of the west-bound freight; and G. B. Stewart, London, fireman of the east-bound freight.

The injured are: Robert Robinson, London, brakeman on the west-bound freight, and Edward Rutledge, London, engineer of the east-bound freight. The bodies of Brown and Stewart are still in the wreck. Robinson was moved to the public general hospital here, and Dr. J. W. Rutherford, C.P.R. surgeon, after a complete examination, states that he cannot recover Rutledge is in St. Joseph's Hospital seriously injured, but it is believed he will recover.

The cause of the collision has not yet been determined, and the members of the crew of both trains, who are numbered among the survivors, refuse to discuss the accident. It is presumed that in the fog one of the trains ran past a siding, missing the location on account of the poor visibility. The wreck is a battered mass of wood and iron. The engines are both crushed together as if they were welded on the track, and the point of contact the wreckage is fully thirty feet high.

SPORT NOTES

Peterboro Firemen and Famous Players of Toronto, will play at Toronto this afternoon in the semi-finals of the Ontario Softball Association, and the second game of the home and home series will be played here next Saturday afternoon. The local champions are in good shape to meet the Toronto winners.

Royals at Kingston.

The Royal Midgets, Peterboro's last hope in the O.B.A.A., jorneyed to Kingston this morning to play the Limestone City youngsters this afternoon. The first game billed for Peterboro last Wednesday, was rained out, and Harry McFadden's team will be in luck to get in a game today.

Ponies at Oslers.

The scoreboard to-night will be scanned with interest by local ball fans for the result of the Kingston Oslers game at Toronto this afternoon. The Ponies disposed of Spring at Kingston when after scoring seven runs rain stopped the game. Lefty McCay will oppose Joe Daley's athletes this afternoon.

To Broadcast Fight.

Fight fans will be interested in the announcement that several high powered stations will broadcast the Tunney-Dempsey heavyweight scrap at Philadelphia on Thursday night.

KDKA and WJZ are among the stations announced to give round by round reports of the fight.

JACKSON TEAM WINS DRAWING

NEW RECORD.

The big teams' drawing contest took place yesterday afternoon in front of the grand stand after the horse races. The stone boat was loaded with 6,000 pounds of pig iron and four teams entered the contest, the prize going to J. R. Jackson of Otonabee.

The team pulling the load the furthest in four mintes was the winner. No whips were to be used and time was allowed to repair breaks. Melville De Long was the first man to hitch his team on, and they drew the boat with apparent ease 187 feet in the allotted time. J. R. Jackson's big black team was the next to try and when the horses were taken off it was found that they had drawn the boat 300 feet 4 1-2 inches, breaking all previous records. Mr. Jackson's team drew well together and got away each time to a fine start and were well driven by their driver. John McMannus of Smith was the next to try. His team was not as steady but took second money, drawing the load 216 feet 3 niches. The fourth team was too light, and was entering the lighter class.

THEATRE

"PALM BEACH GIRL."

A sparkling, rollicking comedy, laid in the society atmosphere of Palm Beach and other Florida beauty spots, glorified by the bewitching presence and humorous antics of Bebe Daniels, and depending for its thrills upon speedboat racing is what picture-goers may expect to see at the Capitol Theatre next Monday when "The Palm Beach Girl" begins a three days' run.

Just picture Bebe as a gawky country girl trying to learn the manners and mannerisms of the smart social set, falling in love with a handsome millionaire, adventuring with bootleggers and running wild in a sixty-mile-an-hour speed boat, and you'll begin to realize the hilarious fun and hysterical thrills wrapped up in this picture.

The story was adapted from the yarn of Byron Morgan and the play, "Please Help Emily" by H. M. Harwood, and is packed cram-full of speed, spice and suspense. There are enough funny gags and comedy situations to keep audiences in a constant uproar of laughter. Forrest Halsey wrote the scenario and Erle Kenton wielded the megaphone.

Lawrence Gray, who gave such a good account of himself opposite Gloria Swanson in "Stage Struck" and "The Untamed Lady," is happily cast as Bebe's leading man. Josephine Drake, Marguerite Clayton, John Patrick and Armand Cortes are others who assist Bebe.

Of the many exciting highlights in the production the big speed boat race—actual reproduction of the annual regatta near Miami Beach—is outstanding by virtue of its thundering action and hair-raising thrills.

AT THE GRAND

GEORGE WHITE'S 'SCANDALS.'

Following the most successful season it has yet known in New York and Chicago, the sixth annual edition of George White's "Scandals" is to be presented at the Grand Opera House on Tuesday next.

This edition of the "Scandals" is said to have eclipsed all of Mr. White's former offerings, which is saying much in the light of what he has heretofore given to lovers of this form of entertainment. The current revue will be presented in two acts and thirty elaborate scenes. The company carries a special augmented orchestra so that the numerous song hits and musical numbers may be treated with their full value. The famous Parisian chorus of more than usual beauty appeal has been gathered by Mr. White for the present offering, and there are more than forty of them. They can dance and all have vocal attainments of no mean order. Among the strong cast of principals in the revue are such well-known names as that of Jeane White, sister of the producer, George White, internationally famous for her beauty and dancing, who heads a cast of over one hundred; among them are: Freddie Lightner, Ace Brown, Kimm and Ross, Leland Sisters, Walter Diggs, The De Toregos, Emie De Voa, Marcella Smythe, Stanley Cable, Leora Dietrick, Jennie Lind, The Yarrell Sisters, Rosella McQueen, and the Royal Philipano Sheik orchestra under the direction of Baldy Wetzel. The comedy scenes were built by William K. Wells and George White. Bud de Sylva and Ballard Macdonald have supplied the lyrics and the prolific writer of lilting melodies; George Gershwin has made the score. All the costumes, stage decoration and curtains were designed by Erte and executed by Max Weldy of Paris.

George White, producer of the world's famous "Scandals," 6th annual edition, has presented some really wonderful revues in the past, but excels himself in his sixth annual edition, which comes to the Grand on Tuesday. His current offering is in two parts and thirty elaborate settings. Some of these are the last word in splendor. The New York cast and production will be seen here intact, consisting of over one hundred. The company carries their own special orchestra. Three specially equipped baggage cars are required to transport this collosal production.

PAPER THINKS CANADA MUST TAKE MORE PART

Spectator Supports Suggestion of Canadian as Ambassador to States.

NAMES MENTIONED.

Correspondent Says Empire Conference "Not Worth Five Cents."

LONDON, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—The Spectator, Conservative weekly paper, warmly supports the views expressed by an anonymous correspondent, said to be a well-known Canadian, who thinks Canada must have a greater hand in Empire affairs than it has at present.

The Spectator correspondent suggests that when the present British Ambassador at Washington, Sir Esme Howard, retires, a Canadian like Sir Robert Borden, former Premier of the Dominion; Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, Principal of McGill University; Sir Robert Falconer, President of the University of Toronto, or E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, should be appointed his successor.

The Spectator correspondent declares that the Imperial Conference is not worth five cents "with its junketing and its platitudinous talk."

JACK DEMPSEY WORKS TOO HARD

Jack McAuliffe Says Old-Timers Trained Less For Long Matches.

(By Jack McAuliffe — Undefeated Lightweight Champion of the World, Written for the United Press).

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Sept. 18.—After having seen Jack Dempsey in training for all his championship fights and knowing something about the old-timers, I have always felt that he worked too much. He trains more and works harder for ten rounds than we used to do for a fight to the finish that might go forty or fifty rounds.

I said yesterday that he looked fine and seemed to be working too seriously for a fight that I refuse to consider even a contest. From reliable information I know that Dempsey has taken a gymnasium drill almost daily from the time he won the championship from Jess Willard in Toledo. Routine workouts are good for any man but Dempsey has been going through more than sweating exercises for more than six months, and it is beginning to tell on him.

Yesterday we were all set to go to the dog track and watch him go through his stunts when a telephone call notified us that he was not going to work, that the trainers had called him off for the day.

I thought that it was a smart thing to do. He is so good now that he doesn't need any more work. If I had him in hand I'd take him away to the country, away from sheriffs and process servers, and let him wait for the fight.

But I guess Dempsey is not that kind. Gus Wilson, who is one of his trainers, told me they were trying to make him take things easy, but that he would not do it, and he is just that kind of fighter. He won't do anything half-way. I would be concerned about Dempsey if he were going into a fight against a real contestant, but I think so little of Tunney's chances that I know Dempsey is in no danger, and that if he is able to stand on his feet he will win the fight in a very few rounds, and he certainly can stand on his feet, and sock.

PLANNING . BUILDING . FINANCING
DECORATING . FURNISHING . GARDENING

A Captivating Colonial Bungalow

(By Storey and Van Egmond, Architects.)

The fine Colonial entrance of this bungalow with its imposing pediment and massive disengaged columns is in itself sufficient to indicate that the home belongs to the better class. Even though one be unfamiliar with architecture and architectural detail, which after all are only causes, it does not detract from the appeal of the effect.

With regard to construction and an economical solution of the problems of strength and beauty, a shingle roof and frame and stucco walls on a concrete foundation are an excellent choice of materials. Neither should one overlook the fact that the wide use of stucco has resulted in the inception of a great variety of finishes. The surface may be smooth, slightly textured or rough trowelled and other effects are obtained by the use of small stones and broken colored glass.

For this house we would suggest that the walls be white or some light shade of cream and that a well defined contrast be assured by the selection of the paint or stain for all wood trim. The wide werat table at the floor level reduces the apparent height of the walls and will fail to function as it should if not made to stand out prominently.

Considering the moderate cost, $5,000, and the commensurate dimensions of this home the floor plan reveals commodious accommodation and several interesting features.

By the substitution of a large area of glass in place of solid walls the front hall has been converted into a sunroom while still serving to a great extent in the capacity of the former. The large living-room including dining alcove with built-in seats and table is 13 ft. x 17 ft. At the end of this room is a door leading to the hall, bedrooms and bathroom and another to the kitchen. The grade entrance to kitchen and cellar is a great convenience and one you are strongly advised to incorporate in the plans of your new home.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications of this house should communicate with the architect direct. Address Messrs. Storey and Van Egmond, McCallum Hill Building, Regina, Sask. Copyright 1926, MacLean Building Reports Limited.

Question: If I engage a contractor is he entitled to part payment before the house is finished? If so, when should I pay him and how much at a time?

Get a standard form of agreement between contractor and home builder from your stationer and fill it out with your contractor. Write into the proper place the total amount of money to be paid. Then write in a paragraph providing for partial payments as the work proceeds—that is to say, at 30 day intervals. Provide for the payment of all bills for labor done and materials delivered on the job. Pay the contractor no money until he can first show you receipted bills. Get a mechanic's lien release for every item. Hold out 15 per cent until 30 days after the work is turned over to you completed. Get an architect to help you draw the papers.

Question: Our plans call for casement windows. We have thought of using steel sash. Are they effective? Do they cost more? Can we have the same size sash as shown on plans?

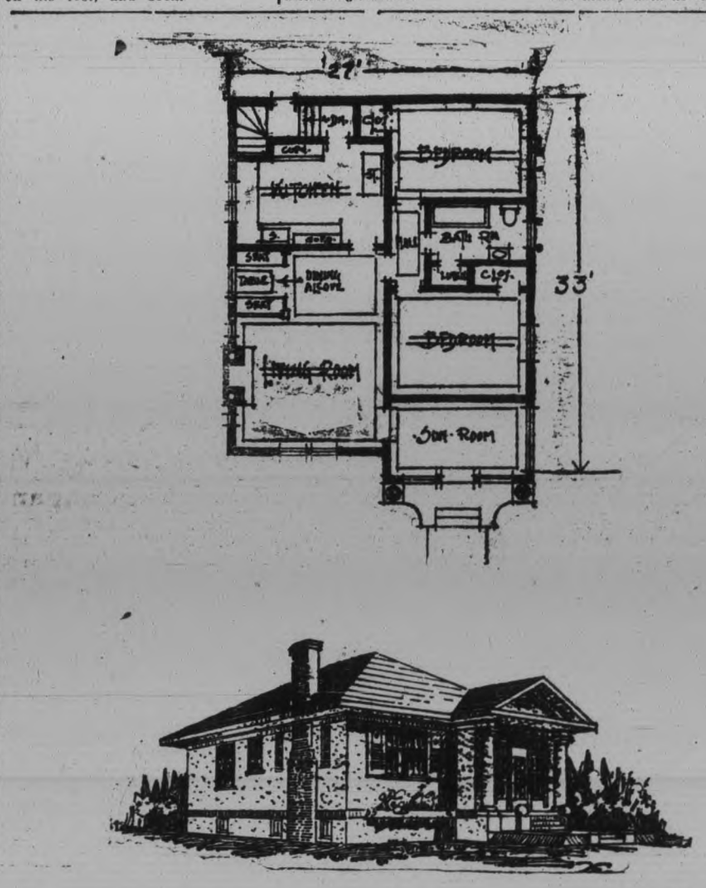
Steel sash are effective. They cost more than wooden sash, but the difference is not great. The steel sash manufacturers have standardized their product so that stock sizes are available. Unless your window openings are quite unusual, approximately the same size sash may be used.

Question: Many manufacturers offer catalogs and leaflets dealing with building materials and household appliances. Can one depend upon the information they give as being fair and unbiased?

Manufacturers of good products and manufacturers of poor ones make similar representations in their catalogs. You may rely with confidence on the statements made by well-known manufacturers of high-grade products. They cannot afford to make false statements. Use materials that bear a good reputation and that are backed by the guarantees of reputable manufacturers. Ask your architect.

Question: The floor along one side of our living-room has sunk nearly an inch although the house was built last summer. There are also large cracks in the plaster in the wall above where the settlement shows. What is the cause; how can we remedy it?

There has been settlement here. This has been caused either by shrinkage in materials or by settlement of the foundations—probably the latter. Get an architect to look over your building to see what the real circumstances are. He will prescribe the necessary repairs.



ECONOMIC ACCORD BETWEEN NATIONS

France and Germany Will Enter Into Friendly Partnership.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 18. (Canadian Press)—That the Franco-German accord planned by Foreign Ministers Briand and Stresemann will be fundamentally of an economic nature was confirmed today by a German spokesman.

Both France and Germany, he said, desire to transform the existing system of pledges, growing out of the Treaty of Versailles, into a friendly partnership whereby they would combine their interests.

Chrysler Model Numbers Mean Miles Per Hour.

The success of the Chrysler "70" Coach is one of the most outstanding instances of the public acceptance of the unique advantages resulting from the Chrysler plan of Standardized Quality.

Chrysler Standardized Quality of superb engineering and precise and enduring manufacturing produced results in speed, acceleration, dependability, comfort, handling ease and long life never before achieved by a motor car of such price.

Standardized Quality also developed a smart and graceful coach body as distinctive as the chassis—with quality, luxury and refinement far beyond ordinary practice in cars of this type.

Generous room; upholstery of beautiful and durable fabric; doors of unusual width to afford unusual convenience in getting in and out; artistic grouping of instruments and controls; electric fumer and a manifold heat control, for better motor operation; and a host of other conveniences which Chrysler pioneered and which are still exclusive with Chrysler.

Come in. We are eager to have you see and appreciate these incomparable qualities. Then and only then can you appreciate what an amazing value the Chrysler "70" Coach is at its price of $2030.

You never have driven a car so quiet and free from the vibration that causes closed car rumble as the 1927 McLaughlin-Buick.

Electricity might be its motive power, so effortless is the power-flow and change of pace.

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan's disillusioned father had warned him: "Destroy women or they will destroy you; take their love scornfully—and forget." This advice has made Juan the greatest lover of all time. But his cynicism is suddenly checked by the disarming innocence of Madonna-like Adriana Varanese. Loving her madly, he reforms. Infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves Juan, and Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana, institute a reign of terror in Rome against the lovers. They capture Adriana and her father, Duke Varanese. To save her father's life Adriana agrees to marry Donati.

She felt as if her body had been torn to pieces, as if the whole world had come tottering about her. Nothing was left in life for her now. She must give Juan up, which was far worse than giving up life itself.

She could hear people shouting in the streets, and then falling suddenly silent as the swift clatter of horses' hoofs sound on the rough stones before the palace. Suddenly she hated the spring night's beauty, the calm whiteness of the moon, the fragrance of the flowers that swayed in the breeze as if tragedy had not stalked past them a few moments before.

She hated life and all that it would hold for her. Sobbing, she collapsed in the arms of her maid, wishing that death could claim her, yet knowing that for her father's sake she could not seek it.

Juan, at that moment, was impatiently pacin gthe floor of the hall of his house, pausing to look out of the window, turnihg to tramp the length of the room again. As the door opened he turned quickly, then hurried forward as Pedrillo ran breathlessly toward him.

"It is true!" the man cried. "Cardinal Orsini has been thrown into prison—St. Angelo—and they say that the Duke Della Varanese is sure to be next!"

Juan caught his breath sharply. If they took Varanese—if Adriana was unprotected, with that pack of wolves, the Borgias and their retainers, ready to fall upon her—horrible!

He felt himself trembling, shaken as he never had been before. The thought of her being in danger unnerved him; for an instant he could not think clearly, could not feel anything but fear for the girl whom he adored, and devastating anger toward the two men who had plotted against her.

Then he clenched his hands, pulled himself together.

"My cape—my sword!" he said curtly to Pedrillo.

The man hesitated, almost protested. This was no night for his master to be abroad, he told himself. Far better to stay at home, within the mellow light of the tall tapers, with some beautiful woman to make him forget that rape and murder stalked the streets of Rome.

Shaking his head, Pedrillo scurried away. Useless to argue with the master in this mood! And yet—if only something would happen to keep him here, something that, detaining Juan, would also keep Pedrillo safe within the barred doors.

There would be trouble, Pedrillo told himself sadly. The master was pacing the floor impatiently, calling even now "Make haste!" Eager to take his sword and be out into the night, in the service of that white slip of a girl. Curious, that she of all the many who had come into Don Juan's life should be the one to win his heart!

"Had he but taken the Borgia, how much better!" sighed Pedrillo to himself. "She would have fallen like ripe fruit into his arms, and there would have been nothing of all this!"

His taper went out, and he paused to re-light it, expecting another impatient shout from Juan at any moment. But Juan at that moment was other wise occupied; for an instant he had forgotten his servant. For at the sound of a step behind him and of the murmur of his name in a woman's voice he had turned, to see Lucretia Borgia standing in the doorway.

She was wrapped in a long, heavy cape, whose hood was drawn over her head and drawn down so that her face was almost concealed. But her great dark eyes looked out from the hood's shadow at Juan, and the cruel curve of her voluptuous red lips was visible even before she threw back the hood.

For a moment she stood staring defiantly at him. Then, after a swift glance at Juan's face, she shrugged her shoulders diffidently, and walked slowly toward him. That one glance had told her that her errand was in vain, so far as winning him was concerned. She would have to rely on the plans that she had laid so carefully, not on her own beauty and the magnetism of her presence.

"What are you doing here?", he demanded, and his voice was like the lash of a whip.

Never had she been so spoken to before.

"Twice I summoned you, and you ignored me," she replied, and she might have been any serving maid sueing for his favor, so humble was she. "Tonight I put aside my pride and came to you."

She lifted her face to his, looking up at him from beneath heavy-lidded eyes; her whole body relaxed, yielding. Juan studied her contemptuously. The Borgia—like all the others, except the frail, lovely girl who held his heart in the hollow of her slim little hand.

Pedrillo, coming in hastily, was halfway across the room before he realized who it was who stood there facing his master. He would have beat a quick retreat then, but Juan turned to him, summoning him curtly.

Abashed, Pedrillo brought the sword for which he had been sent. Juan buckled it on, and turned for the cape to be laid about his shoulders.

Juan motioned to him to leave the room, and would have followed him, ignoring Lucretia, had she not stepped forward and touched his arm.

"Where are you going?" she asked.

"You well know where I am going," he told her. "To the Palazzo della Varanese. May I arrive in time!"

Lucretia's breath was like a knife in her throat. It hurt her to breathe. She hated this man, and hated herself for loving him. Before his audacity she felt helpless for a moment. It would be easy to dispose of him as various members of the Orsini family had been disposed of that night; death could be made to snatch him swiftly and hideously.

The only trouble was that she did not want to live without him: For a moment more she stood there staring at him; then pride and the resourcefulness that had always been hers came to her aid. If one could not win a man in one way, it could be done in another!

She smiled, cynically. Beneath her cape her hands twisted and tore at each other, but outwardly she seemed merely amused at his stupidity.

"You fool!" she exclaimed, and laughter ran through her voice. "So you think Donati will allow any harm to come to her?"

She was quite unprepared for the mockery in Juan's smile; every word was a taunt as he replied:

"Do you think for a moment that I believe you? If I did, then indeed would I be a fool!"

Lucretia turned cold with fury, her limbs trembled, and she caught at the back of a high, carved chair to steady herself, gripping it so tightly that the edges of the carving cut into her hands.

Yet she controlled her voice when she spoke again.

WEDDING SHOWER

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 17. — On Monday evening over one hundred of the friends and neighbors of Miss Mildred White met at the home of her parents and presented Miss White with a miscellaneous shower previous to her marriage on Wednesday.

F.Barnard made a brief address, stating that although Miss White was going to a home of her own in the near future, her friends were all delighted to know that she would still be in the community, and also wishing her every happiness in her future life. Miss White, in a few well chosen words, thanked those present for their thoughtfulness and beautiful gifts. After which every one joined in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The gifts presented were numerous and very useful, and the young bride received the good wishes of the entire community.

A splendid lunch was served by the ladies during the evening.

Car Turns Turtle

On Sunday last a six-cylinder McLaughlin car ran over a culvert a quarter of a mile south of the village. The car with its occupants turned completely over and righted itself again in the ditch. Fortunately no one had was seriously injured, but after the car had been driven back on the road on its own power, it took fire, and before it could be prevented the cushions, top and body of the car were completely burned. The only part of the car which was not injured to any extent was the tires, wheels, and the engine was only slightly damaged. The cause for the fire starting was unknown. G. F. Fletcher of the local garage has purchased the car.

Personals

Miss Verna Fell of Peterborough has been spending a few days with friends in Cavan, and attended the Johnston and White wedding on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bebee, Mrs. W. Rutherford, Miss M. Greer and D. Rutherford have spent the past week on a motor trip to St. Catharines.

CORN ROAST HELD BY REBEKAH LODGE

MILLBROOK, Sept. 18.—A very jolly time was spent on Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fallis, Fallis Line, when over one hundred guests were present, the occasion being the annual "corn roast" under the auspices of Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No. 176.

A big bonfire wts lighted in the yard, and round this the "roast" was enjoyed, generous supplies of various kinds of pies, with big plates of bread and butter, and plenty of hot tea, rounding out the menu satisfactorily.

Community games filled up the time happily until the corn was readily, a previous boiling on the kitchen range making it more palatable than when merely held over the flames of the bonfire.

A "barn dance" was a feature of the evening especially enjoyed by the yonnger members of the company before the gathering finally broke up. This is the second year Mr. and Mrs. Fallis have kindly extended the hospitality of their house and grounds for the enjoyable event, and many expressions of appreciation were offered as the guests bade their host and hostess farewell, and the last carload left for home.

W.M.S. Re-Opening.

The re-opening meeting of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the United Church, for the fall and winter months, was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. L. S. Clarry, who is second vice-president of the organization.

In spite of unfavourable weather about thirty members were in attendance, and many plans were discused for the season's activities. The president, Mrs. (Rev.) F. H. Howard, was in the chair for the opening business period during which a letter was read from the Presbyterial secretary, stating that an allotment of $21,000 has been placed upon the seventy-one auxiliaries, with the circles and bands, of the Cobourg Presbyterial. The local Auxiliary has as its allocation $467.50, and a a recent meeting of the Executive the amount was accepted as reasonable, and the group leaders, with the officers of the Society, were made a finance committee to arrange for raising the sum required. The circle and band will co-operate in reaching the objective, which is not a very great advance on the amount remitted to the Branch Treasurers last year.

The Executive is called to meet at the Parsonage on Wednesday, September 22, at 3 p.m. for further arrangements in this matter.

Mrs. I. McKnight, president of the Golden Links Circle, announced that one of the Mission Circles in Rev. Mr. Whattam's church, Oshawa, is combining with the local Circle in holding a "rummage sale" on October 1, in the latter city, and request was made for supplies to be left at Mr. V. C. Lambert's by the last week in this month. The number of foreigners in the section to be reached by the sale promises raeady disposal of all articles, particularly of clothing, which can possibly be secured. Locally the people find it impossible to meet the demand from this source.

The "Watch Tower" was taken up, Mrs. W. E. Smith giving an interesting talk on the British Guiana mission field, and afterwards Mrs. H. W. Johnston sang a solo, "What will you give to Jesus?" which was much enjoyed.

The devotional leaflet, "Ambitions of the Prayer Life," was read by Mrs. J. McKnight, and the new studybook, "India of Today, and Tomorrow" was taken up. Dr. Frank H. Russell, who has been for thirty-three years connected with the Central India Mission, is the author, and the book promises to be decidedly interesting and instructive. The Canadian United church has Central India as its field, with 4,000,000 people as its responsibility to evangelise, and because a crisis in India now faces the Christian church and it was felt an intelligent knowledge of the situation is necessary, with the fact that the Central Indian Mission celebrates its fiftieth anniversary in 1927, this book was chosen for study during the current church year.

Group B, Mrs. Ross Edmunds convener, was in charge of the programme, and later assisted the daughters of the home, Misses Gertrude, Blanche, and Gussie Clarry, and Mrs. Max Cameron, in serving lunch.

Miss S. Dean moved the formal vote of thanks to Mrs. Clarry for extending the hospitality of her home for the gathering, and the latter made an appreciative reply.

Among those present were: Mrs. J. L. Byam, Mrs. W. H. Byam, Mrs. W. H. Smith, Mrs. H. J. Armstrong, Mrs. A. J. Brown, Mrs. W. Mullen, Mrs. H. Skitch, Mrs T. Luxon, Mrs. C. W. Richards, Mrs. F. H. Howard, Mrs. R. H. and Mrs. Ross Edmunds, Mrs. C. C. Garside, Mrs. J. Hatherly, Mrs. (Rev.) Jos. Wilks, Mrs. J. Turner, Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. George Locke, Mrs. Harry Dawson, Mrs. O. Williamson, Mrs. W. H Johnston, Mrs. (Dr.) Rea, Mrs. (Rev.) Stillwell, Mrs. W. West, Mrs. David Lunn, Misses S. Dean, N. Hetherington, A. Hamilton, Mary Widdis, M. McFee, S. MOTHER URGES SON TO CONFESS

Mrs. Ormiston Says She Cannot Believe His Present Story.

VERY MUCH HURT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—In an interview in The Examiner, Mrs. W. C. Ormiston, mother of Kenneth G. Ormiston, declared she was "tired of all this deception" and called upon her son to tell the authorities the truth concerning his part in the Aimee McPherson disappearance.

"With this great mass of evidence showing that Mrs. McPherson was not kidnapped, and with warrants issued for her arrest, there is no use for even a mother to try to persude herself that the story told by my son is true," Mrs. Ormiston said.

"We tried to bring him up as a God-fearing, righetous man and until he met Mrs. McPherson there was nothing to mar our joy and our pride in him. Since then, there has been nothing but trouble. When Kenneth sent his letters to the District Attorney we were hurt, for in them our son confessed a wrong but we believed them. Now we cannot. He must come forward and tell the truth."

Flares Temper Straight Silhouette

This frock, although of tailored genre, diverges from severe simplicity in a rather interesting way, introducing a one-sided effect. Plain fabric makes a smart flare at the left side of the skirt, and harmonizes in tone with the background of the bordered kasha, chosen to develop this chic frock. The collar is convertible, and the front closing is of the new diagonal type, long rolling revers ending in a pointed tab. The back is plain, and the tailored sleeves are finished with trim little cuffs. No. 1294 is in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Size 38 bust requires 5½ yards 39-inch, or 4 yards 54-inch material. Price 20 cents.

The secret of distinctive dress lies in good taste rather than a lavish expenditure of money. Every woman should want to make her own clothes, and the home dressmaker will find the designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book to be practical and simple, yet maintaining the spirit of the mode of the moment. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT.

(Written for the United Press.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(United Press.)—Fringe again becomes extremely popular for evening occasions, forming tiered skirt effects, cape-backs, hem-finishes, etc. Both silk and beaded fringes are used and among the newer silk types are fringes printed in contrasting designs. One can purchase this printed fringe by the yard and it is most effective if combined with a dress of georgette of the same color as the background of the fringe.

For instance, a Nile green georgette frock has a two-tiered skirt formed of Nile green fringe printed with huge pinkish roses with deeper green stems and leaves. The fringe in narrower width is repeated on the rear bodice where it forms a deep bertha effect. Hawaiian straw fringe in gay colors is also among the novelties. Metal fringe adorns metal-cloth wraps and gowns.

Vivid-hued dresses of afternoon or evening type invariably use the large ragged chrysanthemum as a shoulder corsage. The flower matches exactly the shade of the frock, often being made of the same material.

Transparent velvets are entering into the mode for Fall. Some plain velvets are so sheer that they are transparent when held to the light and checks and plaids of velvet designed on chiffon backgrounds also supply the demand for transparency.

Since Fall will see much black in frocks and wraps, the colored georgette handkerchief edged with wide black silk lace or net becomes a smart accessory. Little squares of ecru georgette bordered deeply in black lace make an adorable handkerchief for dress wear. One can make these kerchiefs at little cost and with little effort.

Evening slippers need not match the gown with which they are worn, according to the Fashionables. Recently we have seen smart women adopting such combinations as pink satin slippers and pink hosiery with white beaded frocks, green brocaded slippers and flesh hosiery with coral-hued frocks and Chanel red satin slippers with fushia-toned frocks.

Chiffon is at present by all odds the most important material for the evening gown. Younger women prefer plain chiffon unadorned except by skirt embellishments of self material, whereas matrons prefer beaded chiffons with softly bloused backs and gently flaring hemlines.

Often the little patent leather hat-box which we see girls carrying holds nothing more than a neatly folded rubberized raincoat and rubberized rain hat. If caught in a rain storm Milady dons these rubberized garments placing her street hat in the hatbox until the storm is over.

Diagnosis — Insufficient development of the muscular walls of the abdomen and stomach. Often this results, too, from careless posture, the wearing of too high heels, or a weakness of the vital organs that needs medical attention.

Treatment—Exercise that strengthens the muscles releieves this unbeautiful condition. Try this — lie flat on the floor, and with the knee bent, bring the leg as far over the chest as you can, exercising first one leg and then the other, and finally both at the same time. This exercise also helps make the contour of the legs more symmetrical.

SHE DESCRIBES A UNUSUAL AFTERNOON FROCK

To begin with the earliest indications of the season seemed to show that velvet would be one of the foremost fabrics for Fall and Winter. And true enough the velvet models shown in the earliest opening at the shop were eagerly surveyed by the clients and many orders were given for duplicates of the originals.

Madame decided then and there that she would have a large call for velvets so she set to work to design a number of them. She has had great success with them already for practically every client who has come in to town after Summering in the country has come to look and stayed to buy either one velvet frock or several.

"Your afternoon velvets are so lovely I must have one" a client said. Then she added "I came to buy a velvet evening gown and your velvet evening gowns are so lovely I must have one of them too."

My favorite of the whole collection happens to be a black and white model for afternoon. It is very simply made relying on its simplicity of line and the distinction of its fabric combination. Also it could be easily copied and that is another reason I am saving a sketch of it in my diary. I may be able to afford a few yards of extra fine velvet later in the season and if I make the dress at all I am going to insist on the best quality of chiffon velvet I can find.

The skirt is of white velvet made on a white China silk bodice. As Madame says:

There is a narrow band of the black velvet about the bottom of the skirt and above it are horizontal lines and discs of gold thread.

If one wanted colors instead of black, the same frock would be effective in brown and gold-colored velvet, or in dark and light blue. This latter combination, by the way is one much favored by Paris for the Fall season.

HER OWN WAY

JUDY WONDERS

"I will have to leave you now, John," I said, "for I have had a very strenuous day and I want to do honor to you tonight, consequently I am going to rest a while to smooth out the wrinkles about my mouth and eyes."

Involuntarily I saw a sneering look on the face of Mr. Symington, which deepened as John Meredith said, "Those are not wrinkles, Judy, they are the crinkles which smiling makes."

"Judy, Judy," I heard Joan speaki my name.

"Here I am, dear," I answered.

"Will you please come here a moment?"

With a nod to the two men I sped toward the light. There I found Joan at her desk which had been placed in one corner of the great book room. She had evidently just hung up the receiver of the telephone.

"I have just invited that nice Mr. Hathaway to go with us to dinner tonight, Judy."

Then, as always, when I thought of Jerry I wondered if I were really in love wi h him

Was it love when one had a f ling of th absolute dependability of man? Since th first nigh I had known Jerry Hathawa I had no felt alone. I knew that in whatever dilemma I would find myself I could rest upon his sure aid to help me out.

"But," I asked myself, "if I loved him well enough to tie myself to him for life why should I have this heart fluttering and surprised at the sight of John Meredith, at the touch of his hand, yes, even at the sound of his caressing voice?"

Was ever a girl who prided herself on her decision of character so undecided; was ever a girl so hard and cold that she weighed one man against another and used her own brain for the balance?

Summer Noon

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THERE is something near to magic in lying flat on the ground, in the grass, on the hay, or on the cool of a hillside. Something soothing seems to ooze from the earth and one finds oneself giving a deep down sigh and then all of a sudden relaxing. We're so anxious to develop the children that we often keep them doing things and fail to consider that to lie quietly and listen and feel is just as valuable training as the running and playing upon which we concentrate.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—Condemnation of political "muckraking" in the recent Federal election campaign was made in an executive report unanimously approved at last night's meeting of the Ottawa Allied Trades and Labor Association. ONCE UPON A TIME — THE WINGED HORSE—VIII — by W. J. ENRIGHT.

DETAINED AT THE OFFICE

HOW MUCH OF IT'S TRUE?

By J. TURNBULL.

Many excuses have been given by delinquent husbands in vain attempts to explain their absence from home or their inability to attend certain social functions that their wives have ordained they should attend. In this connection, perhaps, the one excuse that has served more than any other is the old standby "I've been detained at the office." Like charity it covers a multitude of sins and will probably keep in use just as long as the men folk keep disillusioned and think they are putting it over. Pick up any magazine and within its covers you will find various tales woven around this excuse, all of them colored to suit the style of the magazine. The stories run all the way from the husband who is endangering his social standing for the sake of some dear friend whom the world thinks to be a crook while his staunch friend (the husband) is the only person who knows the real truth, to the sort of story that is to be found within that type of magazine unfortunately only too popular with the younger element, wherein the husband is pictured enjoying himself at some road house with other women while his trusting wife pines away at home totally unaware of his actions and believing him to be the "perfect" man.

From the variety of stories that one reads it would appear as if the excuse or reason really did exist and that most husbands had occasion to resort to its use at one time or another.

One case is on record of a husband, if we are to believe it, of the old fashioned truthful kind that always came home when expected and goes where he is told irrespective of his own inclinations. Coming out of his office one day he met an old friend—a chum of his army days—and immediately the ties of former days made themselves felt and the two journeyed off to renew once again the friendship that had been broken when they were demobilized. They started out and during the evening consumed a quantity of beer (probably for the purpose of giving the right setting to the scene) and some time later the fond husband realized that his erstwhile chum, while a welcome guest, had detained him so long that his absence from home would have to be explained. All the way home he tried to figure out an excuse, in the vain hope that his wife would swallow it and still keep him in her good graces. At last, an idea struck him and of course it was the old old story, "detained at the office." He eventually reached home, and on being met by his wife told her that he was detained at the office through one of the directors requiring his assistance on some matter pertaining to the work. The excuse worked fine and apparently everything was fine. On reaching home a few days later he was surprised to find his wife in a militant mood. Enquiring the reason he was shown a newspaper item which stated that so-and-so, the director in his company, had died a few days before the time he had told his wife he had been with him. In the tirade that ensued, the truth naturally came out, his wife admonishing him to tell her the truth in future, and he would have nothing to fear.

Some time after, as luck would have it, he met another old friend of bygone days, and with his wife's assurance ringing in his ears, he foolishly thought he was at liberty to repeat his previous performance. When he arrived home, however, he was subjected to the usual barrage of questions and truthfully answered that he had been out with a friend. And then the storm broke with a vengeance. He found himself combed to a frazzle, his wife only easing when she ran out of words. As he plaintively told a friend, "What's a fellow going to do—if he tells a lie, he is caught—if he tells the truth he gets——."

This story is probably true in the majority of cases and the remedy apparently lies with the individual husband. If he is of the cave man style he can go out without fear of the consequences, knowing that all he has to do when he comes home is to say, "I've been out," but alas for the henpecked specimen for him there is no remedy, he will just naturally die that way.

You may say, in your ignorance, that wives don't do these things and that they never worry about their husband's absence but they do, and the following should prove it. One fond hubby, a resident of Peterborough, and an ardent worker in the local Kiwanis Club, found it out during the recent campaign on behalf of the "safely first" movement. He, with several other members, was out all one night painting warnings on the streets. At 4.10 a.m. The Examiner telephone rang, and instead of a sizzling news story it was merely an enquiry from a Kiwanianeen asking if anybody at the office could tell where her husband was as he had not arrived home. She was informed that he probably was out with the Kiwanians who were decorating the streets, and seemed satisfied with the answer, which would indicate that it was no unusual occurrence for Kiwanians to stay out all night in their charitable labors.

The excuse, inquiries reveal, has often been used and has generally been accepted, but some men claim that it is overworked and the wise man has invented a substitute which eliminates the possibility of his being caught. We have omitted mentioning some of the newer excuses in case the wife should perchance pick up this section and read them!

THE FATAL MOMENT

It had happened to him at last.

For a good many long years he had watched for it in vain. It seemed to be a part of the pattern of oddity woven about his life. For many years the conviction had been growing in him that he was different, set apart from most men—discouragingly and uncannily different. It gave him moments of what was not entirely unlike shame and he had known sleepless hours in which his mind fastened itself to what had become his obsession, with death-like obstinacy.

But, at last, it happened to him. He had seen it happen to men in all departments of life—in the movies, in the fiction and chronicles of all nations. It was a commonplace of the daily press, the weekly magazine, the comic reviews. Everywhere he turned it was always happening to some one, but never, never, it seemed, would it happen to him.

Then one day in late August, at a time when his mind was far removed from The Trouble of his life (it was while he was stuffing his shirt into his trousers), his collar button fell to the floor and rolled—O Miracle of Miracles!—straight under the bed.

The Lords Of Creation Number

(For Men Only)

Apart from a few insignificant isolated communities in Polynesia, society in general has been based on the theory that men are, indeed, nominally at least, "Lords of Creation." The earliest known social unit which has come down from prehistoric times is the family. The Semitic family is patriarchal and polygamous; the Aryan family is monogamous. Differing in many points, these two great divisions of mankind were in agreement in this respect—the man was supreme. Among the Aryans, a woman on marriage left her home, her gods, and her ancestors and assumed the gods, the ancestors and the home of her husband. The daughter was not equal to the son, for upon him devolved the sacred duties of continuing the family line, and of keeping alive the ever-burning fire, sacred to the memory of his ancestors.

Very early in their history, the Semites evolved the idea of obedience to one head, the patriarch—always a man. Members of the family had little personal liberty. The wives and children were practically slaves. Love was strongly in evidence, but it always ranked second to the great idea of obedience.

As the great Aryan family divided, never again to be re-united, a variety of customs and of forms of government was manifested, but in all of them, woman occupied a decidedly subordinate position, even in Greece the home of the highest point of Aryan civilization. From Homeric times, family life in Greece was marked by the tenderest feelings, the highest ideals and most marked dignity. The love of Penelope for Ulysses, the tender and affectionate parting of Hector and Andromache, the heroism of Alcestis, the filial piety of Antigone, the majesty and grandeur of Polyxena, the sweet, modest love of Nausica, are, as Lecky says, "pictures of perennial beauty, which Rome and Christendom, chivalry and modern civilization have neither eclipsed nor surpassed." Even in this golden age, women were still servants, performing the household duties, carrying water and grinding flour. When Athens reached the zenith of its glory, woman was yet excluded from all participation in the political life of the city and state, and did not share in the intellectual life of her husband. Thus, as the family merged into a tribe, the tribe into a community and the community into a state, the rulers and governors were, with a few notable historic exception, drawn from the male members of society. Men have made the laws: women and some men have obeyed them.

Many explanations might be offered for the inferior status to which women were relegated. Probably in the most primitive society the reason was simply man's physical superiority. It is also noteworthy that, in the early stages of all the world's great religions, woman was enjoined to be satisfied to be under the overlordship of man. Take the famous passage in Genesis, 3-18, "Thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee;" and the equally well-known exhortations in the epistles of Paul and Peter in the New Testament: commanding woman to be silent in church; the male Mohammedan has at all times been the dominant factor, and the Jewess has always been overshadowed by her male relatives.

Only last week, a distinguished visitor to Peterborough related an ancient myth, which illustrates the extent to which the idea of male domination had taken possession of people of another race and religion. The Right Rev. Arthur Lea, D.D., Bishop of Kyu-Shu, Japan, speaking to the local Kiwanis Club on Friday of last week, gave an interesting account of the Japanese tradition concerning the origin of the earth. The Japanese counterparts of Adam and Eve were Izanagi and Izanami, who formed the islands of Japan by the simple expedient of stirring the bottom of the Pacific Ocean. The pair set off in opposite directions round the world, and on being reunited with her husband, the woman cried out her joy and delight, only to be sternly rebuked by her husband for initiating the conversation. At her suggestion, the pair again made the trip round the world, and on coming face to face with her husband, the wife meekly remained silent until that imperious gentleman gave expression to the thoughts of his lordly brain, thereby tacitly conceding the supremacy vested in the Japanese male for all time.

There is no doubt that in a rude and barbarous age, man, with his more rugged physique and coarser temperament was more fitted to lead the way, than was his frailer helpmate. Further, there is equally little doubt that the extraordinary woman is less endowed mentally than is the man of genius. Where are the female Newtons and Darwins in science? There are no female Beethovens or Wagners; no soft, slight fingers have torn the poet's crown from the brow of Shakespeare, or carved the dead marble into the living statuary of Michael Angelo or transferred inspired thought to the canvas of Titian or Rembrandt. No female brain has conceived a St. Paul's or St. Peter's, and even in this day of woman's emancipation and achievement, May Sinclair and Edner Ferber are a few stages lower than H. G. Wells and Thomas Hardy. Particularly in the realm of creative effort have women found themselves outclassed by men.

Curiously enough, in one of the least likely forms of competition—that of strength and endurance!—woman has come forward to dispute the predominance of man; witness the accomplishment of the Channel swim by two women where more likely male candidates were vanquished. But the mere man, contemplates the prospect with equanimity, chivalrously applauds the triumph, and a few days later repeats the feat, just going a little bit better than did the lady champions.

In other lines of endeavor, the removal of long standing barriers has not seriously threatened the rule of the Lord of Creation. The universities have been thrown open to women; few careers have been denied them. Parliament, the bar and commerce are open, but the leadership in all walks of life is still male.

Never at any period of time was the predominance of the man more vigorously challenged; never at any period has that predominance been more signally vindicated. The world's work and the task of breaking new ground on the soil of civilization will continue to be in the hands of the men. Men must work, although, not necessarily must women weep.

It really seems that there is some thing after all in the old theory that woman's function is to act as a refining and enobling influence. In this sense, at least, woman is certainly the acting member of civilization. Man is not a solitary animal, but neither is he a flock animal, and the primitive unit of society, the family, will continue to claim the most of his attention. But the atmosphere of that family will be influenced by the woman and through the family this influence will permeate the community of families, the state. Generally speaking, the large majority of women are solidly behind and are the inspiration of any real tangible step towards a higher order of society. Despite her love of finery, and her frequent bread-and-butter outlook, woman is now acting as a brake on the headlong progress of society towards a gross materialism. But she makes a mistake when she sets out to reform society herself. Few causes that have been led by women have been conspicuously successful. The case of Joan of Arc bulks so large in history because it has so very few parallels. Man is the natural leader. Woman is most effective when she remains in the rear, to follow, to encourage, to pass on the ammunition and help to keep up the morale of the man on the job—the Lord of Creation.

Even As You And I

Now a most perplexing question haunts my hitherto pacific,
Calm and peaceable existence, and it bothers me a lot,
For so greatly am I worried that my writings—once prolific,
Fall away to rare effusions—and I'm now producing rot.
It is this way! I have pledged undying ardor for a maiden;
We have bargained for a parson and the marriage dope's unfurled,
It's an unpropitious moment to be blue and sorrow-laden,
But what about the babies in the rest of all the world?
Am I passing up some bimbo in the verdurous Bahamas?
Could it be I'm missing cuties that reside in Ecuador?
Is there one in Barcelona who would be the cat's pyjamas?
How about the dusky sweeties in the City of Lahore?
Should I start upon a tour to the Isle of Madagascar,
And explore it for a beauty who'd consent to be my queen?
I should find the coldest knockout that the world has ever seen!
Lives there in McCook, Neb., any lollia-palooza,
Who'd be worthy of attention from a marriageable man?
What goes on in Harper's Ferry, Roanoke, and Tuscaloosa, Mobile Bay and Chattanooga, Baton Rouge, and Princess Anne?
Are there any winsome wonders hiding out in Nova Scotia,
Of unquestioned social standing and with knowledge of their stuff?
Would I find some wows delightful in Sheboygan or Kenosha?
Well, in other words, doggone it—have I looked around enough?

—Edwin Rutt.

COULD YOU BLAME HIM?

"Come with me," she said, and led the way to a secluded seat in the garden

There was adventure in her eyes, a wild light that danced. The moonlight was on her hair. Her feet, in their silver pumps, tapped nervously on the gravel path.

I was overcome by the wonder of it all—the beauty of the night, the beauty of the girl.

I put my arm around her. She did not draw away, but seemed to move a little closer.

It was glorious. I drew her closer, closer. The music, the dancers, the lights, all were far, far away.

Her head was on my shoulder.

Her breath came in little gasps.

The murmur grew louder.

She was snoring!

I placed my coat under her head for a pillow, and went back to the ballroom.

His wife is convinced he would perish from malnutrition and go about in tatters, were it not for her.

His boss regards him as more or less of a liability, but figures it's too much trouble to replace him.

The advertising men tell him what to wear, how to eat, how to think and what kind of tooth paste to use.

Yet, he remains happy.

Why?

Well, he can dope out the baseball averages, argue vehemently on the injustices of the capitalistic system, hop into a movie after supper, and tell his troubles to the manicurist.

WHAT DO MEN TALK ABOUT When They're Out Together?

The Latest Dope

BY WILLIAM EDGAR

Conversation, critics tell us, has become a lost art in this degenerated age. In the Georgian and Early Victorian years, the brilliant conversationalist was always in demand at fashionable dinner parties and social functions. Whole evenings were spent in talking on current topics, and the gay wits and bloods set up a barrage of words covering every conceivable subject, like Praed's vicar who was fond of delivering to any chance listener, lengthy homilies.

Beginning with the laws that keep
The planets in their radiant courses
And ending with some precept deep.
For dressing eels or shoeing horses.

In those days it was the work of a frequenter of high society to be able to talk on a wide variety of subjects and those on the lower fringes, who had social ambitions invariably endeavored to emulate their models in this respect. It may be recalled that the loose abandoned women who were introduced in the guise of women of culture and refinement charmed the family of the rural pastor by their discussions on taste, Shakespeare, and the musical glass—and in a few weeks the daughters of the vicarage were endlessly debating on —taste Shakespeare and the musical glasses.

But it was not only the simple children of the simple country parson who aspired to proficiency as conversationalists. Men who had achieved immortality by their pen, sought to enhance the reputation by the heavy artillery of debate and light repartee at the table. Oliver Goldsmith's writings have placed him for all time in the ranks of the immortals, but to the end of his life he was deeply mortified by his inability to hold his own in the circle of famous talkers in which he moved. The contrast between the flowing lines of the Deserted Village and the inanity of his speech, gave rise to the epigram that Goldsmith wrote like an angel and talked like Poor Poll; and many a time did the Irish poet leave the room cursing the handicaps that prevented his shining in conversation as, he had done in prose and poetry.

The great talker, whose name at once occurs to the mind was Samuel Johnston whose verbal shafts often pierced not only Goldsmith, but the humbe instrument who preserved so many of the ponderous philosophers. Choicest bon-mot.—James Boswell, his biographer. Johnston the author has long since passed away, Johnson the conversationalist is still alive in the pages of the worlds greatest biography. Not for Johnson was the light chatter and frivilous small talk that was so much in vogue at many society tables. He liked the strong meat of argument, "Sir, there was no discussion, and where there is no discussion there is not conversation" he once answered in reply to his admirer who filled so many notebooks with fragments of the talk of "my illustrous friend."

Even in those days, however, there were not wanting philosophical observers who had some pretty hard things to say about their fellows, whose voices were heard at too frequent intervals. For instance there was PRIOR who had his fling at the talker, in the lines:

"They never taste who always drink;"
They always talk who never think."

And Dryden in the seventeenth century, the century of laughter and gossip, penned the words:

"But far more numerous was the herd of such,
Who think too little and who talk too much."

The so called "strong silent man" is really a very rare animal. The late Lord Kitchener appears to have been a man very sparing of speech, although it is possible that this characteristic of the famous soldier was greatly exaggerated by writers who were fond of magnifying everything out of all proportion. As a matter of fact, the very silent man is not all common in the Celtic or Anglo-Saxon races. Men of silence are found more frequently among other groups of mankind, the Dutch for example, but taciturnity is not usually an Anglo-Saxon ract.

Particularly during the war, when strong men were all the vogue, it became the custom to attribute the quality of silence to military and naval commanders in Britain, America and France. No sooner was a man appointed to a post in the services, that brought him conspicuously before the public, than some press writer was sure, to discover, that the appointee was strong and silent. It did not matter that, in many cases, he description was a ludicrous misfit, and that the officer in question was really a pleasant sociable individual and ready, in some cases, too ready, to talk, the strong and silent label was surely affixed to him. Thus, when Sir John Jellicoe was appointed to the command of the Grand Fleet in 1914 the public was gravely assured that the new commander was true to the traditional" strong silent type." The people evidently liked them "strong and silent," and the inspired advance notices did not fail to cater to the popular taste. It was declared that Lord Jellicoe was generally known in the Navy as the "silent John," but the curious fact was that none of the personnel of the Fleet knew of this nickname, and those who really know Lord Jellicoe unhesitatingly affirm that he is neither physically strong, nor particularly silent. A similar legend gathered round the names of Foch, of Pershing and Admiral Sims—the last two being, in fact, voluable talkers and men who can make really good platform speeches.

No, while the lengthly conversationalist of past centuries is no longer found among us, the silent men is confined to war stories and popular fiction. The man in the street is ready at any time to discuss almost any subject. The average man answers to the word picture by Shakespeare of "A Gentleman, that loves to hear himself talk and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month," and what does this extremely verbose individual talk about? The ladies have the opinion that, among his own sex, he talks chiefly about himself. And they are probably right. Man's conversation is largely made up of his own problems and desires his fears and hopes his food (and drink), his clothes, his work, his amusements, and his financial worries. As a rule he talks politics only once in a while, when the politicians stronge but far from silent men, again assail his not too willing ear. Unlike the vicar's daughters, he does not talk much about Shakespeare, taste and the musical glasses—at least, not that kind of taste and not that kind of glasses men talk about the weather, but chiefly as it affects themselves and their prospects, and incidentally, their comments on the weather that has attended Exhibition Week are more forcible than elegant.

Yes, man's conversations is pretty much centred around himself.

It is to be noted that the subject under consideraion is what men talk about when they are with their own sex. What they talk about when with their better halves, or whether they are then allowed to talk at all is another question. There is a fairly wide-spread impression among the men that in these circumstances, there is quite a great deal of talking, and that most of it is done by one party and that the Lord of Creatioln is at the receiving end.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The diamond is to-day's tau... ic stone. Sacred to Venus, it brings good luck to lovers, and especially if it is a gift and worn on the left hand or arm, it is sure to bring the greatest happiness and good fortune to its wearer.

To-day's natal stone is the turquoise, which promises to those born on an anniversary of this day many love affairs and the power to attract the affection of others.

Yellow is the color advocated for wear to-day. Those wearing it are believed to be the recipient of some unexpected generosity.

Poppies are to-day's lucky flowers.

To-day's significant flower is the narcissus, which brings good cheer to the home which it adorns.

The Woodpecker

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THE woodpecker is common to temperate latitudes and because of his decided markings is easily recognized by the children. It is easy to find an old post or tree bored full of holes in regular rows where he has been feeding. He clutches the side of a tree and bracing himself with his stiff tail, pounds with his head like a riveter boring holes so that he can thrust his long tongue into the bark and so get the insects and grubs hiding there. He also bores and digs a hole for his nest in a dead tree or post and in it his family are as snug and dry as in any house.

Oh rat-a-tat-tat, tat-tat
It sounds like a drum,
Bar rum, bar rum,
But it's from a tall tree
That the tappings come.
It's a red-headed woodpecker
Hunting a grub
Rub-a-dub-dub, dub-dub, dub-dub,
A rub-a-dub-dub, dub-dub.

Trim in a suit of white and black,
Set off with a scarlet cap,
He bores in the bark
With his strong brown bill
A-hunting for grubs
Till he gets his fill.
Then he feeds all his babies
After their nap,
Oh rap-a-tap-tap, tap-tap, tap-tap,
Rap-tap-tap, tap-tap.

Mars and Saturn are in strongly benefic aspects to-day, according to astrology. The day should be active and productive.

All big constructive enterprises should prosper to-day, which makes for development and increased opportunities to extend trade.

Military men are to enjoy new honors and to receive many marks of public esteem. An army officer is to become prominent in diplomatic service.

Education is subject to the best influences, making for practical ideals and liberal points of view.

Increase in the number of college students will be marked in the coming year which should be exceedingly fortunate for state universities.

Demand for artisans of every sort is to be imperative all through the winter months in most states, the seers foretell.

Again great waste of public funds is indicated by the stars which presage new political scandals.

Exchange of much money through real estate transactions will be noticeable in many parts of the country all through the coming winter.

Men and women will reveal a strong desire for more stable living conditions here in the United States and will continue to invest heavily in homes.

According to ancient lore this should be a lucky day for hiring maid servants or women employees.

The July eclipse of the sun following upon the conjunction of Mars and Uranus, is read as indicating sudden and dramatic changes in government, revolutions and other troubles. The Balkans, especially, are supposed to be affected by the aspects.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy year in which unexpected pleasures will be experienced.

Children born on this day may be of rather a delicate constitution and gentle nature. Both boys and girls are likely to be exceedingly mild in all their traits

SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE.

There's nothing slow about the man of today. He is quicker in his perceptions than his forbear and his mentality is keyed up to a high pitch from his earliest days of battling with a speed-driven world. And his clothes indicate the general trend—for they consist namely of the essentials. The furbelows and the tight trousers, the lace sleeves and the thick layers of lace collars, the wide, fancy hats and the turned-up toed shoes have all gone in favor of clothing that allows the maximum of speed and comfort. And if man has lost something of grace in the transition from 1726 to 1926, well he has made it up in that title of a thousand inflections, efficiency.

There is a great deal of his ancestor in every man of today, nonethe-less. It is seen more in him when he is young, but streaks of the inheritance from our arboreal ancestors show up in the most sophisticated and most enlightened men of today. You have noticed that boys and men when walking along the street never walk on the roadway if there is a sidewalk and seldom on the sidewalk if there is anything higher to walk on. If they don't give way to the inclination to walk on the wall that borders some lawn it is because they are more under subjection to the laws of today than influenced by the natural laws of long ago. If there is a row of stones or sewer pipes along the road, the boys are on top of them instead of on the sidewalk. The primitive instincts are more highly developed in a child than they are in a grown up person, of course, but just watch. When our great grandmama who lived in a cave, after she came down from a tree, took her little children and went down to the beach to dig clams, she taught them wherever there was the trunk of a fallen tree to walk on that so that the snakes would not bite them and the animals out of the grass would not get them. She taught them also when they stepped on stones to be sure always to step in the middle, so the stone would not rock and throw them into the brush where something might get them. And that disposition in the man of his inheritance from his cave-dwelling ancestors.

Men of today boast they are not slaves of fashion, and they look with condescension upon the female of the species for her slavery to the decrees of Paris and New York. Self-delusion! Let us hop over a century or two from the days of the cave dwellers—because what is a century or two between friends—and we come to the feudal baron days when every man was not only a workman in the fields of the baron under whom he served, but he was also one of his soldiers. Soldiers in those days fought with a great long pole with a snickersnee on the end of it. They called it a pike. And when they marched to fight the neighboring feudal barons they carried the pike in a socket in front of them, so that it would not get all tangled up. This socket was a leather cup something like you see the standard bearer in a parade today carrying, to hold the flag. It was slung on a leather thong around the neck. The man in those days did not wear such a coat as we wear now. He wore a leather surtout which had no collar on it. Consequently the leather thong sawed the back of his neck, until some genius decided to put a collar on a surtout. It was put there, and the leather thong was put back of that. This turned the collar nigh up around the man's neck, so he took a jackknife and cut a notch in each side of it for the thong to come through. And now men talk to the ladies about following fashions! That was hundreds of years ago, but every daddy who reads this, and every laddie with his first suit—every man you ladies know—has a notch in his collar today. It serves no useful purpose on earth. It is simply a style handed down to hom from the old feudal baron days, but you couldn't hire the man of today to go down George street with a coat that did not have a notch in it.

On Monday, a party of Peterborough Kiwanians is going up to Toronto to attend the District Convention, and today they have been digging their glad rags out of the moth balls in preparation for the dinner and ball in the King Edward hotel. And in case you don't know it, the Crystal Ball room of the King Edward is not at all like the rooms in which men paraded their finery when they wore swords. But on the back of every cutaway coat carried by a Kiwanian—a modern business man—are two buttons. They are on the back of every frock coat that has ever been worn in the world, and on the back of every dress coat. They serve no useful purpose except to scratch the mahogany furniture, and get tangled in ladies' scarves when we dance with them. The buttons came from a little later stage in our development, when every man wore a sword. They were put back there so that the sword belt should not slip down. We no longer wear swords. In those days if you opened a jackpot on three aces and some other fellow sat in and drew two cards and came out with a club flush you could give him what he really deserved. Nowadays you can't do anything but just swear about it. But still they have those two buttons on the back of our coats.

Let every man look at the back of his sleeve. He has a couple of buttons there. The same buttons that turned over the inkwell. The same buttons that spilled that cup of coffee in his lap. The same buttons that drag the papers off your desk into the wastebasket! Back about the sword wearing time men thought it was the mark of a gentleman to have clean, pretty, white hands in order to show they never worked. They wore a long fichu or jabot of lace which hung down over their hands. The lace was buttoned into their sleeves with a couple of buttons. We all work, we men of today. Our hands are horny and hard. But we still have those two cussed little buttons on the back of our sleeve. There isn't a man in Peterborough who doesn't worry the life out of his wife until she sews it back on for him, if he happens to lose one of them.

Coming down just a little closer, we find that our ancestors worked in the fields, a great many of them, peasants in Europe, and, like some of the peasants in Europe still, they wore smocks. The smock became annoying when they climbed fences, and when they rode a horse, so they gathered it up and stuffed it in it. A shirt tail isn't a bit more use to a man than a third hand, and yet, there it is, a foot and a half of it. That thing should have been bobbed and buttons put on it like a little boy's shirt waist. But we have worn that foot and a half ever since, and it serves no useful purpose except to give us this balloon tire effect in the centre.

And men say they are not slaves to fashion!

The man of today has lost none of the self satisfaction that characterized his ancestors. It is true that the younger men and some of the wiser older men admit that woman has equal rights with them and that women may even be able to hold her own in business life with men. But it is said with an inward smile, as one admits to a child that his thesis of life is correct. It does no harm to amuse the darlings.

IS MUSSOLINI THE IDEAL TYPE?

Peterborough Men's Opinions of the Dynamic Dictator, as told to The Examiner

More reminiscent of the White House and President Coolidge than of the Dictator of Italy is the request of the men interviewed by The Examiner on this subject. "Don't use my name", they say, even while admitting that the Dictator's fearlessness is one of the points that commends him.

The President of United States seldom says anything for publication. Reporters are forbidden to write: "The President said", because the chief executive must not be quoted. Instead, when Mr. Coolidge does say something for the newspaper boys, they are compelled to write: "The spokesman for the White House said". Everybody knows the President said it, but he can't be directly quoted, and he can always withdraw without the unpleasantness that always accompanies a "misquotation."

Mussolini, while he doesn't like newspaper publicity at certain stages of his various imperial plays, doesn't hide when he has something important to say. But this is not a comparison between the leaders of Italy and United States. The forgoing is just to explain the absence of names from these interviews.

Mr. X told the Examiner he had always admired the career of Mussolini without thinking very highly of the man himself. There was no doubt but that Mussolini took advanage of every opportunity, but in Mr. X's opinion the same characteristics would not do for the general man in this western world. "Home life of any kind with such a man as Mussolini would be impossible", said Mr. X, "and while his ambition and spectacular success might charm some women, it is, after all, the solid if somewhat hum-drum man that most women marry."

So, in Mr. X's opinion, Mussolini would have small chance of matrimonial success if he came to Canada. We didn't ask any women.

Mr. Y had no use for the Dictator or for a dictatorship. It takes a great man, a good man, a man who is better in every way than any of his subjects or all of them, to efficiently and permanently carry on a dictatorship", he said. "There are so many problems facing a man who sets out to govern any people, and more especially the volcanic southerner, that it is almost impossible for him to cope successfully with all of them. And just as soon as he misses his cue on one act, he goes down to defeat—and how great is his fall!" Mr. Y, a happily married man, declined to comment extensively on the possibility of Mussolini's tactics working out in the home. "I think", he remarked, "that a man must give a little more than a woman—and take a little more too, in the way of worry. A man as inflexible as Mussolini would not succeed in wedlock with one of our Canadian girls trained to independence of thought and action."

Number two against Mussolini-tactics in the home.

Mr. Z. expressed himself wholeheartedly in favor of the dictatorship. "It is the ideal type of government", he declared emphatically. "The right man must be chosen, of course, but he has a wonderful opportunity to work out ideals and ideas that would stagnate in the process of passage through our interminable processes of government." Mr. Z didn't think Mussolini would have any difficulty in getting a Canadian wife or in making the home successful. He thought that a woman would admire a man who could be boss. "Of course," he added, "he would have to be consistent. The trouble with most men who start out to boss their homes is that they are bossy for a while, and they let the wife put something over on them and they lose their prestige."

And that's that. There were a lot of others asked this question, bu they professed complete ignorance of Mussolini. Next time we start to write something like this we will choose Babe Ruth or some movie sheik as our main figure.

And the ideal men who are interviewed will know who we mean.

Here is Benito Mussolini's favorite picture of himself, autographed specially for NEA Service and The Examiner. Study it and you'll see why. In the expression of the eyes, the tilt of the jaw and the set of the mouth the fierce will to power and unhesitating decision that have made him dictator of Italy are plainly evidenced.

COLORS

WHAT is my favorite color?
Why, just at the moment it's blue.
The hue of the heavens is duller
Than that in the iris of Prue.
But when Millie's eyes so demurely
Look up into mine—and look down,
I have a conviction that surely
My favorite color is brown.

Yet oft, when my wandering gaze'd
Meet Annie's, with its glamorous glint,
I know by a certain appraisal
That Hazel's my favorite tint
When Mary lifts lashes that curtain
Her eyes, which are tender but gay;
I'm wholly and finally certain
My favorite color is gray.

In fact, when I truthfully chat of
My tastes, I can say with some pith:
My favorite color is that of
The eyes of the girl I am with!

Chapter XIX
The Iron.

Lily, dressed simply, scarcely decolletee, seemed somewhat lost in the spacious Bland library. She made no pretense at preliminary social small talk, going straight to her point as soon as they were seated in the firelight.

"Uncle Emery had something to tell you, but I asked him to let me do it," she said.

Chip's heart bounded. He knew Edith was in New York. She had heard of his condition! She was coming back to him!

He was to have his reward for taking pity on Maggie Clare.

"Then it's good news—or you wouldn't want to break it?" he said with parched tongue.

Lily was not visibly perturbed. Rather, she was pensive. "Don't you think that we often make news good or bad by our way of taking it?"

"That's asking me a question, when you've got information to give me! What have you to tell me, Miss Bland?"

"I've something to tell you that will give you a great shock; so that I don't want to say it till I know you're prepared."

"Oh, prepared! Is one ever prepared? Is one of the children hurt? Is one of them dead?"

"That would be a great grief. I said that this would be a great shock. There's a difference—and one can be prepared."

"Well, I am. Please don't keep me in suspense. Tell me!"

She sat now with hands folded in her lap, looking at him quietly. "No, you're not prepared."

"Tell me what to do and I'll do it," he said, nervously, "only don't torture me."

"One is prepared," she said, tranquilly, "by remembering beforehand one's own strength—by knowing that there's nothing one can't bear, and bear nobly. Say to yourself: 'I'm a man, and I'm equal to this!' I'll take it in the highest way. I shan't let it degrade me or send me for help to degrading things—"

He flung his hands outward. "Yes, yes! I know what you're driving at. I promise. Only, for God's sake, tell me. Is it about—?"

"It's about Mrs. Walker."

"Yes, so I supposed. But what is it? Is she ill? She isn't dead?"

The cry made her eyes smart, but she kept control of her voice.

"No, she's not dead. She's not even ill. She's perfectly well, so I understand. But she's been—" The horror in his face, the way in which he leaned forward as though he would spring at her, warned her that he knew what was coming. "She's been—married."

He huddled in a big arm-chair in a state of collapse. For the minute there was nothing to say or do. Since the iron had to enter into his soul, it was better that it should be like this.

It was better that it should be like this—with her there to keep him such company as one human being can keep for another at such an hour—better than if he were to learn it in the solitude of his own rooms, or in the unsustaining frigidity of a lawyer's office.

She knew she didn't count for much, except for the fact—a detail only—that she was with him in every nerve that helped her to sensation and every faculty she possessed.

"You won't forget your promise?" she asked after a time.

His tone was vacant. "What promise?"

"That you'd remember you're strong enough to bear it nobly."

"But I'm not."

"I know you are."

He lumbered to his feet, staggering heavily to the chimney-piece, where he, too, laid his hands upon the mantelboard. As he did so she left the room.

When, some twenty minutes later, he himself came forth, he found her at the door of the dining-room, with a cup of tea in her hand. He drank in silence, and left without a good-night, beyond a hard, speechless wringing of her hand on his way to the door.

Chapter XX.
"Papa Lacon."

Two things seemed strange to Chip after that evening—the one, that the fight with Old Piper was ended; and the other, that in the matter of Edith's marriage, once the immediate shock had spent its strength, he bowed to the accomplished fact with a docility he himself could not understand.

As for the fight with Old Piper, there was no longer a reason for waging it. In the new situation Old Piper had lost its appeal, from sheer inadequacy to meet the new need.

The fact of the marriage he contrived to keep at a distance. It was so monstrous that the mind refused to take it in and if it hadn't been for the children, he might not have heard so much as the man's name.

The children called him "Papa Lacon." Chip was obliged to swallow that. They spoke of him simply and spontaneously, taking "Papa Lacon" as a matter of course. They varied the appellation now and then by calling him "our other papa."

It had been intimated to him, not long after the second marriage, that he might see the children with reasonable frequency, through the good offices of Mr. and Mrs. Bland.

He soon saw that the arrangements were really in charge of Lily Bland, who brought the children to her house, and took them home again. Chip saw them in the library.

The first meeting was embarrassing. Tom was nearly eight, and Chippie on the way to six. They entered the library together, dressed alike in blouses and knickerbockers, their caps in their hands. They approached slowly to where he had taken up a position he tried to make nonchalant, standing on the hearth-rug with his hands behind him.

He felt curiously cupable before them, like a convict being visited by his friends in jail. He felt childish, too, as though they were older than, and superior to, himself.

The childishness was shown in his standing on his guard, determined not to be the first to make the advances. He wouldn't be even the first to speak.

They came forward slowly, with an air judicial and detached. Tom's eyes observed him more closely than his brother's, who looked about the room.

"Hello, papa."

"Hello, Tom."

Encouraged by this exchange of greetings, Chippie also spoke up. "Hello, papa."

"Hello, Chippie."

There followed a few seconds during which the interview threatened to hang fire there, but taking one thing with another, the occasion passed off well, as did similar meetings through the rest of that winter and whenever they were possible, which was not often—in the autumn, with a promise of regularity. But Chip's joy in them was short-lived.

It was his second time of seeing them after the general return to town. Tom was hanging on his shoulder, while Chippie was seated on his knee. Chippie was again the spokesman.

Chapter XXI.
"When Everything Else Was Gone."

It seemed to Chip as if all the blood in his body rushed back to his heart and stayed there. He felt dizzy, sick. The walls of his fool's paradise were dissolved as mist, revealing a picture he had seen twice already, each time with an unleaping of the primal and the fatherly in him: but now . . . Edith had been lying in bed, wan, bright-eyed, happy, with a little fuzzy head just peeping at her breast!

He tramped down the street when the boys had left and came to the consciousness that he was speaking inwardly.

"Damn her! Damn her! She's nothing to me any more."

He was shocked, but he repeated the imprecation. He repeated it because it shocked him.

It struck at what he held to be most sacred. It was rifling his own sanctuary and trampling its treasures in the streets.

He had never had a sanctuary but in her. Edith had been the holiest thing he knew. She was both shrine and goddess. There was a fire laid in the fireplace and when he reached home he lighted it. When it was crackling sufficiently he drew Edith's photograph from its frame and after gazing at it long and bitterly tossed it into the blaze,

He watched it blister and writhe as though it had been a living thing. The flame seized on it slowly and unwillingly, biting at the edges in a curling wreath of blue, and eating its way inward only by degrees.

But it ate its way. It ate its way til the whole lovely person disappeared—first the hands, and then the bosom, and then the throat and the features. The sweet eyes still gazed up at him when everything else was gone.

Chapter XXII.
Seven Years.

Edith's marriage is what Chipman had been afraid of on and off for a long long time. The wonder was that it hadn't happened before. But, since it had not happened, he had got out of the way of expecting it. The fear of it used to dog him whenever he went to the theater or the opera or out to dine.

There had been minutes when, at the sight of a feather or a scarf or something familiar in a way of walking, his heart and brain seemed to stop their function.

He had known himself to stand stock-still, searching wildly for the easy, causal phrases he had prepared—for the purpose of carrying off such a meeting as this, if ever it occurred, only to find that he was mistaken—that it was some one else.

In the earlier months that had been a relief. He couldn't have seen her and kept his self-control.

Then had come another period in which he felt he could have committed infamies just to see her getting in or out of a carriage, or lunching in a restaurant, or buying something in a shop.

He knew he could have discovered her plans and followed her; but he wouldn't do that.

Then he married Lily Bland and afterward the fear of meeting Edith came back. It was fear as much for her sake as for his own. He began to understand that the embarrassment wouldn't be all on his side, nor the suffering. He picked that up from the children.

It was astonishing that in all those seven years of their separation the hazards should not have thrown them together.

And now, at the moment when he might reasonably have felt safest, there she was!

That is, she was on the steamer. For seven or eight days they were to be cooped up on the same boat. He could never go on deck or into the saloon without having to pass her. Worse still, she could never go outside her cabin door without the risk of being obliged to make him some sign of recognition And a sign of recognition between them—why, the thing was absurd! Between them it must be all—or nothing.

He looked at the passenger list again. Yes; that was her name: Mrs. Theodore Lacon.

As far as he could gather from the list, she was traveling alone, without so much as the companionship of a maid. He, too, was alone; but it was conceivable that if she didn't actually see him she might not know that he was on the ship at all.

The thought suggested a line of action. He was in his cabin at the time. He could stay there. He could avoid the decks by day and take his exercise by night.

So the week passed, and they reached Liverpool. He was purposely among the last to go ashore.

Chapter XXIII.
The Meeting.

Later he scanned, as discreetly as he could, the occupants of the train that was to take them to London. He couldn't see that she was anywhere among them. He sighed, but whether from relief or disappointment he was not sure.

As it was one o'clock, he took his seat in the luncheon-car, making sure in advance that she wasn't there. He had come to the conclusion by this time that she was not on the train. He did not, however, regret his precautions, because —well, because the sense of her proximity had made him feel as he had felt in the days when the very streets of the city in which she lived were hallowed ground.

He had supposed that emotion dead. It must be dead. It was not a living thing, this renewed yearning for a sight of her. It was only the reflex of something past. It could be explained psychologically. It was a sort of evanescent sentiment.

Yes, that was it, he repeated to himself as he lunched. It was nothing to be afraid of, nothing incongruous with the fact that he had left a wife—and child—in New York. It was not an emotion; it was only the echo.

And then, suddenly, they were face to face! He was on his way from the luncheon-car to his compartment. She was standing in the corridor, looking out at the landscape.

"Chip!" There was a half-minute of incredulous gazing before she said anything more. "What are you doing here?"

He felt the necessity of explaining his presence. "I was on the boat. I didn't know—"

"That I was on it, too?"

"I—I did know that," he stammered, "after we sailed. Not before. It was the name in the list—"

"But I never saw you. I was always on deck."

He felt his own confusion passing. It was so natural to be with her—so right! His voice grew steadier as he said:

"I didn't go about very much. I was afraid—"

She nodded, speaking hastily. "I understand. It was kind of you. And you're—alone."

He cursed himself for coloring, but he couldn't help it. He had a wife and child in New York!

He saw that she wanted to recognize that fact from the first. She wanted to put that boy and his mother between them. Her husband and child stood between them, too. He took that cue in answering.

"Yes; I've run over hurriedly on business. And are you alone, too?"

She glanced toward the empty compartment where her bags were stowed in the overhead racks. "I'm on my way to join my—" It was her turn to color.

He nodded quickly, to show that he understood.

"He's in Biarritz," she hurried on for the sake of saying something. "I'm to meet him in Paris."

"How are the children?"

They were being pushed and jostled by guards and passengers. Between sentences it was necessary to make room for some one going or coming.

She was obliged to step back into her compartment. Having taken the seat in the corner by the window, she motioned with her hand toward that in the opposite corner by the door.

Chapter XXIV.
Danger.

She continued to talk of the children. Suddenly he risked a question:

"Do they—understand?"

She was plainly agitated that he should disturb the ashes that buried their past. Her eyes shot him one piteous glance. "Tom understands," she said, at last. "Chippie takes it for granted."

"What makes you think that Tom's discovered it to be unusual?"

"Because he's said so."

"In what way? Do you mind telling me?"

"Oh, that! Won't you tell me what it was? It would help me in my future dealing with the boy."

She gazed out at the park-like fields. "He asked me if you had done anything —bad."

"And you told him—?"

"I told him that I didn't understand —that pe haps I'd never understood."

"Thank you for putting it like that! But you did understand, you know—perfectly."

"I think I ought to tell you," she said, after long reflection, "that I understand sympathy better now than I did some years ago."

"Does that mean that if certain things were to do again—you wouldn't do them?"

"But I'm the very one with whom you could talk about it. Between us the conversation would be what lawyers call 'privileged'."

"Is anything privileged between you and me?"

"Isn't everything? We've been man and wife—"

"That's the very reason. No two people seem to me so far apart as those who've been man and wife and aren't so any longer."

"No two are so near together," he went on, "for the very reason that when they're separated outwardly they're bound the more closely by the things of the heart and the soul and the spirit. After all, those are the ties that count. The legal dissolving of bonds and making of new ones is only superficial. No court, and no judge could dissolve the union we entered into. Neither judge nor court can resolve into their original waters the rivers that have already become one!"

She smiled faintly, perhaps bitterly. "Doesn't your figure of speech carry you too far? In our case the judge and the court were solved our union was—"

"I know what you're going to say. And it was against the letter of the contract. Of course. I've never denied that, have I? But in every true marriage there's something over and above the letter of the contract—to which the letter of the contract is as nothing. And if ever there was a true marriage, Edith, ours was."

"Stop!" Her eyes shone like blue fired winter stars.

"Why?"

"Because I ask you to."

"No, let me go on! I gave you your pound of flesh, Edith, right off the heart; so that if atonement could be made in that way—"

"Chip, will you tell me what good there is in bringing this up now? You're married to some one else, and so am I. We can't go back!"

He fell silent because of the impossibility of speech. It was a shock to him, therefore, when she pointed to a distant spire on a hill, saying:

"There's Harrow. We shall be in London in half an hour."

In London in half an hour, and this brief renewal of what never should have been interrupted would be ended!

I KNOW A MAN

He thinks "The Deserted Village" is a Scotch town on tag day.

He is sure "The Merchant of Venice" sells peanuts or hot dogs at a beach resort near Los Angeles.

He has never read "David Harum" because he doesn't care for that Turkish sex stuff.

He says "The Four Horsemen" is nothing but propaganda for the cavalry recruiting service, although admitting he has never read it.

"Il Penseroso," he thinks, sounds like one of the snappiest things Ibanez ever wrote and he is sure going to read it as soon as it's translated into English.

He always tells you Irvin Cobb can write even better than he can play baseball.

He says anybody can tell from its name that "Paradise Lost" is just another one of those free love stories written for the movies.

SHORT STORY

THE SPLENDID GAMBLE!

(By Douglas Malloch)

Risk this upon the table: lay
A smiling farm, and babes at play,
The gentle kindness of a wife,
And all your wealth, and all your life,
And say to fortune, "Turn the wheel!"
Not knowing what the nights conceal,
Step forward at your country's call
And on fate's table risk your all.

Risk this upon the table: not
The sudden summons of a shot;
And to lie down, as soldiers lie,
And grandly die, as soldiers die,
But risk the jailer's narrow room,
And then a gibbet in the gloom,
Where no flag waves, nor comrades kneel,
And say to fortune, "Turn the wheel!"

For then, however brave the brave,
You know the thing your fathers gave,
Your fathers dared. You then will know
How much you have, how much you owe,
How great the splendid gamble when
These more than soldiers, more than men,
Risked on the table life and weal
And cried to fortune, "Turn the wheel!"

UNCLE WIGGILY

Todays' Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND NEDDIE'S BARREL

One day Neddie Stubtail, the little boy bear, ambled over to Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow with a jar of honey his mother had sent him to take to Mrs. Longears.

"Oh, how kind of you, my dear," said the rabbit lady. "And did your mother make this money herself?"

"No, sir! I mean no, ma'am," answered Neddie sort of bashful like and standing on one toe. "The bees made the honey but my pa he dug it out of a hollow tree and we had more than we needed so ma sent you some. And my pa, he got stung by a bee on his nose when he was getting the honey."

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" said Mrs. Longears.

"Yes, sir! I mean yes, ma'am, so was pa, but it's done smarting now, I guess," rumbled Neddie for, being a bear, he had a deep, rumbly voice. Then he started back home to his cave in the woods where he lived with his sister Beckie and his father and mother.

"Can't you stay a little while and see Uncle Wiggily?" invited Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, who knew how much the rabbit gentleman liked the animal children.

"Oh, no, mo'am, I mean no, sir—no, I mean ma'am—I can't stay," answered Neddie. "I must go home and practise on my barrel," and away he ambled.

When Uncle Wiggily came home from the woods, his wife showed him a jar of honey Mrs. Stubtail had sent.

"We asked Neddie to wait until you came home," explained Nurse Jane, "but he said he had to go home and practise on his barrel."

"Practise on his barrel? I wonder what he mean?" asked Uncle Wiggily, and the more he thought of it the more he wondered. "I have heard," said the rabbit gentleman, twinkling his pink nose, "of a barrel of fun and also a barrel of monkeys. But Neddie must have a different barrel than those. I think I'll hop over to his cave and see what it is. I may get an adventure out of Neddie's barrel."

Uncle Wiggily hopped along the path that led to the Stubtail bear cave. Before he arrived he heard queer sounds—booming sounds as if some one was beating a drum.

"I wonder if Neddie meant he had to practise on a barrel drum to be a soldier?" thought the bunny gentleman. And when he reached the front of the cave house no one was home. But hanging from a long rope of wild grapevine in a tree near the cave was a barrel, swinging to and fro like a clock pendulum.

"Now I know what Neddie's barrel is," said Uncle Wiggily. "His father fastened this swinging barrel here for Neddie to hit with his paws. When it is hit, the barrel swings out and then swings back, and if Neddie isn't quick in getting out of the way he gets a bang on the nose. He must practise on the swinging barrel to learn to be quick when he grows up to be a big bear."

Uncle Wiggily went close to the swaying barrel and touched it gently. It swung away and then swung back, tapping the rabbit on the pink nose, but not hard enough to hurt him much

"I wasn't quick enough," chuckled Mr. Longears. He was just wishing Neddie or Beckie would come back to let him see them practise on the barrel when, all at once, Uncle Wiggily heard a grunt, and there, beside him stood the Skillery Scallery Alligator. The bad chap had slumped up out of the bushes.

"How are your ears?" gargled the 'Gator.

"Fine! How is your nose?" quickly asked the rabbit. With that he gave Neddie's barrel a push and then leaped to one side. But the 'Gator didn't know enough to jump away. He just stood there, and when the barrel swung back it banged the 'Gator in the nose, very hard—her punko!

"Oh, trolley cars!" howled the surprised bad chap. "My nose isn't at all well; no, thanks to you!" he gargled, and then he flopped away.

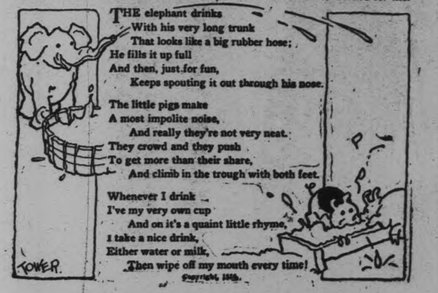
"A good trick, Uncle Wiggily!" shouted Neddie, returning just then. And the little boy bear and his sister showed the rabbit how they punched and pawed the swinging barrel to get practise in being quick on their feet. For bears must be quick to get away from hunters with guns.

So Mr. Longears found out what Neddie's barrel was and if blackboard doesn't take all the hard words out of the spelling book to throw at the chalk, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the School Bug.

Drinking

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

MOST of our little personal habits are grounded in early childhood. Habits of eating and drinking are acquired, for all children are naturally little animals, eating with both paws. Too often children are permitted table habits of just any sort while little, then, all of a sudden, parents are shocked because their child hasn't charming manners. It's a matter of keeping everlastingly at the training—not nagging or scolding—but pleasantly and firmly correcting and teaching. Because no one bothered about it when they were little, lots of grown-ups have never acquired the habit of wiping the mouth before and after drinking. Consequently their glass is rimmed with grease and food marks at each meal, which is scarcely an appetizing sight. A little child can be taught to wipe its mouth—it soon becomes an unconscious action, a habit, and the charm is worked for life.



MAN'S TRIBUTE

By F. P. A.

Fair is she, with a face that would have launched at least 1100 ships. There she sits, and as she speaks, her face is aglow with animation. To her—she is the young and beautifully dressed woman in the street car advertisement—are listening, rapt, enthralled, three men. They are all intelligent-appearing.

"Admiration," says the picture's descriptive legend, "is man's tribute to the woman who can fairly and accurately discuss both sides of important questions. 'The Literary Digest.'"

Shall we eavesdrop? Why not? What might we hear?

"Well," one of the admiring men might say, "it looks as though we were in for a cold spell."

"It does, in a way," says the Not Impossible She. "Indeed, the Toronto Globe (Lib.) says: 'For to-morrow, much colder'; but the Mail and Empire (Con.) observes: 'The cold weather seems to be about ended, and a period of warmer days is imminent.' 'A terrific cold wave, with concomitant hardships on the working people, the third cold wave of the Conservative capitalistic administration, is predicted for to-night,' says the Star (Lib.)."

"Oh, your fairness!" cries Admirer No. 2. "Divinely fair, I'd call you. Say, seen any good shows lately?"

"I have seen John Barrymore, in 'Hamlet, Prince of Denmark,' a Tragedy, by William Shakespeare. Produced by Arthur Hopkins."

"Any good?" asks Admirer No. 3, who, up to this time, had taken no part in the conversation.

"'Thrilling,' says Heywood Broun in the New York World (Dem.). 'Gorgeous,' is the way Alexander Woollcott characterizes, in the New York Herald (Rep.), the Barrymore version of the Elsinore drama. 'Leaves something to be desired,' says J. Ranklin Towse, in the New York Evening Post (Ind.)."

"Those critics are all college men, are they not?" asks Admirer No. 3, emboldened by his success.

"Speaking of colleges," the young admired woman says, "listen to this, which is entitled 'His Own Fault':

"'Husby: 'You're three-quarters of an hour late. What do you mean keeping me standing around like a fool?'

"'The Wife: 'I can't help the way you stand.'

"From the Leland Stanford University Chaparral."

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" cry the three Admirers, as one man. "And how," asks Admirer No. 1, "about going down to the corner and getting a Biscuit Tortoni, if you know what I mean?"

"Indeed I do know what you mean," the adored one says. "Biscuit Tortoni is the name of a preparation of ice-cream coated with almond dust and served in stiff paper cups. Tortoni is the name of the chef who devised it."

And as they went out into the cold—as the Montreal Star had said it was going to be—night, it was hard to tell, as they strolled toward the Biscuit Tortoni shop, which of the men, vying in their tributes to her ability to discuss both sides of important questions fairly and accurately, admired her most.

"You are convicted of bigamy," remarked the judge, impressively, while the prisoner glanced over his shoulder at three stern-visaged women, "I intend to give you the severest penalty the law allows." Here the prisoner covered his face with his hands and wept. "I shall sentence you to prison for two years. What are you grinning at?"

"I thought," smiled the prisoner, "you were a-going to let me off."

CARDS RECOVER LEAGUE LEAD DEFEAT PHILLIES

New York Smothers Cincinnati 5 To 4 in Ten Innings Game.

FOUR RUN RALLY.

Cardinals' Fourth Straight Victory in Present Series With Philadelphia.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—The St. Louis Cardinals, pennant-bound, recovered their lead in the National League yesterday by smothering the Philadelphia team while New York helped them along by defeating Cincinnati, 5 to 4, in ten innings.

It was the Cards 4th straight victory in the present series here. They salted the game away in the opening innings by a four-run rally which knocked Willoughby out of the box and sent Knight to his rescue. The latter fared little better before the Missourians, however, who touched him for a dozen hits in eight innings. The Cardinals ran wild on the bases and paid little attention to the Philadelphia opposition, as Sherdel held them safely all the way by keeping their eight hits scattered.

The St. Louis final score was made on a freakish home run, which resulted when Leach, chasing Thevenow's fly, crashed into a bleacher wall and collapsed, allowing the runner to circle the bases.

Frank Frisch, Giant captain, knocked the Cincinnati Reds out of first place in the National League yesterday by whacking a homer into the right field stands of the Polo Grounds in the tenth inning, which gave New York a 5 to 4 win.

Adolfo Luque, the Cuban, commenced with sterling mound work for Cincinnati, and even contributed to the scoring by poking out a single in the fifth, which brought Hargrae in to tie the game, 1 all. But he weakened in the eighth when the Giants found him for four hits and three runs.

The Reds scored a tying run in the ninth after two had been retired, but they were beaten by Frisch who slammed his homer into the stands with two out and none on base.

Luque was succeded in the eight by Donohue, who was followed in the box by Rixey. McGraw used Scott and Ring to help Fitzsimmons.

Another defeat at the hands of the Robins, 3 to 1, fastened the world's champions even more securely in third place. Dazzy Vance was hit only at intervals by the Buccaneers. Their reached him eight times for safeties but Cuyler's homer in the fourth was the only one accounting for a score.

Carmen Hill pitched steadily for Pittsburgh, conceding but four hits. He lost his game, however, when he walked two men with the bases full, in the fifth, forcing over two runs. A hit by Vance in the same frame gave the Robins their third run.

The Chicago-Boston game was postponed because of wet grounds.

THREE REGULARS ABSENT FROM RUGBY LINE-UP

Monohan and Timmis Lost To Ottawa's Senator Cause.

McGAN AT HELM.

Squad of Thirty Strong Put Through Smacking Practise Yesterday.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—Only three available men of last year's Dominion champions were absent from yesterday's workout of the Ottawa Senators Rugby team. Joe Miller, Don Young and Eddie Emerson were the three absentees, while Vince Monohan and Jerry Timmis are out of town and apparently lost to the senatorial cause.

Dave McGan was at the helm yesterday, and drove the squad, which was thirty strong, through a smacking practice. The team showed the first signs of a real Rugby dozen, and there was no let-up in the workout. They were lined up and for over an hour waged a practice battle.

Charlie Lynch and Harold Starr, who were linked with stories from Montreal that they would play there, belied these rumors by their appearance at the practice. Both went well, Starr in particular showing some brilliant work on the defensive.

Some doubt still exists as to the possibility of inducing Joe Miller to don the Rugby harness again, but hopes have not yet been abandoned. There are three shining young linemen angling for the vacant middle wing job, while Eddie Mulroney, the sturdy little under-study for the Senator back field regulars last fall, is going great guns, and will likely be shoved into the gap if Miller finally decides to give his undivided attention to his hockey activities. Miller's reason for not playing is that he is on the verge of signing a professional hockey contract with the New York Americans, and does not fancy taking a chance of incurring an injury which might prevent him from playing hockey this winter.

LEAFS DIVIDE DOUBLE HEADER WITH SYRACUSE

Both Teams Pile Up Four Run Lead in Inning.

CARROLL HARD HIT.

Orioles Take Two Games From Skeeters at Jersey City.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—Toronto divided a double header at Syracuse yesterday, the Stars taking the nightcap, 6 to 1, after Owen Carroll had defeated them, 4 to 3, in the first game. Each team won by piling up a four-run lead in the first inning. Carroll was hard hit but saved by splendid fielding in the outer garden, which nine putouts were handled.

Baltimore took both games at Jersey City, the Skeeters succumbing 4 to 3, and 5 to 3. Earnshaw assisted Carlton to get the first fracas and Ogden worked on the mound for the winners in the second.

The Bisons split a double header with Rochester at Buffalo. The visitors took the opener, 9 to 0, and lost out, 4 to 2. Bissonette knocked two homers during the day.

Reading played at Newark and lost both ends, 8 to 1, and 4 to 3.

SADNESS IN TRIUMPH

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 17. (C. P.)—Sadness in her hour of triumph came to Miss Joy Wong, 16 year old daughter of a Scottish mother and Chinese father. She was awardednine first class honors in her junior matriculation paper, but the mother who had coached her for the exams died a week before the results were announced.

Notables in the Canadian seniors' golf tournament. At top left George Lyon, winner for the eighth time, with the score of 157. At top right, Dr. J. Sheehan of St. Catharines, Ontario, who was second with 169. Mr. Lyon's victory was his 16th title win, as he has been eight times holder of the Canadian amateur championship. In centre, Mr. Justice Walsh of Calgary, Alta., and Mr. Justice Masten of Toronto, Ont., who were prominent competitors. Mr. Lyon further added to his honors by later defeating the captain of the United States team in the international "old-timers'" contest.

JONES DEFEATS FRANCIS OUIMET IN SEMI-FINALS

Present Champion Covers 32 Holes of Contest In One.

SHORT HILLS, N.J., Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—The most sensational winning streak of golfing history brought Bobby Jones of Atlanta to the portals of another great tournament triumph with a victory over Francis Ouimet of Boston in the semi-finals of the National Amateur Championship, 5 and 4.

It was the second attempt of the veteran New England star to withstand the sweeping power of a Virginia whirlwind which now has passed over 13 consecutive victims in the last three years of the amateur title struggle. But, as in their duel of two years ago at Meriton, Ouimet went tumbling down after a gallant but hopeless stand which last night found only George Von Elm of Los Angeles in the path of Bobby's drive toward his third consecutive championship.

Ouimet was decisively beaten, yet he was not disgraced. The champion of 1914, despite a costly tendency to hook his shots from the tees, played one of the best matches of a long career. But Jones, covering the 32 holes of the contest in one under even fours, pushed over the fairways at such a terrific pace that Ouimet was confronted with an almost impossible task.

As sensational as Bobby was yesterday he was compelled to share the glory of remarkable stroking with the flaxen-haired Von Elm, who brought off an overwhelming triumph over George Dason of Chicago in the other semi-final, 11 and 10.

HOUSE KEEPERS FOR RELIEF WORK

Red Cross Trains Women to Act for Sick Mothers.

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press). — At the Red Cross Centre this year's class of visiting housekeepers has commenced its course of seven weeks' training which enables them to receive $16 a week in field work. "We find that our housekeepers are filling a real need," said Miss Denne, head of the Beverley street branch of the Red Cross. "There are no maiden aunts any more, and when mothers are set aside through illness the kiddies fare rather badly if there is no one to look after them. Our workers go into homes and take charge for ten hours a day or less, according as they are required. They prepare the meals, look after the children, keep the house clean, do the marketing, arrange for the laundry and give simple nursing care. They are most enthusiastic about their work, especially when they can give suggestions along the line of better marketing and budgeting."

FORMER CANADIAN SUGGESTS BIG RACE

Arch Selwyn Would Match Miss Ederle and Mrs. Corson.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 17. (C. P.)—The suggestion to match Gertrude Ederle and Mrs. Clemington Corson, both of whom recently swam the English Channel, for a match race over a course of 42 miles around Manhattan Island and the City of New York is made by Mrch Selwyn, manager of Mrs. Corson, one of the leading theatrical producers of New York, and a native Torontonian.

INDIANS CUT YANKEES' LEAD IN AMERICAN

Standing Is Reduced To Three and One Half Games.

BATTING SLUMP.

Bennett, Rice and Schang Hit Three Safeties For Browns.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—Cleveland made it three straight from New York yesterday, winning 5 to 1 and cutting the visiting Yankees' lead to three and one-half games. New York remained in its batting slump and gathered but five hits off Shaute, making two of the five in the ninth inning.

Like Levsen and Buckeye, who held New York to two hits each in Thursday's double-header, Shaute was wild, passing six batters. In fact, the Yankees scored their only run as the result of Shaute's wildness. Shaute walked three men in a row in the seventh, the first of the three scoring on an infield out. Cleveland took kindly to Hoyt's offerings from the start and followed up his passes with hits that produced the five runs.

The Indians could do nothing with Braxton or Thomas, who went the last four innings. Shaute was brilliantly supported, while the fielding of the Yankees was poor.

At Detroit Washington received better pitching than the home team, and won its fourth straight victory, 5 to 4, in ten innings. Four Detroit errors figured in the scoring. Crowder was wild, passing seven men, but Marberry let the Tigers down with one hit, turning back three pinch hitters in a row in the tenth inning.

The St. Louis Browns had their batting eyes yesterday, and won from the Athletics, 6 to 3. They pounded Ehmke for 12 hits. Bennett, Rice and Schang each got three safeties.

FORMER CHAMP SAYS DEMPSEY WILL WIN BOUT

Tunney's Only Chance Is To Dodge Till Champion Tires.

GOOD SALESMAN.

McAuliffe Says Tunney's Statements Are Selling Talk.

(By JACK McAULIFFE, Undefeated Lightweight Champion of the World, Written for the United Press).

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Sept. 17.—Gene Tunney closed the only door open to him when he said he wanted to see Jack Dempsey in perfect condition, so the sporting world would be unable to say he had beaten the shell of the former Dempsey, and announced that he would stand up and swap punch for punch with Dempsey. Tunney had a possible chance to manoeuvre for five or six rounds, avoid the champion's famed opening rushes, and when Dempsey tired, bring over all his with a possibility of taking the title. If he tried to give punch for punch it will be curtains in two rounds and we'll all go back to New York early.

I am surprised that Tunney let such statements go out under his name. They are amateurish. But he is a great salesman, and has let that statement and a lot of others go out under his name just as part of his sales talk.

Gene shouldn't be discouraged after meeting Dempsey, even if he loses, for he will learn more about boxing and fighting in Philadelphia than he would if he lived to Methusaleh's age. It is in the cards that Dempsey may retire after this fight and Gene will become champion then, because there is no one in sight to-day whom he can't beat excepting Dempsey.

It is bad dope for his friends to be shouting what he will do to Dempsey, which is like throwing red meat to a lion. For speaking out of turn he will get his. He's out asking for it.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A WiseCracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Locally this week they ain't been no sporting excitement, except the sweepsteaks between Mister Ed. Peck and Mister Joe Duffus on Tues., in which the entry from the Ford stables, after running a good race, was well beaten coming down the stretch. Track fast. Weather good. The public stayed off this race pretty well and the machines only got a small play.

The rainy weather not only put a crimp in the Peterboro Ex., but on Wed. it robbed Mister Joe Daley and his Kingston Ponies of a soft win over the much-advertised Oslers. The Central Leaguers stepped into Mister Joe Spring's best brand for five runs in the 1st frame, and had 2 more in with 2 hands down in the 2nd when the rain come down in bucketsful and saved the day for the Toronto gang. The 2nd game is played in Toronto Sat., and Mister Bruce Cairns oughta be able to southpaw the T.a.B.A. titleholders to deather—provided Mister Daley elects to use him. The same Joe knows his groceries, however, and likely as not he'll take a chance on Mister Del Cherry and save Mister Cairns for subsequent events.

Mister Frankie Whitehouse was in our midst a few days ago. Mister Whitehouse is finishing the season with the Rochester Internationals, which club recalled him last week. The Peterboro southpaw win 17 games and lose 11 with Grand Rapids, and showed enough stuff for a real try-out with Mister Stallings' talent, and everybody will be pulling for him to make the grade.

Rumours is heard of pro. hockey scouts looking for talent among the Peterboro seniors. The cash and carry league need plenty of material, and they ain't a bit backward in asking O.h.A. players to sign on the dotted line, knowing the big association is the finest nursery for hockey players in the world. The Petes is in line for a good season, and everybody hopes to see the senior champs of last winter out there battling for the silverware again.

Well, Mister Sporting Editor, I gotta tip on one of the trotters at the Ex. and I want to look him over, so I'll hafta tear myself away. You'll forgive me, won't you? I knew you would, so cherrio.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

WARSAW QUIET ON ELECTION DAY

Electors Have Shown No Interest Since Riding Was Changed.

WARSAW, Sept. 18.—Election day is over and a very quiet village was Warsaw. The votes polled gave both candidates the same, one hundred and four votes. Over seventy voters did not use their franchise. In some families different members would kill each other's votes, so all decided to remain home. In other cases voters for both sides went together to the polling place. Not over a score seemed to be in the village in the evening. There are several radios in the district, so the general returns came to people in their own homes. The central telephone office was not so busy as it often is on ordinary evenings. Most of the calls that came in were to inquire how Warsaw went. It was difficult, however, to get Peterboro.

Warsaw is at the extreme west of the Peterboro-Hastings riding, and feels sore at being "put off the map." There has not been the same interest shown since. There were no election meetings in Warsaw. Dr. Embury was in the village once and Mr. Marshall sent letters to the electors.

LADIES VOLUNTEER TO HARNESS HORSE

Nobody Else at Summer Hotel Able to Perform Task.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 17.—(C. P.)—The Globe in an editorial on the passing of the horse from the highways to the back concessions tells of two city youths summering in Muskoka who asked plaintively if anyone could harness a horse for them. Young men in theparty admitted ignorance of the art. Then two ladies past middle age came frward and volunteered the benefit of their almost forgotten knowledge. They harnessed the horse and their thoughts went back to the days of their father's stable, to the more leisurely times of buggies and victorias. They were Victorians themselves, but they still had something the world needed — at

WEDDING BELLS.

McCLEMENT—DICKSON.

A pretty autumn wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Dickson, Tyndall Avenue, Toronto, when their only daughter, Mary, was united in marriage to Mr. Scott McClement, only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. McClement of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Basil Thompson, in the presence of immediate friends and relatives. The bride, who was becomingly gowned in white georgette with embroidery and bead trimming, white kid shoes and stockings, carrying a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses, entered on the arm of her father, unattended, to the strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march, played by Mrs. M. E. Machon. During the signing of the register, Mrs. Machon sang very sweetly "O Promise Me." After a buffet luncheon was served the bridal couple left on a short trip to Ottawa and other points east, the bride attired in a grey charmaline dress, black and white coat with white fox fur, black hat and shoes to match and carrying the groom's gift, a silver mesh bag. On their return they will reside at Tyndall Avenue. The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Shore, Ottawa, aunt and uncle of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Berry, Trenton.
The bride, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dickson, formerly resided in Peterborough.

OBITUARY.

MRS. JAMES SOLLITT

The death took place this morning of Mrs. James Sollitt at the home of her daughter, Mrs. G. S. Mattice, 520 Homewood Avenue. The funeral service will be held on

MRS. JOHN DECK.

Died in Peterboro on Saturday, September 18, Margaret Ann Deck, beloved wife of John Deck, Lakehurst. She leaves to mourn her loss one son, Milton, of Lakehurst, and three daughters: Mrs. Cecil Watson, Highland Creek; Mrs. Rev. Harold Bell, Sebright, and Miss Mary at home.
The funeral will take place on Monday at 1.00 p.m. from Comstock's Undertaking Parlors, the Rev. Mr. Snelgrove of Lakehurst officiating.

A. M. LILLICO.

Mr. Archibald Merton Lillico, who passed away at his home on the 2nd con. Elderslie, on August 31st, was in his 80th year. He was born near Peterboro in 1847 and came to Elderslie in 1867, settling first on the Town line of Elderslie and Brant, where he remained till 1882, when he moved to lot 22, con. 2, where he lived till he passed away. Mr. Lillico was married in 1872 to Frances White of Peterboro. Deceased was of U.E. Loyalist descent, his grandfather with four sons having come to Canada from Boston to be under the British flag, settling in North Monaghan, Peterboro County, and one of the Lillico family is still on the old homestead, and is reeve of the township. The subject of sketch lost his sight 23 years ago but did not complain about his affliction. He died of old age, without suffering any pain. Mr. Lillico was a man of kindly disposition and he had a great many warm friends in the neighborhood as was shown by the numerous floral offerings on his coffin and beside it. In religion he was a Presbyterian, and in politics a staunch Liberal. He leaves to cherish his memory a widow and family of four sons and two daughters, namely, R. J., of Toronto, Archie of London, Arthur of Kirkland Lake, David C., at home; Edith (Mrs. Crichton) of Lindsay, and Mabel a teacher in Toronto. Another daughter, Mrs. Reid of Niagara Falls predeceased her father 15 years ago. An only sister, Mrs. William Fowler, Peterborough, survives. The funeral to Chesley cemetery last Thursday was largely attended, the service being in charge of his pastor, Rev. Wm Smith.—Chesley Enterprise.

BOY INJURED WHILE HUNTING

Accidental Discharge of Companion's Gun Wounds Him in Leg.

NEAR OMEMEE.

OMEMEE, Sept. 18.—While on a duck-shooting expedition a short distance from Omemee, Walter Lloyd had the misfortune to be shot near the ankle when a gun in the hands of his companion Lawrence Cunningham, was discharged. Cunningham took aim at a duck and when the gun refused to go off, he pointed it downward to examine it, when suddenly the trigger was pulled and the bullet entered the boy's leg. The shooting was purely accidental but it will necessitate the boy remaining in bed for six weeks.

SPAIN GIVES UP TANGIER DEMAND

Note Sent To Britain and France Withdrawing Request.

PROPOSES REVISION.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—The Spanish Government, in a note presented simultaneously in London and Paris, reliquished its demand for the inclusion of Tangier in the Spanish zone of Morocco.
The note proposes conversations with Great Britain and France to discuss the admission of Italy by revision of the statute (the pact of Algeciras), under which Tangier is internationally governmed.
The British Government is inclined to take a more or less detached attitude on Spain's proposal, being quite satisfied for the present with the status quo and anxious to avoid opening the Tangier question with the British Imperial Conference in sight.

Whole Towns Ruined As 120 Mile Gale Sweeps Florida Coast

Twelve Hundred Killed and Thirty-Eight Thousand Left Homeless When Tropical Hurricane Sweeps Over Western Florida

Property Damage Amounting from $25,000,000 to $125,000,000 in West Indian Storm Which Raged Along Lower Coast and Gulf of Mexico.

COMING FROM BAHAMAS, 120-MILE GALE SWEEPS MIAMI AND VICINITY FOR 9 HOURS

Greatest Damage Reported at Miami Beach—Victims Are in Dire Need of Food Supplies—Medical Aid Being Rushed to Scene of Disaster.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—A death list approximating twelve hundred persons, and property damage estimated at between $25,00,000 and $125,000,000 was the toll attributed last night to the West Indian hurricane which raged along the lower Florida east coast Friday and Saturday, and passed into the Gulf of Mexico headed toward Southern Alabama and Louisiana.

Reports from the storm area indicated more than thirty-eight thousand persons were made homeless and that many of these were in urgent need of food and medical supplies.

Miami and vicinity and Fort Lauderdale appear to have bore the brunt of the storm Water was flowing in the streets of Miami, practically every place of business was said to have been damaged, no drinking water was immediately available, and telephones and electric lights were out of commission.

Reports from Miami said stores were closed and restaurants were not serving food on account of lack of water, electricity and gas. In response to urgent appeals, doctors, nurses, supplies and water were hurried into Miami from sister cities of Florida.

Originating in the Bahamas, the hurricane struck Miami in all its fury Friday night. For nine hours it raged over Miami and Miami Beach leading destruction in its path. Desolation also was wrought in Hollywood, 30 miles north of Miami.

Miami Beach was swept by a 120 mile wind and high waves swept over it. During a lull, hundreds of persons ventured forth in an attempt to salvage their household effects, but another storm hurled itself against the city. This latter wind raged unabated for two hours and was more intense than the first.

While the damage at Hollywood was unestimated, those familiar with that city said in the past two years approximately $40,000,000 worth of building and development had been done and property loss must have been great.

Fuel, water and medical supplies were urgently needed in the stricken cities.

Governor John W. Martin ordered several companies and hospital units of the National Guard into the storm swept sections to aid the civil authorities in preserving order and to aid the needy.

Fort Lauderdale sent a request to Jacksonville for 5,000 loaves of bread, which were immediately furnished them.

The Associated Press staff correspondent in Miami was the first to reach the outside world with the story from the stricken city of Miami. He left that city at 4.15 o'clock Saturday afternoon and travelled through woods and railroad tracks over which water was flowing. In a blinding rain he proceeded on foot north of Fort Lauderdale. Telephone and telegraph poles and wires blocking the road, he walked the railroad track to Fort Lauderdale and slept in the women's clubs with fifty refugees, water was so scarce at that place it was portioned out half a glass at a time. Frightened and anxious people asked for information.

Gerald F. Beane, editor of The Fort Pierce News-Tribune, estimated the loss of lives at several hundred and the property damage at millions of dollars in the district around Pompano, five miles north of Fort Lauderdale.

Jacksonville, West Palm Beach, Tampa, Fort Pierce and other places rushed medical aid, food and water to the storm area. The work was carried out under the direction of the Red Gross committee.

Sweeping in from the Bahamas Friday midnight, the hurricane descended with fury on Miami, centering there during the greater part of the nine hours which it raged, and veering northward to carve a path of desolation in Hollywood and its vicinity, 12 miles to the north. Miami bore the brunt of the damage through the area in property losses, but increasing fatalities in the region between Hollywood and Fort Lauderdale indicated that loss of life would be largest there.

Rain began falling in Miami soon after midnight, attended by rising winds and a slow barometric decline. The storm advanced alarmingly and by one o'clock the wind had attained a velocity of 65 miles an hour, the barometer fell to 28.84. Two hours later light and power services snapped the Miami district, except in the heart of the city. The storm bore down with greater intensity in the early hours of the morning and at 5.40 o'clock the weather bureau reported a record low barometric pressure of 27.75, said to be the lowest mark ever registered in the United States. Miami Beach at the same time was helpless in the face of a 120 mile an hour wind, and mountainous waves swept over the island.

A brief lull giving indication of a cessation, prompted hundreds to venture forth in attempts to salvage their wind-swept household effects, but a twin storm, believed to be the re-curving disturbance, hurled itself flush against the city soon after 8 o'clock. The force of his latter storm was more intense than its predecessor and raged unabated for two hours.

Miami's bay front was subjected to a terrific battering, as the violent windstorm struck from a more dangerous angle. The bay crept higher over its accustomed level and raced like a mill pond waist deep from the Miami River northward to the county causeway.

Mountainous waves broke over Miami Beach and the two causeways, hurling abandoned automobiles into the bay and destroying in this second onslaught many homes that escaped with light damage before. Water was three to four feet deep in many places.

When the gale spent its force in the late forenoon Saturday, downtown streets for blocks lay several feet under water. Flood conditions prevailed generally in the lower sections of the city, and especially at Hialesh, where residents were reported imperilled by unusually high waters, added to the overflow during the several previous days of Everglades canals. Attempts to administer aid were handicapped seriously.

Downtown skyscrapers and business houses were shorn of their windows and plate glass fronts, and thousands upon thousand of dollars of merchandise were ruined in exposed places. Roofs gave way in some instances, and the superstructure display signs were razed everywhere. Streets throughout the city and neighboring communities were cluttered for miles with debris and were impassable. Tangled wires lay on every thoroughfare and broken telephone poles, uprooted trees, furniture and demolished automobiles testified to the fury of the storm.

AHEAD OF LONDON

Spirit of Fairness Shown by Directors Impress Visiting Experts.

Commencing the week with unpropitious weather and unfavorable prospects of reaching its objective, the 1926 Peterborough Industrial Exhibition finished up in a blaze of glory. Cheered by the knowledge that the attendance figures had passed the 40,000 mark, staid directors danced like young 'uns in the community hop which was held to the accompaniment of music from Lampham's Red Hussar Band in front of the Manufacturers' Building. Early on Friday afternoon Reg. Turner was observed to be wearing one of those smiles of the "won't come off" variety and on being asked why and wherefore replied simply, "the weather." The Weatherman, who was in deep disgrace around the secretary's office for the scurvy trick he played in the first three Exhibition days, made the 'amende honorable'—and that was all which was required.

Early in the forenoon the prediction that the Exhibition would pass its objective was made by C. E. McCaffrey, the judge in the Light Horse classes. Inteviewed by The Examiner Mr. McCaffrey spoke very highly of the types of animals exhibited and paid a tribute to the enthusiasm and energy of the directors. "This Exhibition took the wind out of my sails," he commented. "I never though for a moment that you had a show like this." The Peterborough Exhibition, he declared, was undoubtedly better than the London Exhibition, and he was emphatic in the assertion that it should be regarded as a Class A Show. There was no doubt in his mind that it was the third show in the Province of Ontario. Mr. McCaffrey's services have been requistioned for the Millbrook Fair.

Similar words of commendation were spoken by W. Doherty, the judge of the Heavy Horses. Mr. Doherty also made confident assertion that the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition could not fairly be regarded as anything less than a Class A Show. It was a better show than that of London and it was better laid out. He said everything bore the impress of being the result of shrewed and efficient management. He had been greatly struck by the spirit of fairness that seemed to animate the directors. All were anxious that there should be no favoritism and that a horse should be judged solely according to its merits. There were no instances of directors approaching the judge with the remark: "Such and such a horse belongs to so and so." He was pleased to see that Peter-

TO-DAY MARKS MEIGHEN'S FINAL CABINET SESSION

Mackenzie King Expected To Form Government Around Next Week.

NEW PORTFOLIOS.

November 1st Mentioned as Probable Date For Opening of Parliament.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 20. —(Canadian Press). — This week will witness a change of Governments. To-day, Premier Meighen's cabinet will meet in final session before resignation. Later in the week, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King will be called upon to form a government. Already his prospective ministers are on the way to Ottawa, and it is possible that they may meet Mr. King at the same time that Mr. Meighen is holding his final cabinet meeting.

There is naturally conjecture about some of the portfolios in the new government, while Mr. King's task will not be a very difficult one in view of the fact that several of his former ministers will again be assigned to their old departments, a number of new appointments must be made. The portfolio of customs, one of the most important at present in view of the re-organization, is to be provided for, but there is no idication who will get it. It has been suggested that Hon. Charles Dunning may resign Railways to some other minister and take on the work of reorganizing the customs department. There is no confirmation of this, however.

The name of Robert Forke, former Progressive leader, is connected with the Agriculture portfolio, Mr. Motherwell being appointed Lieutenant Governor of Saskatchewan. From Ontario, James Malcolm and W. D. Eurler are mentioned as probable appointees. Col. J. L. Ralston, defeated in Halifax, is regarded as a possibility from the Maritime provinces if a seat can be secured for him. Former Premier Venot may be the representative from New Bruswick. It is rumoured that Hon. Charles Murphy, now in the Senate, may retire as head of the Post Office department, that oprtfolio going to Hon. Lucien Cannon, former Solicitor General.

Until the new government has taken office, nothing definite in regard to the opening of parliament is obtainable. Thursday, November 8th is mentioned as a probable date, Past openings have frequently, though not always, been held on a Thursday, Parliament adjourning after the opening ceremonies to meet for business on the following Monday. By-Elections consequent upon the ministerial appointments must be held in the interval.

It has been suggested in news despatches that Premier Meighen will resign the leadership of the Conservative party. Mr. Meighen has made no public statement in this regard. Possibly after conferring with his ministers he may have something to say in regard to his own future actions. If he is to retain the leadership, a seat must be found for him before the opening of Parliament.

VERSATILE ACTRESS.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—(Associated Press).—Miss Madge Aubrey has won the sobriquet of "Universal Understudy" in London theatres this season. She played the role taken by Peggy O'Neill, the American actress, when that young woman was unable to appear in the star role of "Mercenary Mary."

Then she dashed from musical comedy to replace Miss Olga Lindo in the leading role, that of the American chorus girl, in "The Best People," which is a straight comedy. Binnie Hale had to leave "No, No Nanette" temporarily and Miss Aubrey sang her part.

Miss Aubrey is a member of a well-known Liverpool theatrical family and has been on the stage since childhood.

CAPTAIN SAYS ITALIANS WERE ALL STOWAWAYS

They Forced Him To Land Them at Mill Cove, He Claims.

WOULDN'T RETURN.

Life in Italy Not What Mussolini Would Have Believed.

HALIFAX, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—Capt. Romano, master of the Italian steamer Dori, now held at Halifax, following the landing of more than one hundred Sicilians at Mill Cove, St. Margaret's Bay, in alleged violation of the immigration laws of Canada, has told his story at last.

The captain denies having shipped the men, who are now held at Halifax on board his boat as passengers. He says they stowed away, and he did not discover them until the ship was three days at sea on her voyage for Philadelphia.

Captain Powerless to Resist

His story follows:

"The third day out we ran into a terrific storm, in which I came near losing my ship. In the midst of the confusion there came on deck, to my great amazement, dozens of men who did not belong to the crew. I at once recognized among them some of those who had been loitering on and about the ship while it was being loaded at Bemi Saf. Terrified by the thought that being seventeen pounds, caught been forced out of their various hiding places. They were sick and pale, and believed the end had come. When the storm abated they all gathered around me, and repeated their kneeling and wringing of hands. Terrified as they still were of the storm we had just lived through, and dreading all that stil lay ahead of them, not one of them ever expressed the desire of returning to sunny Sicily. For life in Cicily and the rest of Italy is not what Mussolini would have the world believe.

"After arguing all day with them I finally yielded to their wish, partly out of pity for these, my countrymen, and partly because of the menacing tone they assumed. I was in no position to impose my will on a hundred men grown stubborn in their misguided purpose.

Changed Course for Canada

"But when we came to within fifteen miles of the American coast a coast guard came circling around us and my passengers became alarmed. They began to realize how impossible it would be to land in the United States. So I decided, or rather, I should say, my passengers decided, that we should change our course for Halifax. There I was more hopeful of reaching the authorities before my illicit cargo was discovered and I accused of having wanted to land them without authority.

"When we came within sight of the coast of Nova Scotia we had been without food for 24 hours. The men were desperately anxious to reach the nearest port. My passengers were in such an ugly mood that I dared not refuse putting into Mill Cove. Their intention was to land there: mine was to notify the authorities and to get a few provisions before proceeding to Halifax.

"We anchored off Mill Cove on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 12. At once I went ashore with two of my crew, but upon inquiring for port authorities, or authorities of any kind, I could find none. Next I tried to get provisions, but it being Sunday the shops were closed, and I could find no one to give us any. Then I returned to my ship empty-handed and dreading to face my infuriated passengers. I could do nothing to stop them from what they did next. They rushed into my launch as soon as I drew alongside. Within an hour they were ashore.

INDIANS CLASH OVER RELIGION

CALM RESTORED.

ALLAHABAD, India, Sept. 20.—(United Press).—Four persons were killed and forty wounded during Communal disturbances at Najibabad, according to a despatch received to-day. Calm had returned to the city to-day. The Communal disturbance related in the foregoing is the latest evidence of jealousy between Moslems and Hindus in India.

Scarcely a week has passed recently without violence being recorded somewhere in India because of trouble between the two sects.

VISITORS CRITICIZED BY LABOR SENATOR

Says They Cannot Send More Immigrants Than Australia Can Use.

SYDNEY, Australia, Sept. 20. —(Canadian Press).—At a dinner tendered by the Commonwealth Government to the touring British Parliamentary delegation, Senator I. Grant, who is Deputy Leader of the Federal Labor party, caused a stir when he arose to declare that there would be a sharp conflict of opinion if the visitors thought they were going to induce more people to come to Australia than the country could employ.

The Marquis of Salisbury and Right Hon. Arthur Henderson, as members of the delegation, replied to the Senator, both contending that the aim of the Parliamentary delegates was to help and not hinder the development of the Dominions.

Mr. Hendersson declared that if the lands of the British Empire were not developed by whites then British statesmen would be failing in their trusteeship, and probably suffer the annoyance of seeing this vast oversea resources exploited by black and foreign labor. At the conclusion of his brief reply Mr. Henderson was greeted with cheers.

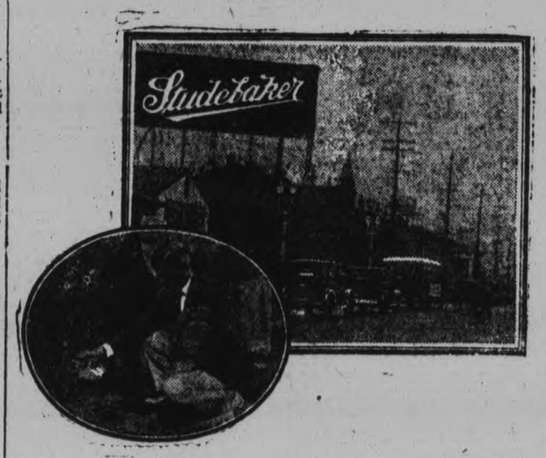
MOTOR CARAVAN BOOSTS IRRIGATION PROJECT



(Above) Sixty-three Studebaker cars were used by 350 Southern California boosters to visit Southwestern cities in the interest of a new Colorado River irrigation project. (In oval) Dr. Dexter, President of Whittier College, pouring Colorado River water on tree planted in Whittier, California.

Development of the tremendous power and irrigation possibilities of the Colorado River is the outstanding need of Southern California. To promote the great Colorado river project a caravan of sixty-three Studebaker motors cars and busses carrying 350 boosters recently made a tour of forty-two Southwestern cities. Everywhere the caravan touched, it was welcomed by city officials and the populace as the herald of a new era of prosperity.

Shortly before the start of the pilgrimage of progress, on June 28, a Studebaker Big Six "Sheriff' roared out across the Mojave desert from Los Angeles to Blythe, California. Several jugs were filled with the precious water from the turbulent Colorado River. These were carried by the caravan and at the principal cities visited "Colorado River Industrial Trees" were planted in the public parks and nourished by water from the river which within the near future is expected to build the "wonder empire of the world."

Non-partisan and non-political, the caravan offered an impressive demonstration of a great family of motor car owners taking part in a movement to promote general prosperity; a movement on a scale unprecedented by any one group of automobile owners.

In addition to giving tremendous impetus to the Colorado River development project, the tour of the boosters also furnised a clear-cut illustration of the efficiency of motorized transportation. Within the space of four days, forty-two cities were visted on the 420-mile trip. Arrivals and departures were determined by a previously arranged schedule and in all except one of the stops, arrival was exactly on time. In the exception, the caravan pulled in ten minutes late.

SURELY NOT ON NOVEMBER 11?

It is to be hoped that the report that the Provincial election is to be held on November 11th, the anniversary of the cessation of hostilities in the Great War, is untrue.

Surely it is possible to select some other date than this most significant anniversary on which the thoughts of the people of Ontario ought to be concentrated upon the men who fought, and especially upon those whose lives were laid down in the defence of the cause of liberty.

On November 11th Ontario should be a united Province, thinking gratefully of her sons who made the supreme sacrifice, not divided into hostile camps and hotly engaged in the climax of a political battle.

The fact that the official observance of the anniversary is slated for November 8th does not destroy the force of the argument that the actual anniversary of the signing of the Armistice would be a most unfortunate day to select as the date for a Provincial election.

SAVING THE ROADS.

The appeal of the Ontario Department of Highways to truck owners and drivers for co-operation in preserving the roads of the Province during the autumn rains should receive a cordial response.

The subgrade is undoubtedly softened by heavy rains and its resisting power decreased, which means that the overloading of trucks and fast driving of heavy machines, even when not overloaded, entails an immense amount of damage to road surfaces and the weakening of road foundations.

The maintenance of the highways is an expensive matter, and the heavier the cost the more the people of the Province have to pay in the way of taxes.

The money for road repairing comes out of the pockets of the public, and as everybody has to pay, it is everybody's business to see that repair bills are kept as low as possible.

Truck owners and drivers should be able to see that it is to their own advantage as citizens of the Province to co-operate with the authorities in avoiding expensive repairs.

If they are short-sighted enough, however, to fail to recognize that truth, there should be no hesitation on the part of the authorities in giving offenders a chance to make their explanations before a magistrate.

GIVE THE BANDS A CHANCE.

The directors of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition gave Exhibition patrons plenty of music this year with the Red Hussars, Peterboro Rangers, Caledonian Pipe Band, Salvation Army Band and the Chemong Indian Band in attendance.

There is nothing that quite takes the place of band music in adding life and gayety to events of this kind.

Kipling said that the band is the soul of the regiment; its place in other circles is also of great importance, and the Fair Board has done well in recognizing that fact.

But a step further should be taken; in addition to providing the bands a better opportunity should be given to hear them to advantage.

The unfortunate musicians are forced to compete with the one thousand and one noises of the midway.

During the last three days of the Exhibition the splendid programmes of the Rangers lost much of their effectiveness because the band found itself stationed alongside the noisy gasoline engine of a Ferris wheel; last year the organ of a merry-go-round almost completely spoiled some of the band's finest numbers.

These conditions should be taken into consideration by the directors when plans for next year's Exhibition are under way.

A NEW RECORD.

Even a Federal election and two days of rainy weather could not prevent the people of the city and district giving the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition a new attendance record.

The magnificent rally in support of the Exhibition on Friday and Saturday turned the trick, and when the figures were checked up on Saturday night, it was found that this year's objective of 40,000 paid admissions had been exceeded by 112.

The Saturday figure was 13,244, and the last two days thus accounted for a 26,349 addition to the total attendance and made a new record possible.

When it is considered that the bad weather on Wednesday and Thursday kept the total of those two days down to 7,543, the magnitude of the feat accomplished in passing the objective can be appreciated.

To the public the credit is due.

True, the Exhibition management did its part in providing the finest all-round fair in the history of the organization, but this would have been wasted had it not been for the loyalty of the people who seemed determined that even weather conditions could not stop the onward progress of the Exhibition.

Friday was not the sort of day that would usually attract a record-breaking crowd, for there was always a threat of rain, but city folks and country dwellers alike braved the elements and gave the Exhibition a 13,105 boost.

Fine bright weather came on at last on Saturday, and with it the record-breaking last day attendance and a new mark of 40,112 for next year's board to aim at.

The results are gratifying to the whole district. They show that the Peterboro Industrial has the confidence of the citizens, and that there need be no fear of support, while at the same time there is evidence that the reputation of the Exhibition is spreading, and that the attendance from distant points can be counted upon to show a steady increase.

THE WEALTH OF THE STATES.

Some figures as to the wealth of the United States were given recently by The New York Times, which, it claims, are justification for that country's tariffs, foreign policy and industrial and political laws. It states that today, with a national wealth estimated at close to $400,000,000,000, the United States overlaps England, France and half the continent of Europe. Of a total wealth of $1,000,000,000,000, it claims a solid 40 per cent. Meanwhile its lien on the wealth of other nations stands at close to $25,000,000,000, of which $12,000,000,000 consists in war loans and the balance in foreign investments. It has more money in Canada than has the Mother Country, and it has $4,000,000,000 afloat in Latin America.

These figures give a good deal of food for thought. For instance, it might be asked what part the war played in making the States the richest country in the world. Again in what reputation is the States held in the world? Again what share is that country taking in the efforts to bring peace and prosperity to the world? It is a stupid man, and likewise a nation, that puts his and its faith in riches. Long ago they were said to be deceitful and experience has shown they are. The Times says that the problem which faces its country is to preserve its present prosperity. A leading American has said that the States must have a strong army and navy to protect its wealth against the envy and enmity of the world. The United States has yet to learn that the far above riches stands character, both in individuals and nations. It will do so in time, and strange as it may sound now, possibly through adversity.—St. Catharines Standard.

BIG MEN ARE NEEDED.

(From The Globe.)

In filling the portfolio of Customs and Excise Mr. King doubtless is keeping in mind the fact that the public has a special interest in this appointment and will watch with more than ordinary anxiety whatever move he makes to ensure fulfilment of the promises of his campaign speeches and pre-election advertisement. Events growing out of the customs probe were responsible for the election. The scandal which was uncovered placed the Liberal party on the defensive. That Mr. King was returned to power does not mean that the conditions found were condoned—this would be unthinkable—but that the Liberal Leader was taken at his word when he declared for a thorough completion of the inquiry and a housecleaning regardless of locality, or individual, or political affiliations. To carry out the reforms already recommended, and to which Mr. King committed himself in Parliament, as well as any further effective recommendations made, to acceptance of which he committed himself before the country, will call for a department head of exceptional qualifications, and with anything else the Liberal Leader may be certain the public will not be satisfied.

Under less imperative circumstances it might be considered unfortunate that the position of Deputy Minister was also vacant, but the changes in administration required are so extensive that a definite farewell to the past and its traditions is essential, and the way will be made easier for the opening of a new book with two department chiefs who have no lingering affiliation with methods and customs now discredited. The customs investigation not only disclosed a state of affairs which made a blot on the good name of the country, but showed that the department has been so badly involved in routine and so entangled in its own red tape that efficiency was a thing unknown. It required months to reach cases which should have had immediate attention, and, if complaints of customs brokers and importers' representatives in general may be credited, the operations of the department everywhere are clogged almost to the stopping point with cumbersome rules and systems which need revision.

Obviously the department calls at this time for men—as Minister and as Deputy—of strong character and marked ability who can serve without fear or favor both the Government and the public. They should possess the keenness and driving force of high business executives, for a department upon which the country depends for a large part of its revenue is, first of all, a huge business institution. The questions of a clean-up and of the adoption of efficient methods are of such vital importance to the business element of the country that it would be well-placed judgment for Mr. King to call the business leaders into consultation on the subject of finding the proper men. The Commercial Protective Association did not undertake the task of going into the customs situation for its own amusement or through political motives, and doubtless will back the new administration in every sincere effort it makes to bring about reforms. With the aid of those who compose this organization a man might be found who would contribute to the service the disinterested devotion, studious disposition, aggressive methods and business experience which Mr. R. P. Sparks, as its head, gave to the Protective Association.

Undeniably, the task involved in putting the department on a proper basis will be heavy. The program outlined by the investigating committee contains more than a score of important recommendations, several of which in themselves are far-reaching. Besides this, the promise made by Mr. King in his speech at Stratford on Sept. 9, and elsewhere, constitutes part of the program on which he was re-elected:

> "We are going to see to it that this investigation is carried on, and not by one judge, but by two or three, and not in one port, but in every port. It will investigate any charges that are laid, no matter who is involved. The Liberal party is determined to have this matter carried through successfully to the end and have the whole thing cleared up to the satisfaction of the people of this country, regardless of their political affiliation."

In addition, he pledged himself in a signed advertisement "to continue relentlessly the investigation of the customs service and to carry out without fear or favor the needed reforms."

With this in prospect, the work of reform will continue for some time, but there is enough in hand at once to keep the ablest executives busy, and there should be no undue delay in putting the most capable men available on the job.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market on Saturday was inactive owing to the fact that there were few firm bids received overnight. The local and country demand for car lots of oats continued steady and a moderate amount of business was done. Prices were unchanged.

The volume of business transacted in Spring wheat grades of flour was fair and prices were unchanged. The tone of the wheat flour market was steady with a small trade passing.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were well maintained under a liberal movement. Considerable business was done in standard grades of rolled oats and values were firm.

The feature of the egg trade was the continuation of the strong tone and prices for fresh extras and firsts on Saturday scored another advance of 1 to 2 cents per dozen for the week which is attributed to the small production throughout the country and the good demand. The receipts Saturday totalled 1,164 cases.

The butter market was again firmer under a good demand and prices closed another fraction higher. The receipts were 2,205 packages.

The demand from English importers for cheese continued good and prices were stronger. The receipts were 14,113 boxes.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

I noticed in your paper a statement saying no cars could be parked on the south side of Lansdowne during the Exhibition. I would like to know where they get the right to prevent this. I cannot see how anyone can be prevented from parking their car there. North Monaghan Council have no by-law to prohibit this, and any person who conforms to the Motor Vehicles Act may have no fear about parking here. This strip of land is a public thoroughfare and if the Exhibition Board was not so mean they would have at least a cinder path along it. No one gets any taxes from these people and they have not even paid for the cinder paths on the east and west sides of the grounds (outside) which the council placed there at their request, although they have been billed for it several times. I think this no parking of cars on the south side of Lansdowne Street is a great bluff which they are trying to bamboozle the public with. Where is the Ontario Motor League now.

Thanking you for the use of your paper.

Yours truly,
JOHN BARNES.

The above letter was received by The Examiner earlier in the week, but due to the fact that all arrangements had been made in connection with parking of the cars at the Exhibition, it was not inserted until tonight, in order that no disturbance of arrangements might be brought about during Exhibition week.

The Examiner believes that the arrangement for no parking on the south side of Lansdowne is due to the fact that when parking is allowed there is a dangerous congestion at the time the crowds are leaving the grounds.

The arrangement is made as much as anything for the safety of those who are attending the Exhibition.—The Examiner.

The public charities fund brought in $1,361,000, while the expenditure under this head was $1,350,076.

There was paid out to meet loans due, or taken up previous to due date, a total of $13,440,000.

The public funded debt is given at $78,004,926, but against this is an amount of $5,834,618 in sinking fund, the amount of $1,000,000 set aside from revenue for debt redemption, and $14,743,750, balance of Bank of Hochelaga loan, making the net funded debt $56,426,557, to which must be added $12,268,698, temporary loans and deposits, or total obligations of $68,694,656.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

HOW MANY WORDS DO YOU KNOW?

"The English language bears on its body certain intrinsic characteristics which will suggest one possible method of attack in this problem of English teaching," says A. B. Brubacher, in Scribner's Magazine, "I refer to our vocabulary, rendered unique by its compositeness. What other language may be compared with it?

"English has indeed a wonderfully diversified vocabulary, reaching back as it does into the mental life of numerous, highly cultivated peoples for its stock of words—Greeks, Latins, Angles, Saxons, French. These are the major sources.

"Not only is our stock of words amazingly large, but individual words have great depths of meaning. Now, without special effort, we acquire very small vocabularies. Out of the 450,000 words defined in our dictionaries, many citizens must get along with a thousand or two, leaving the great treasury untouched."

WISE AND OTHERWISE

We wouldn't mind dodging autos so much if the drivers would quit giving us such dirty looks.

It is only natural that father should worry about son. Father was a son himself, once.

Eloping isn't what it used to be, the girl is gone a couple of weeks now before the family becomes alarmed.

Few of us worry about the cost of living. What we worry about is where we will get the money.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

UNCLES

Uncles are rather funny men,
Not strangers, not exactly dads,
And yet they pat you now and then
Like fathers do with their own lads.
A lot of folks a fellow knows;
An uncle's different from those;
Whatever kindness others do,
You just expect an uncle to.

When other people come to call
A fellow wants to run away,
But uncles you don't mind at all,
I wish that mine came every day.
An uncle understands a chap,
You don't mind sitting on his lap.
He's most as nice as parents are,
And never so particular.

And, when he talks, some things come out
You never heard before, somehow;
I guess my father was about
The kind of boy that I am now.
My father never once was bad
At all, according to my dad;
But Uncle laughs, and winks his eye,
And Dad turns red. I wonder why?

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

THE BASIS OF MARRIAGE

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

Mrs. Mary Borden, alias Mrs. Sears, an American novelist, in a lecture on international psychology in London, some time ago, deplored sentiment as the sole basis of marriage. She pointed out that in America love making and sentiments were the usual precedents of marriage, and the consequence was much after marriage estrangement.

With the French, on the contrary, and the Europeans generally, happy marriages were more common than in America because economic well being was considered the proper basis of married life.

It is all too true that sentiment alone should not dominate in marriage. But then, on the other hand, neither should economic considerations dominate.

The best system seems perhaps to be a blending of the two. There should be enough sentiment to render the contract agreeable and tolerable, but it should be recognized that this sentiment is useless without a sound economic basis.

Among Americans the matter is attended to by the young people themselves almost entirely, while in France, for instance, the parents have much to do with the case.

There is no reason why a girl or boy about to be married should not take the advice of the parents. They are older and wiser and their experience ought to mean something. That the parents should entirely control the matter is contrary to American convictions. But that the young people themselves should manage the whole business does not seem to be reasonable.

A little more tractability on both sides perhaps would be advantageous. Parents should consider the feelings and preferences of the child, while on the other hand the child should consider the advice of the parents. If the two points of view in the case were properly co-ordinated the insurance of a happy marriage would be greater.

Many a marriage which is undertaken purely from sentimental reasons has speedily gone upon the rocks. Where on's individuality is so pronounced that he decides the whole matter for himself, that individuality may later lead him to go his own way after marriage without consulting the feelings of his wife, and a divorce or separation may ensue.

The best way is to take all the elements in the case into consideration. Sentiment is to be reckoned with, since the basis of our happiness is always sentimental to a degree, while on the other hand economic reasons should not be disregarded, for much of our well being depends upon our means.

SELL BY CANDLE.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The renting of the parish field of the village of Grimstoh is still settled by bidding in candle light. According to this ancient custom, the villagers gather and bid for the use of the parish field for one year. The person who bids as the candle burns out is proclaimed the tenant.

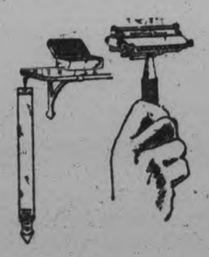
"HABIT, kept me from a Real Shave."

THAT'S what many men confess, once they've learned the advantages of the stropping feature of the Valet AutoStrop Razor.

"I formerly used an ordinary safety razor," many say "but only the first few shaves with a new blade were good. After that it was a choice between a poor shave or a new blade.

Now I give my Valet AutoStrop Razor blade a few strokes on the strop without removing it from the holder, and thus enjoy many perfect shaves from the same blade."

Changing Habits



If you're in a habit rut, why not break loose and find out how superior shaving is so easily attainable? If you'll just switch to a Valet AutoStrop Razor you will never return to old ways, for it is the only razor that automatically sharpens its own blades without removing them.

FEAR REIGNS AROUND PACIFIC ASSERTS NOTED PEACE WORKER

Mutual Distrust and Fear Found Among All Nations.

INSTITUTE FORMED.

Nations Making Effort To Eradicate Element of Suspicion.

By A. W. V. KING

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SYDNEY, Australia (United Press).—A circle of international fear exists all the way around the Pacific, declared J. Merle Davis, general secretary of the Institute of Pacific Relations, upon his return here from a tour of all countries bordering the ocean.

Davis made the trip in an endeavor to arouse greater interest in the peace aims of the Institute and to perfect arrangements for the second conference of the Institute at Honolulu in July 1927.

"I was much impressed by the circle of fear which exists right around the Pacific," Davis told the United Press here.

"The United States is afraid of certain elements of Japanese life. Japan is desperately afraid of the United States and that was emphasized in 75 interviews I had in that country. America's economic penetration and growing militarism is the way they view it. Japan is also afraid of China and Russia. China is afraid,mu ch afraid, of Japan.

"Here in Australia, the people seem to be afraid of Japan, though again it is acknowledged that Japan can never harm Australia, owing to the great distance between the two countries and the difficulties of transport.

"This element of fear and suspicion the institute is trying to eradicate by the gathering and dissemination of accurate and provable facts affecting food supplies, laws relating to migration and their interpretation by responsible officials, treatment of aliens, and others."

Davis said that in Japan he tried to get past the "internationals", the group of people always brought out to meet Americans, and sought interviews with dozens of the leaders of the reactionary groups, including the Fascists.

Pointing out that the Institute of Pacific Relations was confining itself to trying to understand the points of view of different national groups, Davis said that it did not deal with immediate concerns and interests, but took a fair and dispassionate view on international matters, and hoped to avoid, if possible, conflict between east and west.

"It may not be possible to avoid such a conflict," he added. "We do not think it is. But we appeal to intelligent people in these countries to make an effort to avert such a catastrophe."

ASSISTANT BISHOP TO BE CONSECRATED

Rev. R. R. Smith Will Work With Archbishop of Algoma.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Sept. 20.—The consecration will take place at St. Luke's Pro-Cathedral on Tuesday morning of Rev. R. Roxborough Smith, former Dean of Divinity at Bishop's College, Lennoxville, who was last June elected Co-adjutor-Bishop of Algoma. The office carries with it the right of succession to the see, and the election was made at the request of His Grace Archbishop Thorneloe, who desired Episcopal assistance in view of his increasing age.

Tuesday's ceremony will be conducted by the Archbishop as consecrator, assisted by the Bishops of Toronto, Ottawa and Ontario, and in all probability by two Bishops of the American Church. Right Rev. Derwyn Owen, Lord Bishop of Niagara, will sing the Litany, and the Bishop of Montreal will be the preacher. A large number of clergy are expected to attend the service.

CARS DAMAGED AT MILLBROOK

Minor Repairs Needed Following Collision Yesterday Morning.

NOBODY HURT.

An accident with fortunately no very serious results, occurred about 10,30 a.m., o Sunday, when a Toronto car driven by Mr. Rutledge, going east on King street, collided with W. Fred Fallis' car, his daughter, Miss Florence, being the driver at the time.

Miss Fallis had been leaving the usual supply of milk at the local creamery, and had just started up, proceeding from Ann s' eet to King, when the collision occurred. In some way the fenders of the two cars became locked and the Fallis car was dragged for some distance, having the front axle and fender bent, before a stop could be made and the damage estimated. The Toronto car had a tire punctured apparently through being pierced by an oil cup on the auto struck.

Each owner agreed to settle for repairs to his own car as blame for the accident could not be wholly attached to either driver.

Arnold Fallis was with his sister at the time of the accident, the car being used for delivery on their milk route on Sunday mornings instead of the usual covered dairy waggon.

Some if the milk bottles were broken but the loss from this source was not great.

Hastings I.O.D.E. Turns Over Money For Memorial Purposes.

HASTINGS, Sept. 20. — At the disbandment of the Hastings Chapter I. O. D. E. which took place recently a committee was appointed by the members to wait on the local council and to place the Chapter's money in the trust of the Council.

Quite a sum of money was in the treasury of the Chapter and it was thought best to have the money used for Memorial purposes. Those on the committee are Miss E. S.Fowlds, Miss Della Plant, Mrs. A. V. German and Mrs. P. M. Howard.

The framed picture of the boys of Hastings and district who lost their lives in the Great War was presented to the council to be hung in the Town Hall and with the picture was given the Service Flag and the Standard Flag.

BIARRITZ BEACH RULES ENFORCED

People With Scanty Bathing Suits and No Robes Turned Back.

BIARRITZ (United Press). — Coming from Deauville where men and women vied with each other in abbreviating their bathing costumes, hundreds of fervents of the cult of nakedness are in conflict with the municipal authorities of this conservative resort. The bathers won their case at Deauville, principally because ninety-five percent of the people frequenting the beach were Americans or British and they did just about as they pleased.

But down here the authorities insist on absolute respect for appearances. At Deauville bathers strolled along the beach or lounged on chairs at the beach cafes with nothing on but the slightest of suits. Here they must wear robes.

Many of the newcomers have sallied forth from the fashionable hotels attired in a bathing suit and a smile. The latter vaninshed when the severe guardians of public morals brought to their attention the municipal regulations regarding robes.

KNIFE THROWING TOKIO INCIDENT MEETS A DENIAL

New Accounts Declare Attempted Assassination of Royalty Was Grossly Exaggerated.

TILLEY NOT HIT.

British Ambassador Tilley Deplores Tales Spread Throughout States.

TOKIO, Sept. 20. — A humble Japanese coolie grew curious to gaze at royalty, was discovered, became frightened, fled and dropped a knife in his flight.

Whereupon the United States has become regaled with a story that a knife was thrown "towards" Crown Princess Louise of Sweden, while she dined at the British embassy; that Roger Tilley, son of the British ambassador was struck, and was saved from serious injury only by a gold cigarette case which deflected the knife, and that a luncheon attended by high persons of the diplomatic world was thrown into an uproar.

The incident took place at the British embassy where Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus and Crown Princess Louise of Sweden were the guests of British Ambassador Tilley at a luncheon.

The British embassy in reviewing the incident to the United Press, deplored the sensational stories which were circulated in the United States and Canada and denied the truth of these accounts.

The foreign office and the metropolitan police of Tokio agreed with the embassy account of the affair.

Noticed Intruder.

This, according to the embassy was what happened.

Roger Tilley was sitting with the other guests around the luncheon table when he noticed a man peering into the room. He quietly excused himself and then went out, intending to question the intruder. But the man was frightened off and fled as Tilley approached. He left behind him a knife. Tilley was uncertain whether it was feebly thrown or merely dropped but it did not strike him and the guests at the luncheon could not even see what was transpiring.

Tilley notified the police guarding the embassy compound and returned to the luncheon table. None of the guests knew anything of the incident until the next day, when they read some of the sensational Japanese newspapers.

Those papers, perhaps with an eye to circulation, printed a colorful account of the affair, and a similar story found its way to the United States through channels other than the United Press.

The embassy emphasized that it deplored these sensational stories.

HAVELOCK, Sept. 20.—Amid a setting of ferns and beautiful autumn flowers, an unusually pretty September wedding was solemnized at St. John's Anglican Church on Wednesday, the 15th inst., when Lilly Kathleen, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Smith of Belmont, became the bride of Mr. Bruce W. Longmuir, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Longmuir, Trent River Road. The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. T. H. Stanley.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Miss Jean Anderson of Havelock, and looked charming attired in a gown of dew berry georgette, with lace trimming, and large black velvet picture hat. She wore the gift of the groom, a string of pearls, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses. Miss Iva Smith, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and was becomingly gowned in Nile green flat crepe and large black picture hat, and carried a bouquet of assorted flowers. The groom was attended by Mr. Isaac Anderson of Round Lake, a cousin of the bride, while Mr. Robert Post and Mr. Ernest Sanderson acted as ushers.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, and a wedding dinner served to over sixty guests. The dining-room was prettily decorated with white streamers, white bridal bells and bouquets of colored flowers.

Later in the afternoon the happy couple left by train, amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a honeymoon trip to Toronto, Hamilton and Timmins, the bride travelling in sand crepe gown with black trimming, black hat and shoes, brown marvella coat with sable collar and purse to match. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Longmuir will reside at their residence on Concession Street, Havelock.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a white gold bar pin and gold cuff links to the best man.

The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful and costly gifts, showing the esteem in which they are held by a wide circle of relatives and friends.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. George Longmuir, Miss Reta Longmuir, Mr. Fred Longmuir of Seymour; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Longmuir, Miss Eleanor Longmuir of Seymour East; Mr. Cross and Miss Janet Cross of Norwood, Mr. and Mrs. J. Anderson and family of Round Lake, Mr. and Mrs. William Hodgins of Peterboro, Mr. Robert Anderson of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brooks of Gore's Landing, Miss Grace Garrison of Campbellford, Miss Annie Garrison of Detroit, Miss Emily Anderson of Niagara Falls, Miss Laura Anderson of Toronto, Mr. Thomas Anderson of Smith Falls.

TWO JUDGES SAY

borough had so many influential men, imbued with the community spirit.

Dense crowds packed the Grand Stand both afternoon and evening. In addition to the musical and vaudeville attractions, the spectators in the afternon witnessed the racing, some of the judging of horses, the drawing contests and a tug of war that provided innumerable thrills. Excitement was intense after Fred Jopling's stalwarts wonthe first pull and rousing cheers greeted the final win which gave it the third consecutive triumph and permanent possesion of the trophy.

Towards the close of the evening performance, it was announced that the attendance figures were 537 below the 40,000 aimed at, the announcer humorously suggesting that the audience should go out of the grounds and pay for a second admission, in sufficient number to bring the attendance record up to the desired total. It was also intimated that the apparatus which was used to amplify gramophone music in the stand, and also in the Manufacturers' Building was brought direct from the Canadian National Exhibition at a cost of over $900.

Despite the heavy dew, which added difficulties to the work, the display of fireworks was a great success. Practically the whole crowd waited until the conclusion and then moved off for a last ride on the mechanical contrivances, a last look round the booths, or to take part in the community dance which rung down the curtain on what must be unquestionably regarded as Peterborough's most successful Exhibtion.

EVEN CHINESE BOBBED.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(Associated Press).—Not only has bobbed hair become popular in China but many girls are Eton cropped, Miss Qui Sing Wong, a young Chinese woman who is studying hairdressing here, told radio listeners.

Miss Wong said that when she returns to China she is to open a beauty culture and hairdressing establishment at which most of her customers will be members of the British colony and Chinese girls under 20, for women over 20 at present are too much attached to the gold and jewelled pins with which they arrange their hair ever to have it cut.

She also is taking back a permanent hair waving machine to displace the old-fashioned pins and curl-papers.

SCHOOL FAIR

OMEMEE.

OMEMEE, Sept. 20. — The annual School Fair for the rural schools of this community was held on Thursday afternoon. Owing to inclement weather and the short notice only a few of Omemee citizens attended. As in former years, a spacious tent was erected on the Athletic Ground, in which was exhibited a splendid display of choice vegetables, eggs, cooking, flowers, fruit, sewing, baking, etc.

The school parade, which opened the afternoon's programme, was splendid. This was accompanied by singing and a school yell from the various schools which competed. The first prize was awarded to No. 9, Ops., the second to Orange Corners, and the third to Fee's School. As the Fair was held earlier than in previous years, very little time had been given to make preparations since the opening of school.

Public speaking by several pupils followed, after which many races were run off, and later both girls and boys competed for the best horsemanship.

At about 4 o'clock the tent was thrown open, and with great glee did the pupils with their parents and others, view the display where a prize ticket was attached.

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan's disillusioned father had warned him: "Destroy women or they will destroy you; take their love scornfully—and forget!" This advice has made Juan the greatest lover of all time. But his cynicism is suddenly checked by the disarming innocence of Madonna-like Adriana Varanese. Loving her madly, he reforms. The affair is dangerous because infamous Lucretia Borgia loves Juan, while Donati, her kinsman, covets Adriana. The Borgias capture Duke Varanese, Adriana's father. To save his life she agrees to marry Donati. Lucretia Borgia visits Juan, but he spurns her.

"The wisest man is easiest to deceive," she told him.

He made her a low, sweeping bow, a bow which would have expressed all gallantry, all admiration, had he not exaggerated it just enough to make it an absurd mockery of what it might have been. Her cheeks flamed as she stood watching him. He could make sport of her, of Lucretia Borgia, and before his servant, who no doubt was tittering there in the shadows beyond the candles' flickering light! Oh, he should pay for this—she would summon Neri, the poisoner, and bid him devise some far worse death than ever yet had sent an enemy of the Borgias' writhing on his way to hell!

And yet—yet how could she do that? How could she, when her hands fairly ached to touch that dark, sleek head, when she asked nothing better of life than she might spend the rest of it with him?

With bitterness in her heart, she forced herself to play out the role she had assumed. It was her only chance of winning him, and though she hated it, she must play it to the end.

Juan had turned away from her deliberately, almost insultingly. Never before had any sman turned from her in such a manner.

He motioned for Pedrillo to carry out whatever wishes she might express, as he might have ordered the servant to attend the most unimportant guest. He was striding toward the outer door when Lucretia called to him. The sound of her own voice startled her, so strained was it, so forced.

"Rome is laughing at you," she told him, mockingly. "And when you have learned what all the city knows, and long has known, come to me—perhaps I shall forgive you."

He turned then to face her. His eyes narrowed; he caught his breath sharply. Then suddenly he laughed, and she realized that he saw through her pretenses, knew how she loved him, how gladly she would have given up the world for him.

"Perhaps I shall come," he retorted, and was gone.

And Lucretia stood smiling, a curious smile, fed by her hatred of Adriana, and her assurance that Juan would be disillusioned about the girl. He was playing into her hands. Now she had only to wait, and see him come back to her, admitting that he had been wrong she told herself.

And yet—would he come?

CHAPTER VIII.

Adriana sat huddled down in the middle of her beautiful, carved bed, staring up at the star-sprinkled blue ceiling, trying to believe that she was the girl who had wakened in that room so many happy mornings.

She could not believe the ghastly events of the evening. Her father torn from her, dragged away by Cesare Borgia and Donati to the Vatican—perhaps. Perhaps to the prison of San Angelo, that great, forbidding building whose rounded side rose above the Tiber. It might be true that he had been taken away merely to sign the agreement that would confirm his consent to her marrying Donati—but knowing how he would hate doing that, she feared that there would be trouble, that he would refuse to buy his own life from Cesare at so hideous a price, and that his imprisonment or death would swiftly follow.

She did not dare let her thoughts rest on Don Juan, because love for him welled up so overwhelmingly in her heart that she felt she could not bear it. And when she remembered, even as her eyes grew misty at the thought of him, that never again would he kneel at her feet and press his lips to the palm of her hand, that she must not see him again—then her lovely head went down on her knees and she sobbed as if her heart would break.

She sat up, brushed the hair back from her forehead with the back of her hand, tried to think. She must accept this new life that had been thrust upon her, must marry Donati, as Cesare Borgia had decreed. And because she was a Varanese, there could be no hope that anything but death would end such an alliance.

Other wise, something might have been arranged. Rina, her maid, had been trying to console her by making plans. Adriana might wed Donati, said Rina, and then, quite soon, Varanese and his daughter could escape from Rome — and perhaps the handsome young Spaniard would just by chance leave the city also, and find his way to the same place!

Rina had smiled significantly over that suggestion, had tried valiantly to make her young mistress smile also. But Adriana had refused even to consider such a thing. There could be no way out.

In the corridor there were servants, crowding together, talking in muffled tones. They were too terrified to go to bed. Rina was there with them, Adriana knew.

Suddenly she sat up straighter in bed. Rina had screamed. One of the men servants raised his voice in protest against something. Then came Donati's voice, then Rina's, coming clearly through the half-open door.

"You cannot see my mistress," she was saying, "She has retired."

The sound of a man's feet on the wide stone stairs. Donati's voice again, angry, commanding.

"I am master here! If you value your head, obey me. And if anyone comes and asks to see the Lady Adriana, you are to say that she is no longer here."

Adriana's heart seemed to stop beating for an instant, then it began a furious tattoo that made her almost breathless. Donati's feet sounded on the stairs; nearer and nearer he came. She looked about wildly, searching for some means of escaping him, but before she could leap from her bed he was standing in the doorway, a lascivious smile on his thick lips.

Rina tried to follow him into the room, but angrily he thrust her out and closed and bolted the door. Trembling with fear, Adriana caught up a great square of heavy, brocaded silk that lay across the foot of the bed and drew it around her; its coloring Venetian yellow and scarlet and deep blue, so sharply emphasized her beauty that for a moment Donati stood motionless, admiring her.

Verily, this was a prize that he had found for himself!

Edging toward the side of the bed farthest from him, she stepped out, drawing the brocade close about her; it enveloped her like a great cloak. As he came toward her she held out one hand to him; when she spoke her voice trembled piteously.

"Please—please go!" she begged.

He laughed as if she had told him some highly amusing joke. Then, as he strode forward and she screamed, his manner changed.

"No outcries!" he warned her. "Be quiet, if you desire safety for yourself and your household."

Adriana pressed the back of one hand to her lips, as if to hold back the screams she would have uttered. Slowly, her bare feet dragging over the stone floor, she made her way toward the far corner of the room.

Refugees Leaving Hurricane Swept Cities Of Florida

Merchants Warned Against Profiteering— Stricken Area Barred To All But Those Doing Relief Work— Little Communication Yet.

RELIEF TRAINS ARE ON WAY TO MIAMI FROM PALM BEACH

MIAMI, Florida, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press.—Estimates ranging from 600 to 1,500 dead prevailed in the Miami disaster area this morning as first contact with the outside world was established by aeroplane, automobile and relief trains. Damage was estimated at $150,000,000. At least 360 persons are actually known to have perished, and the toll of dead will certainly exceed this figure.

In the Miami storm area are included Hollywod, Fort Lauderdale, Redlands, Moorehaven and Clewiston. Little communication has been established with these places as causeways were flooded and wreckage and high water barred traffic. Because of continued severe winds areoplane pilots were reported as wary of attempting to enter the area.

Score of automobiles were leaving the city hourly with refugees, mostly families with children for whose health there was concern owing to the scarcity of milk. All those not in search of missing relatives or aiding in relief have been ordered from the streets, and merchants have been warned that profiteering will be punished by heavy fines and imprisonment. Relief trains are arriving from West Palm Beach with physicians, nurses and food supplies.

Wind Damage Heavy.

WEST PALM BEACH, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press). — Most of the wooden structures in Miami have been blown down or unroofed, it is reported. Large concrete and steel buildings have been twisted at their base. Practically every piece of glass in the city was broken. Many of the dead and injured were hit by flying pieces of damaged buildings. Heavy galvanized iron sheetings of roofing were flying about the city like scraps of paper, and were wrapped around trees.

A small houseboat anchored at Cocoanut Grove with a man and his small son aboard was blown from the moorings and swept helplessly out to the open sea. No trace of it has been seen. A large dredge was wrecked with 14 men aboard. Seven swam to shore, while the others were lost.

Efforts were being made in Miami to locate the relatives of 200 children who were wandering about what remains of the city separated from their families. Miami was under martial law, and none except newspapermen and those on official missions were allowed to enter.

Travelling West.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—The devastating hurricane which raged across the lower part of Florida over the week-end, to-day was reported descending upon Pensacola, in the extreme northwestern part of the State. A wind which was blowing at the rate of 100 miles an hour, attended by a terrific downpour of rain, was reported from Pensacola before wire communication was cut off this morning. The storm apparently headed towards Burwood, La., and thousands in the surrounding cities were apprehensive lest its progress be marked there with the destruction experienced in Florida.

Canadian Ships Unhurt.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—No Canadian Government merchant marine vessels were in the danger zone of the Florida hurricane, it was stated by R. B. Teakle, general manager, to-day.

No Canadians Dead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—Up to 11.15 this morning no Canadians had been reported killed or injured in the meagre casualty lists of the Florida hurricane available here.

INTEREST IN ONTARIO.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.— Interest is being taken throughout Ontario in the Florida disaster as many Canadians are in the storm area. So far more than 100 residents of Ontario are reported as visiting or resident in the zone and there are doubtless many more.

The Canadian Red Cross has placed its facilities at the disposal of the sister organization in the United States, and headquarters here are awaiting a reply to the message before forming plans for sending relief.

REACHES PENSACOLA.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 20. —(Canadian Press,)—A hurricane riding 100 miles an hour swept into Pensacola shortly after 11 o'clock to-day, telephone advices here state.

PRESIDENT'S APPEAL.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—President Coolidge to-day appealed to the people of the United States to come to the assistance of the sufferers in the Florida disaster.

RESIDENTS TAKE SHELTER.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 20.—(Canadian Press.)— According to advices reaching here, residents of Mobile and Pensacola are taking refuge in downtown hotels and office buildings in the face of the approaching hurricane. All boats in Mobile harbor have taken to cover. This information was received by wireless and after the message came communication was broken off and Mobile was silent.

Hotel Turned Round

SEBRING, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press). — Refugees reaching Sebring said that only brick buildings came through the gale unscathed, and that wreckage was strewn over a wide area. They said the Mayflower Hotel at Moorehaven was turned completely around and that numerous small buildings were wrecked.

Doctors and nurses were arriving in the disaster section today, bringing supplies of food and medicine. Urgent calls had been sent out for bread, and an appeal was made for equipment to handle 300 X-ray cases at Fort Lauderdale.

Additional reports today told of mounting damages to shipping along the east coast. Several schooners were reported in distress and hundreds of small crafts had been piled up on the shore.

An unidentified man who swam to shore said he was member of the crew of a schooner wrecked near Fort Laudertlale. He left his captain on board with both arms and his back broken, and a companion who started the swim perished. The man was too exhausted to give further details.

Readers Of London Weekly Largely Atheistic While Daily Finds Most Britons Christians

LONDON, Sept. 20.— The Nation and Athenaeum, London Weekly, publishes to-day the preliminary of a much-heralded questionnaire submitted to its readers on religion. So far, it announces, 1,338 answers have been received.

To the question, "Do you believe in a personal God?" 537 answered yes and 736 no.

Only 474 admitted belief in the divinity of Christ; 819 expressed disbelief in Christ's divinity, and a total of 666 readers of the magazine declared their belief in some form of Christianity as against 595 who did not beleieve in any form of Christianity.

To the question, "Do you believe in personal immortality?" 578 answered yes and 646 no.

Another question was: "Do you regard the Bible inspired in a sense in which literature of your own country could not be said to be inspired?" Yes, 377; no, 918.

A questionnaire on religious belief which The Daily News submitted to its readers has brought so far 14,043 replies. Seventy-one per cent. of the replies show a belief in a personal God, 72 per cent. in personal immortality and 75 per cent. in some form of Christianity.

Seventy-one per cent. voluntarily attend religious services regularly and 63 per cent. regard the Bible as inspired. Only 38 per cent. accept the biblical story of creation as historical. The largest number of affirmative answers was received to the question, "Do you believe in any form of Christianity?" To this 10,546 replied yes, against 2,8779 who replied no. By a majority of over 2,000 the readers accept the Apostles' Creed.

A number declaring themselves active church members confess to a disbelief in a personal God. The Daily News, commenting on these results, says:

"There is no doubt about the general beliefs of a majority of these readers. They are 'practicing' Christians, believing strongly in a personal God, in personal immortality, in the divinity of Christ and in the inspiration of the Bible. Such evidence as there is of any decline from orthodoxy is in a decisive rejection of Fundamentalism in so far as it implies belief in the historical accuracy of the first chapter of Genesis (though there is a strong Fundamental minority) and a rather tepid admission of assent to formulate tenets in general and the Apostles' Creed in particular.

"These answers justify the belief that the creed of the ordinary middle-class Englishman is still what might be described as 'common sense' Christianity and has not yet been much affected by the spread of agnosticism."

FOUND DYING.

Woman Found, Terribly Burned, In Shed At Her Home.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.— (Canadian Press.) — Horribly burned about the face and shoulders, Mrs. Pearl Goldstein, aged 49, was found lying in a shed at the rear of her home here to-day. Lying beside her was a half filled bottle of gasoline and several charred matches.

BUT THESE DISAGREE.

Various reasons are given for the action of the Pastoral Session of the Wesleyan Conference at York in vetoing the proposals for the ministry of women.

One relates to theological matters rather than those of organization, another is that many Wesleyan ministers entertain much sympathy with Catholic order and tradition, and that they are aware the Anglican church will not tolerate the ministry of women.

HOROSCOPE

'The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)
FOR SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1926.

Under this rule women should benefit and they will find the rule most auspicious for straightening out domestic difficulties.

Love should rule under this planetary government, which makes for more kindly judgments and more helpful impulses than prevail in most configurations.

This is an auspicious sway for romance and engagements entered into under this direction of the stars should prove most happy.

There is an aspect indicating for assemblies of any sort the harmony and accord that assures success.

This should be a good time for bishops and other members of the clergy who will find that they can turn public opinion in the direction they desire.

Churches of many denominations should benefit at this time when there will be keen interest in religion.

World organizations of every sort should benefit and there is a sign indicating for a missionary rise to recognition, owing to some national service.

All the aspects appear to be favorable to the domination of men and women of large wisdom. New leaders of great talent are to rise.

This is a day when the mind may be inclined to questionings and doubts, owing to the adverse influence of Neptune.

Dissensions among religionists will be widespread in the coming months when there will be danger of subtle malefic influences.

Fraud is to be practiced in new forms, it is foretold, and for that reason it is especially important to be careful about investments.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of much good fortune in the coming year, although grave complications may retard success.

Children born on this day probably will have prosperous and successful careers. These subjects of Virgo are on the cusp and influenced by Libra. Girls may not be fortunate in marriage.

Important Is The Plaited Frock

"The importance of being in earnest"—at least about plaits—is emphasized in this one-piece frock of navy flat crêpe. It is a youthful frock which correctly and distinctively fits many occasions. The long sleeves and narrow string belt tied to create fulness above the hips, indicate its last-minuteness. There are groups of side plaits extending from the shoulders to hem in front, and one inverted plait in the center back. The collar is versatile and may be worn high or low. No. 1304 is for misses and small women, and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years (or 34, 36 and 38 inches bust only). Size 18 years (36 bust) requires 3¾ yards 39-inch material. Price 20 cents.

The secret of distinctive dress lies in good taste rather than a lavish expenditure of money. Every woman should want to make her own clothes, and the home dressmaker will find the designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book to be practical and simple, yet maintaining the spirit of the mode of the moment. A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncli

SHE DESCRIBES A SMART WOOL JERSEY FROCK

I often walk down the Avenue after I leave Madame's shop at the end of the day, not because that's my most direct way home, but because I like to look about me.

I enjoy the shop windows that have not had their heavy cream curtains pulled to hide what is being displayed. Many of the better shops do this at the end of the day, but I really wish they wouldn't, because it is such fun to go window shopping.

Then, too, I like to see all the people scurrying home. In the warm weather it's nearly always the people who have been working at something or other all day in the big buildings that line the Avenue. There are manikins like me, and typists and designers and saleswomen, and all manner of different people.

In Winter there are all these people, and more who have been away all summer. These usually can be spotted in the Fall because they are very brown, much more so than those who have stayed in town.

But I started out to sketch in my diary a frock I saw today and liked. I was waiting for Betty, who is in the book-selling department of a big publishing house on the Avenue, not far from Madame's.

What impressed me was how extremely nice-looking the girls and women were who came out of the building just after five-thirty. There were dozens of them drifting out by twos and threes, and all of them were modish and well groomed.

"It's wonderful," I thought, "how all these people manage to appear smart and up to date. I know some of them have no money to spare, and they can't have as much time to put on making and keeping their clothes in order as we manikins at Madame's do."

Then Betty came tripping out in the smartest frock I've seen in some time—just a simple blue and gray-striped jersey like the one I'm showing here—with loads of chic.

A Blue and Gray Striped Jersey Makes This Modish Two-Piece Frock.

"Where did you get it?" I asked.

And Betty told me she spent her extra time at the lunch hour haunting all the neighboring shops, and that she had found this dress and bought it on the spot.

"Lots of the girls find wonderful bargains, too," she added.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

NELL GWYNNE AND THE EARL OF ROCHESTER

Nell Gwynne of Drury Lane—heroine of stage and romance was born in a London alley and became the mistress of Charles II. of England, as dissolute a king as the times in which he lived.

The fair Nellie sold oranges in the vicinity of the famous home of drama, Drury Lane, when she was fifteen. What her life was previously, no one knows. Her father was a soldier who was down and out, and her mother was drowned in a pond while on a drunken spree. From selling fruit and flowers to the stage of the theatre she haunted was not a long step in the days when an actress served both the stage and men.

Nell Gwynne was an attractive personality with red hair and bold and vivacious manners. She made herself famous as a player and was established firmly in popular favor, not only because of her histronic talents, but for the peculiar reason that she was the king's mistress. Why this was so is attributed to the fact that one of Charles' other prominent loves, a French girl, Louise de Keroualle, was a living bribe that the French king, Louis XIV, had sent over to the English king in an effort to convert him to Catholicism. Louise was a Catholic and when her implied mission at the English court was learned, she became the most detested woman in the country. Nell Gwynne, being a Protestant and a powerful rival of the Frenchwoman, was in consequence adored.

Nell had two sons by Charles, both of whom were made nobles by the King and his affection of her remained as true as his weak nature permitted, and on his death-bed, one of his last instructions was: "Let not poor Nelly starve." His plea was heeded by his successor, James II., who paid her debts and provided her with an income.

Nell Gwynne was not disposed to let the King only have the privilege of a variety of loves. She also distributed her favors in a generous manner, and her lover at one time was Lawrence Hyde, Earl of Rochester. To him she sent this letter with the weird spelling—written by the hand of another, for the fascinating actress could not write herself.

"Pray Deare Mr. Hide, forgive me for not writeing to you before now for the reason is I have bin sick thre months and sins I recovered I have had nothing to entertaine you withall nor have nothing now worth writeing but I can holde no longer to let you knowe I have ben in any companie wethout drinking your health for I love you with all my soule. The Pel Mell is now to me a dismal plase sins I have uterly lost St. Car Soupe never to be recovered agane . . . .

"We are a goeng to sup with the king at Withall & my lady Harvie. The king remembers his sarvis to you. now lets talk of state affairs, for we never carried things so cunningly as now for we dont know whether we shall have peace or war, but I am for war and for no other reason but that you may come home. I have a thousand merry conseets, but I cant make her write um & therefore you must take the will for the deed. good bye. your most loveing obedunt faithfull humbel Sarvant

Dark blue is smarter than it ever was, and the designer of the modish little coat above realizes the appeal of dark blue for the growing girl.

The material in this case is wool crepe, and the coat is made with a jaunty cape of about elbow length. An added bit of charm is imparted in the soft green kasha lining of cape and coat.

NEWS BY RADIO.

Radio has again proved its usefulness as a quick distributor of news, reports of the fearful hurricane on the Florida Coast were recived from a number of different places. More or less detailed accounts came from Atlanta, Georgia, Jacksonville, Florida, and news agencies at Chicago, Toronto and New York Sunday afternoon and evening. Apparently the first reports were not exaggerated.

HER OWN WAY

A GIRL of TODAY

JUST A BOY?

Did any one man or woman who was really and truly in love stop to listen to anything except the beatings of that impulsive muscle called a heart? If I were in trouble of any kind I would instinctively fly to Jerry Hathaway, but if John Meredith was in trouble I would fly to him. Which was love? I could not say. Did I love either man? The question was becoming too complicated.

I wished devoutly that something would occur that would take all decision out of my hands, little thinking that very soon something would happen that would do that very thing.

I had forgotten all about Joan; I had forgotten that I had not replied to her information that Jerry was going to join our party.

"Did you understand, Judy dear, that I had invited your friend for tonight? He seemed to think that you were under the impression that part of your duty as secretary and business manager were to accompany me on all social occasions that I wished you to as well as on any business calls that I might have.

"My dear, your time is your own always before nine in the morning and after four in the afternoon. When I invite you to go out with me in the evening it is as my friend, and oh, that to me is the greatest thing about you—you are my friend, are you not, Judy?"

"I want you to know that just because you have consented to live in my house is no reason for me selfishly to require all your time. Judy, please be my friend first, and as my friend I want to tell you that you have made me very happy by taking poor John's thoughts away from himself and his affliction. Already I can see that he is a very different man."

"My dear Joan," I could not help exclaiming, "do you not realize that your brother is only a boy—why, he is a year younger than I—he is just your age."

"But I have always thought of him as older, Judy," interrupted Joan.

"I know, I know, but that makes no difference, he is still a boy, perhaps more of one than if he had been out in the world. I am sure it will be very easy to take his thoughts away from himself."

HETTY

The simple little name of Hetty, suggestive of pleasant homely domesticity has a lofty significance. It is translated to mean "a star." Perhaps, after all, the steady bright insistance of the stars may have some psychic reference to the generally accepted conception of the Hettys of the world.

Hetty is in reality the endearing diminutive given to the more dignified Hester, but so coldly austere is the latter name that Hetty has come to be bestowed in baptism with complete disregard for its proper predecessor.

Hetty came into existence by a rather complicated evolution through several languages. The fair daughter of the tribe of Benjamin whose royalty insured her peoples' safety, was called Atossa. Her name in the Persian language—quite unpronouncable—was combined with the Latin word for Star, "Stella" and from the union, came the modern estrella. In the Septuagint, the Romans make this word Hestera or Esthera.

In England, the "a" was dropped and Hester and Esther were bestowed as feminine names. The latter became Essie when the inevitable diminutive was forthcoming, and Hester soon gave place to Hetty, though the original form was usually preserved on the church registers. It was for America to gayly discard the proper appellative and substitute Hetty for all occasions.

Hetty's talismanic stone is the turquoise, which promises her steadfast friends, true love, and freedom from danger. If she sees the new moon reflected in the stone, she will have rare good luck. Saturday is her luck y day and 5 her lucky number.

STUDY EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

TOKIO, Sept. 18.—(Associated Press).—Although "Votes For Women" does not appear to threaten the Japanese political parties at present, the Government does not intend to be caught napping, and for the purpose of investigating the effect female suffrage has had on various countries, Chiaki Saka, Secretary of the local bureau of the Ministry of Home Affairs, will visit Europe and America soon.

Saka said that he first would attend the International Conference of Highways, Ports and Harbors in Rome, as Japan's representative, and then would investigate the suffrage situation in those countries that have given the vote to women.

Women's Allure

no longer imperiled even under the most trying hygienic problem

FRESH, charming, immaculate under ALL conditions. Sheer gowns worn without a second's fear, any time, any day!

If you seek this added charm, stop employing old-time "sanitary pads," insecure, uncertain.

8 in 10 better class women now employ "KOTEX"... a new way, 5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads!

Absorbs and deodorizes at the same time, thus ending ALL danger of offending.

You discard it as easily as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You ask for it without hesitancy, at any drug or department store, simply by saying "KOTEX."

In fairness to yourself, try this amazing way. Costs only a few cents. Comes twelve in a package.

KOTEX
No laundry—discard like tissue

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Impending danger is said to be averted by the power of the moonstone, today's talismanic stone. It is a sacred stone to India, and is seldom worn as an ornament: it is kept among the treasures of the house, displayed on a yellow cloth which renders it doubly sacred. As a gift for lovers, it is without rival. If a young girl places a moonstone against her forehead when the moon is full, she can read her future and determine whether or not her beloved is true.

For those who were born on an anniversary of this date, the sapphire holds forth the promise of a love that is faithful and unchanging. For this reason it is the best possible gift, aside from the diamond, between affianced lovers, though in modern times it is rarely used as such.

Yellow is today's fortunate color.

The gardenia is today's fortunate flower. It is a symbol of prosperity, and if worn by a woman is a sign of coquetry.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Todays' Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE DOOR MAT.

(By Howard R. Garis.)

The Wookie Wolf, jiggling himself along, sniffing and snuffing for something good to eat, turned in the path that led to the den of the Fuzzy Fox. Said the Wolf to himself:

"Perhaps the Fox has caught Uncle Wiggily by this time, and I can have a few nibbles off his ears. Oh, how hungry I am!"

But, when the Wolf started to walk up toward the den, in which lived the Fox, and saw the sly chap stretched out in front, for the day was hot, though it was in September, the Wolf began to laugh.

"What's the joke?" asked the Fox. "Tell me and I will laugh with you. I haven't seen a funny paper in a week. What's so jolly?"

"You are!" chuckled the Wolf, laughing still harder.

"I am?" snickered the Fox. "What is so funny about me?"

"Stretched out as you are," explained the Wolf, speaking the words between his laughs, "you look—ha! ha!—like a—ho! ho—"

"Oh, I look like a ho ho, do I?" asked the Fox. "What's a ho ho?"

"I mean—tee hee—you look like a door mat stretched out as you are, and covered with hair, fur and whiskers, as is the case," said the Wolf.

"Oh, I look like a door mat, do I?" asked the Fox, cold and calculating like.

"Ha! Ha! exactly like one!" snickered the Wolf.

Up jumped the Fox so suddenly, and with such a look in his eyes, that the Wolf became afraid and cried:

"Don't nibble me! I'm not Uncle Wiggily! I didn't mean anything by saying you looked like a door mat."

"It's all right," went on the Fox. "I'm not going to nibble you. But that's the best joke you ever made—if it is a joke. You have given me an idea," and the sly creature winked one eye slowly.

"What is the idea?" asked the Wolf.

"This!" softly barked the Fox. "Since I look like a door mat, I will pretend to be one. I will slink along to Uncle Wiggily's house and wait until he goes out. Then I will lay myself out flat on his front steps like a door mat. When he comes back, he will think I am one. He'll step on me or walk over me. And then, up I'll jump and grab him."

"I hope you will give me some nibbles," spoke the Wolf, softly.

"Eh? What's that?" asked the Fox, pretending to be deaf.

"I said I hoped you'd give me some nibbles!"

"Oh, yes, nibbles!" snickered the Fox. "Twas I who gave you the idea of pretending to be a doof mat," went on the Woozie chap.

"Oh, yes, so you did," admitted the Fox. "Well, if I catch the rabbit by pretending to be a door mat, you shall have a nibble or two."

So while the Wolf waited at his den, the Fox slunk off to go and fool the bunny rabbit by pretending to be a door mat. Soon the bad chap reached the hollow stump bungalow.

"Uncle Wiggily isn't at home," whispered the Fox. "I can tell because it is so still and quiet in his bungalow. None of the little bunnies are asking him to tell them a story or teasing to go adventuring. And, there is no mat on his steps. I'll flatten out like one, and grab him when he comes home."

The Police Dog chased the Fox

The Fox stretched out like a mat and waited and waited and waited. Pretty soon Uncle Wiggily came hopping back, whistling merrily and twinkling his pink nose. The Fox thought:

"Now I have him!" But no sooner did the wise rabbit gentleman look at the Fox stretched out in front of his door, than the bunny cried:

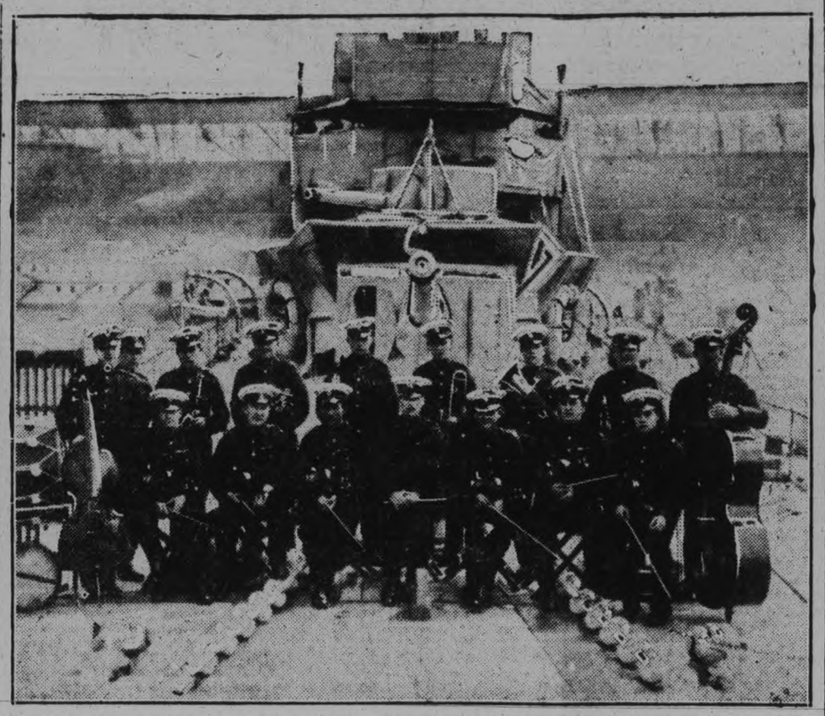
"Get away from there, you bad Fox. I know you're not a door mat! You can't fool me! Get him, Police Dog!" and the Police Dog, who was at the corner, chased the Fox back to his den.

"How did he know, just by looking at you once, and from far off, that you were not a door mat?" asked the Wolf of the Fox when the sly creature reached home.

"Just my luck!" howled the Fox. "Uncle Wiggily's old door mat wore out and was thrown away. He was coming back from the store with a new one, and when he saw me stretched out on the steps, he knew I couldn't be a mat, because he had the new one with him. Just my luck!"

But, it served the bad chaps right, I think, and I hope you think the same. Anyhow, if the smoke doesn't crawl down the chimney instead of curling up, and make the rag doll sneeze one of her shoebutton eyes loose, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the splashy stone.

Broadcast From War Ship Is Novel C.N.R.M. Feature



Tradition in the British Navy harks back to Nelson and a great many features of daily routine on board ship date from the time of the famous Admiral. However, the navy is at all times equally ready to establish precedent and the Commander-in-Chief of the North America and West Indies Squadron, Vice Admiral Sir Walter Cowan, Bart., K.C.B., D.S.O., M.V.O., has given permission for an event of absolutely novel character, nothing less than a radio broadcast from the deck of a warship. The broadcast will take place on the night of Thursday, September 16, on board His Majesty's Ship Calcutta, moored in the Port of Montreal, when a special programme will be played by the Royal Marine Band. The transmission will be effected through CNRM, which on this occasion will be tied in with CNRO, giving to the most populous section of North America the opportunity of listening-in to a most unusual broadcast.

The Vice Admiral accepted the invitation of the Radio Department of the Canadian National Railways most graciously and expressed his pleasure at the unusual opportunity of giving entertainment to such a vast army of radio enthusiasts as is reached from Montreal and Ottawa. The musicians will be stationed on the upper deck of H.M.S. Calcutta where three microphones will gather in their performances. Telephone circuits will carry the music to the studio of CNRM and from the latter studio lines of the Canadian National Telegraphs will connect with CNRO at Ottawa and the latter station will engage in a simultaneous broadcast on its regular wave length.

The band, under the direction of Bandmaster Herbert Wright, L.R.A.M., will commence at 9 o'clock with the march past of the Royal Marines, and after a programme of light and serious music, will conclude with a medley, "Sea Songs of Old England." An added feature of this programme will be the rendition of the bugle calls of the British Navy with an explanation of each call.

An address will be delivered by Lieut.-Commander W. V. Heaybeard, R.N.R., entitled, "Our First Line of Defence."

A year ago CNRM broadcast the band of H.M.S. Calcutta in a studio programme, the first broadcast of such a character, while the coming broadcast is said to be the first ever transmitted from the deck of a British warship.

SHORT STORY

Ezekiel Holliman was strong on psychology and explained all about it to his wife, who was not so strongly grounded in the science, but made up for it by believing everything that Ezekiel said. The Hollimans had a high and "exclusive" social position and a beautiful and accomplished daughter of marriageable age: but, alas, they did not possess the third ingredient necessary to a perfect and harmonious whole—to wit: money. In fact the finances of the family had become reduced to a harassing state of makeshifts and subterfuges from which the estimable couple could see no way of being rescued except by the marriage of their daughter, the fair Matilda, with a man possessed in abundance of what is sometimes spoken of by uncultivated people as "the needful." And such a man was ready at hand in the person of Jacob Browning, who was deeply enamored of Matilda dnd toward whom Matilda showed no particular aversion.

But there were several other sides to the problem. Jacob had no "family," little social standing, nothing but money. And it would never do in the world for society to fancy that the Hollimans had willingly taken him on as a son-in-law. But if he and Matilda could be manoeuvered into marriage "against the wishes" of Matilda's parents why, then, the high and mighty Hollimans, after deploring the mesalliance tearfully and vehemently to all their friends and acquaintances, and after a brief banishing of the erring couple from the light of their countenance, could take Jacob and his millions to the bosom of the family and demand applause for those tender, parental feelings which had been so strong as to make them submit, with the spirit of blessed martyrs, to the stain put upon their escutcheon by the union of a Holliman with a Browning.

This was the given problem and Mr. Holliman, aided and abetted by Mrs. Holliman, proposed to work it out by applied psychology to a satisfactory result. To be sure, if the Hollimans had not been so precious hard up, they would much rather have married their daughter to Rupert Evering, who was of a famous old family and had the right of entre to the vrey innermost social circles. This being suggested by Mrs. Holliman at one of the conferences with her husband he had replied: "Yes, my dear; that is so; but you know very well that we are in no financial condition to afford such a luxury."

"I am afraid she thinks a lot of Rupert," sighed Mrs. Holliman. "Very likely," responded Mr. Holliman, "but she thinks a lot of other things too; dresses and jewels: Palm Beach and the Riviera. And she knows she could not have them if she had Rupert. Now the way to work this little affair is this—and he proceeded to explain with the result that that afternoon Mrs. Holliman, having Matilda alone, thus discoursed to her upon marriage in the most artful manner imaginable.

"Oh dear, Tillie," said she, "I suppose, pretty soon, you will be getting married. It makes me feel quite like an old woman to think of it. Of all your admirers I don't know but I like Rupert Evering best. He is really one of our set, you know; and besides he acts as if he was pretty sure of you, if he only said the world. It's a pity he hasn't more money; and we have none to give you. But you won't mind giving up the things to which you have been accustomed—after you get used to it. Rupert comes of an excellent family—though they do say there is a streak of insanity in it that crops out now and then. So far, however, I have observed nothing abnormal about Rupert—one or two little idiosyncrasies, perhaps; but nothing serious, as you might say."

"Oh, bother, Mater," said Matilda, who was an up-to-date young lady, "Rupert doesn't act as if he was sure of me at all, and as to insanity in his family the only case I ever heard of was that of his great aunt by marriage. But go ahead—any more candidates for my fair hand?"

"None," replied Mrs. Holliman. "Of course you realize that in spite of his great wealth and irreproachable character, Jacob Browning would be quite out of the question. His family amount to nothing—though they do say he had an ancestor who was an officer in the Continental Army. He is a good-hearted, well-educated young man, but of course is not presumptuous enough to think of marrying into nor family. Your father would never consent.

Matilda listened with an amused smile. "Oh you dear, old goosie of a Mater," she laughed, "I can read you like a book—you and the Pater too." Then composing her face and casting down her eyes she went on: "So you think Rupert would make the most suitable husband for me, do you?"

"I didn't say so!" cried Mrs. Holliman in alarm.

"Really, why, I thought you did," replied the little hypocrite. "Well he would, but for one thing."

"What's that?" asked Mrs. Holliman agitatedly.

"Why the fact that Jake Browning and I have been in love with each other for ever so long and became engaged last Wednesday. And I'm not taking him for his money, either; but just because he is Jake."

"Applied psychology," said Mr. Holliman to Mrs. Holliman next morning, "is a wonderful thing."

"Yes," replied Mrs. Holliman—"and so is love."

TWICE-A-DAY

REMOVE FILM FROM TEETH IS PRESENT-DAY DENTAL ADVICE

The FILM ON TEETH to Which Most "Off-Color" Teeth and Many Serious Tooth and Gum Disorders are Ascribed

BECAUSE tooth and gum disorders are now scientifically traced largely to a film that forms on teeth, which ordinary brushing fails to remove successfully, a radically different way in tooth cleansing is being widely adopted.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel a film—a slippery, viscous coating.

Film absorbs discolorations from food, smoking, etc. That is why, according to leading dental opinion, teeth look dingy and "off color."

Film clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It invites and breeds the germs of decay. And that is why it is judged so grave a danger to the teeth by authorities.

Film is the basis of tartar. And tartar, with germs, is the chief cause of pyorrhea. That is why regular film removal is urged as probably first in correct gum protection.

Most dental authorities urgently advise thorough film removal at least twice each day. That is, every morning and every night.

For that purpose, obtain Pepsodent, the special film-removing dentifrice which leading dental authorities favor. Different from any other tooth paste.

Pepsodent curdles the film, then removes it; then polishes the teeth in gentle safety to enamel. It combats the acids of decay and scientifically firms the gums. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. And meets, thus, in all ways, the exactments of modern dental science.

On dental advice, people are adopting this new way of tooth cleansing. Obtain Pepsodent, the quality dentifrice, at drug stores. Two months' supply at a moderate price—or send coupon for 10-day tube. Use twice every day. See your dentist twice each year. Make both a habit.

CROSSWORD PUZZLE ANSWER

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Sept. 11. (United Press).—We now turn to the stable for style inspirations and accept the horse halter as a collar and the horse blanket as a sports wrap. The horse collar is one of the latest ideas in neckwear this season and is found on coats, sports frocks and sweaters. This collar hangs about the neck in deep halter effect and may be in contrasting color to the frock. In some instances the portion between the base of the collar and the neck line is filled in with the same material as the horse collar.

As for the plaid horse blanket materials, they are being turned into steamer coats and sports coats and some of these models use self-fringe as a border trimming. Soft woolen squares of vivid plaids on neutral backgrounds can be purchased in the shops for coat purposes.

Tiers will flow generously as Fall approaches for the tiered skirt is again included in fashionable frocks. Sometimes the tiered idea takes the form of an apron which extends about the front of the skirt and has a string belt which ties at the rear. Two, three and as many as six small tiers form the front trimming of many frocks. They begin at the low waist line and end at the hem. Party frocks use the all-around tier effect.

Black will be quite as popular this Fall as it was during the period just after the World War. Bright colors are giving way to duller shades and black is of utmost importance. Black crepe-satin fashions many frocks with the reversible side of the material acting as trimming. Black woolen materials and velvets will be used for street coats. A combination that is well thought of in Paris at present is the black crepe dress banded with a wide border of black velvet at the hem line and a straight-lined coat of black velvet.

We see much of velvet or velveteen coats in the shops at present and doubtless they will be popular as the early Fall wraps.

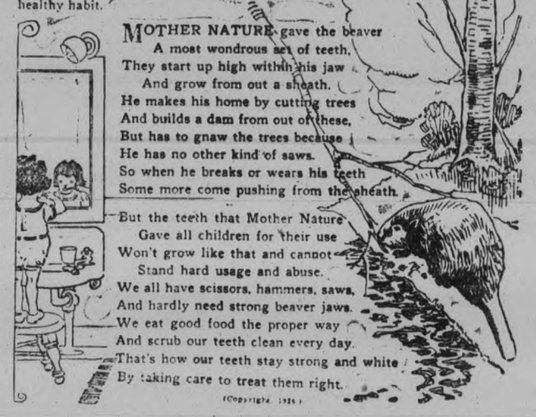
Teeth

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

IT would be very convenient if human teeth kept replacing themselves as do the teeth of the beaver, but since our teeth do decay and come out it behooves us to train the children to take proper care of what they have. Furthermore, modern science has determined that much serious illness and many minor ailments are due to bad teeth. Knowing this, so train your child that by proper care of his teeth from babyhood he may avoid any possible trouble. He'll have a lovely time with the water and tooth paste at first, but it soon becomes an old story and a very healthy habit.



MOTHER NATURE gave the beaver
A most wondrous set of teeth,
They start up high within his jaw
And grow from out a sheath.
He makes his home by cutting trees
And builds a dam from out of these,
But has to gnaw the trees because
He has no other kind of saws.
So when he breaks or wears his teeth
Some more come pushing from the sheath.

But the teeth that Mother Nature
Gave all children for their use
Won't grow like that and cannot Stand hard usage and abuse.
We all have scissors, hammers, saws,
And hardly need strong beaver jaws.
We eat good food the proper way
And scrub our teeth clean every day.
That's how our teeth stay strong and white
By taking care to treat them right.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

THAT thrift which calls for regular depositing in a savings account each month a portion of your income, means SUCCESS, for success is only obtained step by step.

THAT where one man gets rich quick a million don't. Get rich the steady but sure way; start a savings account today.

THAT you should start building your fortune and have the courage to save.

THAT successful people are the ones who have a vision which looks to the future, and who build for the future.

THAT you can start your account with a small amount and it will surprise you to see how it will grow.

THAT if you would go in and get acquainted with your bankers, they will be only too glad to explain to you the advantages of a savings account.

THAT every man and woman earning money should have a savings account.

THAT if they did, they would soon realize the value of thrift.

Money in a savings account works for you instead of you working for it.

FRENCH BUILD HUGE SEAPLANE

Biggest Planned for Passenger Service Has Five Motors.

GOOD RECORDS

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Launching of a new giant seaplane of the type which French engineers believe finally will be adopted for trans-Atlantic passenger service, establishment of a new world's altitude record and remarkable long-distance flight by Pelletier Doisy and H. Hirschauer are recent outstanding achievements in French aviation.

The seaplane was designed by Richard and built by Penhoet after five years' effort. Its most interesting features are a boat body 25 feet deep divided into three decks, and wings six feet trick containing corridors. Wing-span is 128 feet, length over all 85 feet, and weight approximately 20 tons, of which six tons represent useful load.

Fivemotors, develop 2,100 horsepower. One is mounted out ahead in the end of the body and the other four are arranged along and in the front of the hollow wings. All can be adjusted and repaired while in flight and the front centre motor, in the end of the cabin, even can be taken down completely and set up again. Cruising speed is from 85 to 90 miles an hour.

Heart of Ship

The top deck of the machine is reserved for two pilots and controls, much the same as on an ocean liner except that the deck is enclosed completely, of course. Below, on a level with the corridors that run out through the wings, are quarters for the mechanics, wireless telephone and telegraph outfits, automatic fire extinguisher equipment which functions as soon as any part of the machine becomes too hot, and fuel tanks. These rooms are the 'heart of the ship.'

The passenger deck below is about 20 feet long and contains accommodations for 20 pasengers. It is lighted by large port-holes.

The plane is regarded as one of the safest yet built. It can fly carrying a full load with only three of its five motors operating, and care has been taken to mount gasoline and oil tanks as far as possible from the pilots' cabin and passenger salon. In addition, there is the automatic fire extinguisher system which begins to operate as soon as the temperature gets too high around any of the equipment.

Initial flights with the machine were made by Pilot Andre Duhamel with a load of five tons of sand bags, ascending from rough water and in the face of a strong wind off the mouth of the Loire river. The trials are said to have been completely successful.

Perfect Preparation.

The feat of Callizo in breaking his own altitude record of 12,066 meters, or approximately 38,700 feet, is a tribute to nearly perfect preparation. What will be accepted as the official record is not yet determined as one barometer registered 12,600 meters and the other 12,800, but the probability is that 12,600 meters will stand as the rule always has been to accept the lowest registration. The instruments are now being tested.

Callizo used a Bleriot-Spad plane with a 400 horse power Lorraine-Dietrich motor. Wings specially were designed for climbing and the carburetor also wah of special design. He himself was clothed in fur garments electrically heated and his face was masked completely except for the windows of his goggles. Oxygen was provided in tanks for breathing after he passed 8,000 meters, or approximately 25,000 feet.

He took off from Bleriot de Buc airport, at Seine et Oise, at 4.50 p.m. Aug. 23, and disappeared rapidly into the rather low-hanging clouds. In less than two hours he was seven and one-half miles up, but from that point it went slower. He reached his record height two hours and 24 minutes after leaving the ground, but it took him only about 14 minutes to get down. He landed at Le Bourget airport, being nearer there when he came out of the clouds. He was assisted from his seat, stimulated because he was terribly cold, and rushed home in an automobile.

Earlier Records.

The records with their holders since the beginning of flying are as follows, each meter being 3,281 feet:

155 meters—Latham, Aug. 29, 1909.
1,000 meters—Latham, Feb. 7, 1910.
2,582 meters—Morane, Sept. 8, 1910.
3,100 meters—Legagneux, Dec. 9, 1910.
4,900 meters—Garros, Sept. 6, 1912.
5,450 meters—Legagneux, Sept. 17, 1912.
6,120 meters—Legagneux, Dec. 28, 1913.
7,700 meters—Bourgeois, Sept. 22, 1917.
8,155 meters—Sadi Lecointe, May 9, 1919.
9,125 meters—Casale, May 28, 1919.
10,093 meters—Schroeder, Feb. 27, 1920.
11,145 meters—Sadi Lecointe, Aug. 30, 1923.
12,066 meters—Callizo, Oct. 10, 1924.

Pelletier Doisy's fight, while not a record-breaker, was a worthy performance. He flew from Paris to Rome, across the Mediterranean to Tunis, from there to Casablanca, which is in Morocco south of Gibraltar, and then north to Paris by way of Madrid. He flew 3,750 miles at an average rate of 120 miles an hour, stopping only for fuel.

The Hirschauer flight was of approximately 7,500 miles, completely around the Mediterranean basin. It was made in 90 hours of actual flying time but required in reality three months. The plane averaged between 9 and 10 miles to a gallon of gasoline.

Hirschauer, with a mechanic, Couret, was started out May 20, by the French Government and instructed to make a study of the shores of the Mediterranean. He took a Morane-Saulnier machine equipped with a Salmson 120-horsepower motor, quite a small plane for such an expedition, but returned without mishap, demonstrating the possibilities of the small-power plane.

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—(Associated Press).—Two American women have by the recent appointment of their husbands to new diplomatic posts become intimately connected with the social side of German diplomatic life.

WARRANTS OUT FOR EVANGELIST AND 4 OTHERS

Mrs. Kennedy and Ormiston Among Those To Be Arrested.

THREE CHARGES.

Radio Operator's Attorney Says He Will Turn State's Evidence.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 20.—Warrants were issued by District-Attorney Asa Keyes Thursday, for the arrest of Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, Angelus Temple evangelist; Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, her mother; Kenneth G. Ormiston, former radio operator at the temple; John Doe Martin and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Sielaff.

The complaint charges conspiracy to defeat the ends of justice through perjury, subornation of perjury, and the preparation of false documents.

S. S. Hahn, attorney for Ormiston, said he would produce Ormiston at once. His client is thought to have been in Alhambra, a Los Angeles suburb.

Hahn strongly intimated last night that Ormiston would turn state's evidence. "The courts will have to give Ormiston immunity in the interest of public justice," he said.

For the present W. I. Gilbert, lawyer for Rudolph Valentino, will have charge of the defence of Mrs. McPherson.

Physicians indicated last night that Mrs. McPherson was in a serious physical condition.

Statement by Keyes

District Attorney Keyes issued a scorching statement that from the outset "there has been the tainted atmosphere of a gigantic hoax" surrounding the McPherson case. He referred to "the brazen activities of Mrs. McPherson and her friends to build up false alibis for her," and said he would "exert the full power of my office to bring this woman before the bar of justice that she may have a fair and public hearing." He called the case a "nation-wide scandal."

Because of the prominence of Mrs. McPherson, it was said last night she would not be arrested but would be notified of the warrant for her. She will be expected to appear in court voluntarily and arrange for bail.

Mrs. Sielaff brought about the renewed activity in the case when she charged that she had been hired to perpetrate a hoax that would clear Mrs. McPherson of suspicion of having been with Ormiston at his Carmel cottage when she was supposed to have been kidnapped.

Mrs. Sielaff said she got a friend, Rachel Wells, to impersonate the mysterious "Miss X", Ormiston's supposed companion.

The charge against Ormiston is thought to have resulted from publication of an affidavit signed with his name, which denied that Mrs. McPherson was with him at Carmel and invited "Miss X" to identify herself.

Evangelist Has Restless Night

Mrs. McPherson spent a restless night, and when about 1,000 Bible students from Angelus Temple gathered about her home this morning, she asked that they flood District Attorney Keyes and the newspapers with telegrams and telephone calls urging that the investigation be dropped. So many phone calls were received at Mr. Keyes' home that the telephone had to be disconnected.

Later Mr. Keyes invited Mrs. McPherson and her mother to call at his office. Mrs. McPherson replied that she was "too ill" and that Mrs. Kennedy was "too tired."

Joe Watts, process server for R. A. McKinley, blind Long Beach lawyer, who was killed recently in an automobile crash, was questioned yesterday. Three weeks before the reappearance of Mrs. McPherson in Mexico, Mrs. Kennedy announced she had evidence that her daughter had been kidnapped, and McKinley reported that two strangers had asked him to negotiate with Mrs. Kennedy for the $25,000 reward offered for her daughter's return.

CUBAN PLANTERS WILL SUE U.S.A. FOR WAR PROFIT

Claim $41,000,000 Proceeds of Sale of Sugar Crop.

IN 1918 AND 1919.

Say Money Was Put Into the United States' Treasury.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20. (Canadian Press)—Cable advices from Havana to leading sugar interests here state that an influential group of Cuban planters and sugar mill owners is petitioning the Government of the republic to take action against the United States Treasury for the recovery of $41,000,000 which they allege was profit made by the sale of sugar to the Allied nations during the latter years of the war.

Questioned on the matter, Dr. Saint de la Pena, Cuban Consul in Montreal, said the information was correct.

He did not know what would be the attitude of his government, but he stated reliable information had reached him to the effect that planters and owners would themselves press the claim of the government refused to act.

In explanation of the proceedings initiated by the sugar magnates, Dr. Sainz said:

"Cuba handed over its entire sugar crop during 1918 and 1919 to the United States Government. This was done to prevent unscrupulous speculation by private concerns.

"The United States Government," continued Mr. Sainz, "sold this sugar to the Allies through the Equalization Board. That Board was recently dissolved and after all expenses, including high salaries to the Commissioners, were paid there was handed over to the Treasury the sum of $41,000,000.

"In view of this fact the planters and mill owners through their association have asked the Cuban Government to make a claim on the United States Government for the refund of this $41,000,000."

FIREMEN LOST SHUT-OUT GAME TO FAMOUS PLAYERS AT TORONTO

SCORE 7 TO 0

Fire-Fighters Make Bad Start in First—Bell Has 16 Strike-Outs.

By playing errorless softball on Saturday the Famous Players, winners of the Toronto Softball League defeated the Firemen, 7 to 0, at the Viaduct Park, Toronto.

The winners were the best-rounded out team and had a pitcher which had the Firemen completely baffled. The Firemen got off to a poor start in the first innings, when three bad errors were made, giving the Famous Players a four run lead. After the first, the team tightened down, and although they were unable to hit the old ball they held the winners to three runs. Crary and Nichols making fine plays in the field.

Bell, who pitched for the Famous Players, well deserved the win, as he struck out 16 men and allowed five in the nine innings to reach first base and one reached third. Dunkerley pitched good ball, but Gimblett, being too anxious, made three errors and a bad overthrow, which meant runs every time.

In the first, the first two Firemen up struck out, and Delahaye was out on a foul tip. Deniord, for the Famous Players, made first on Gimblett's errors, took second on a wild throw of Gimblett. Harper went out on a foul tip; Shaw made first when Gimblett dropped the ball; Rose lifted one into right field but Nichols tried to steal it from McNeeley and dropped it, so Rose made the circuit with two runs in ahead of him; Marchmont singled and stole second; Jackson lifted one to Gimblett; Cartwright singled, scoring Marchmont, but was caught on stealing second. Four runs, two hits, three errors.

In the second Nichols, Gimblett and McNeeley struck out, with Crary getting the first hit. Taylor rolled one to Dunkerley, Bell made first when Gimblett dropped the ball, Deniord sacrificed; Harper fouled, scoring Bell; Shaw struck out; Dobson got off to a good start in the third by singling; Dunkerley sacrificed, advancing the runner, but Weese and Westbrooke struck out. For the Famous Players, Rose, first man up, hit a homer; Marchmont popped one to short; Jackson made first when the ball was dropped; Cartwright singled, but was caught stealing second; Taylor lifted one to Crary.

In the fourth Delahaye rolled one to second, Nichols laid down a nice bunt; Crary lifted one to short, and Gimblett struck out. Dunkerley retired the side on four pitched balls, the batter rolling it to third base each time.

McNeeley struck out in the fifth; Dobson was out on a foul tip; Dunkerley singled, and Weese struck out. Shaw struck out for the winners; Rose got his second home run, and the next two retired on flies to the infield.

For the Firemen the three batters struck out in a row, and on the other side Cartwright walked, Taylor struck out, and Bell went down on an infield play. Deniord singled, and Harper dropped one into Weese's hands.

Crary went out on a tip; Gimblett struck out, and Hall batting for McNeeley, sent out a hot one to the pitcher. Shaw and Rose were caught out on flies, Crary making a fine scoop of Shaw's left field drive; Marchmont singled, but was caught making second.

In the eighth, Dobson lifted one to short; Dunkerley walked and stole second; Weese struck out with Dunk stealing third; but Westbrooke struck out. Cartwright walked; Taylor and Bell singled, but Cartwright was caught stealing home on a perfect throw from centre field; Deniord walked, and Harper lifted one to Crary.

Delahaye and Crary went out on foul tips, and Nichols hit one to the right fielder.

YANKS INCREASE LEADS IN LEAGUE DEFEAT INDIANS

Victory Result of Gehrig's Batting, Three Doubles and Homer.

RUTH SLAMS 43RD.

Tigers Overcome Lead in the Ninth For Victory Over Senators.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—After losing four straight games to Cleveland, New York rallied yesterday and defeated the Indians 8 to 3 in their home park, the Yankees increasing their lead in the American League race to three and a-half games. The victory was the result of the batting of First Baseman Gehrig, who made three doubles and a home run, driving in four runs and scoring one. Ruth made two hits, one a home run inside the park, his 43rd of the season.

Pinch hitters decided yesterday's Washington-Detroit game in favor of Detroit, 8 to 7. The Tigers overcoming a one run lead in the ninth when Naun and Cobb hit safely in pinch roles for Collins and Fotherfill, respectively.

The St. Louis Browns came from behind to win from the Philadelphia Athletics yesterday 5 to 4, in ten innings. Robertson brought in the winning run when he doubled, advancing to third base on Gerber's sacrifice and went home after Williams flied out.

Chicago made a clean sweep of the five game home series with Boston by taking the final game, 6 to 3, and running their winning streak to six straight. Thoms held the visitors to two hits until the ninth inning when he eased up and permitted Boston to score three times.

STATE'S TEAM IS ROUTED BY FRENCH STARS

Richards Defeated By Borotra in Semi-Finals For Championship.

MEN'S SINGLES.

United States Loses Title For First Time Since 1903.

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—The rout of the tennis forces of the United States by France's sharp-shooting stars was completed yesterday when Vincent Richards, youngest and last of the defenders, went down to a heart-breaking five set defeat at the hands of Jean Borotra in the semi-finals of the national men's singles championship.

Although seemingly on the verge of exhaustion throughout the last two sets the "Bounding Basque" had the grit to pull out an uphill victory while the blonde New York youth tossed away one golden opportunity after another with as erratic an exhibition as he has ever displayed. The scores were 3—6, 6—4, 4—6, 8—6, 6—2.

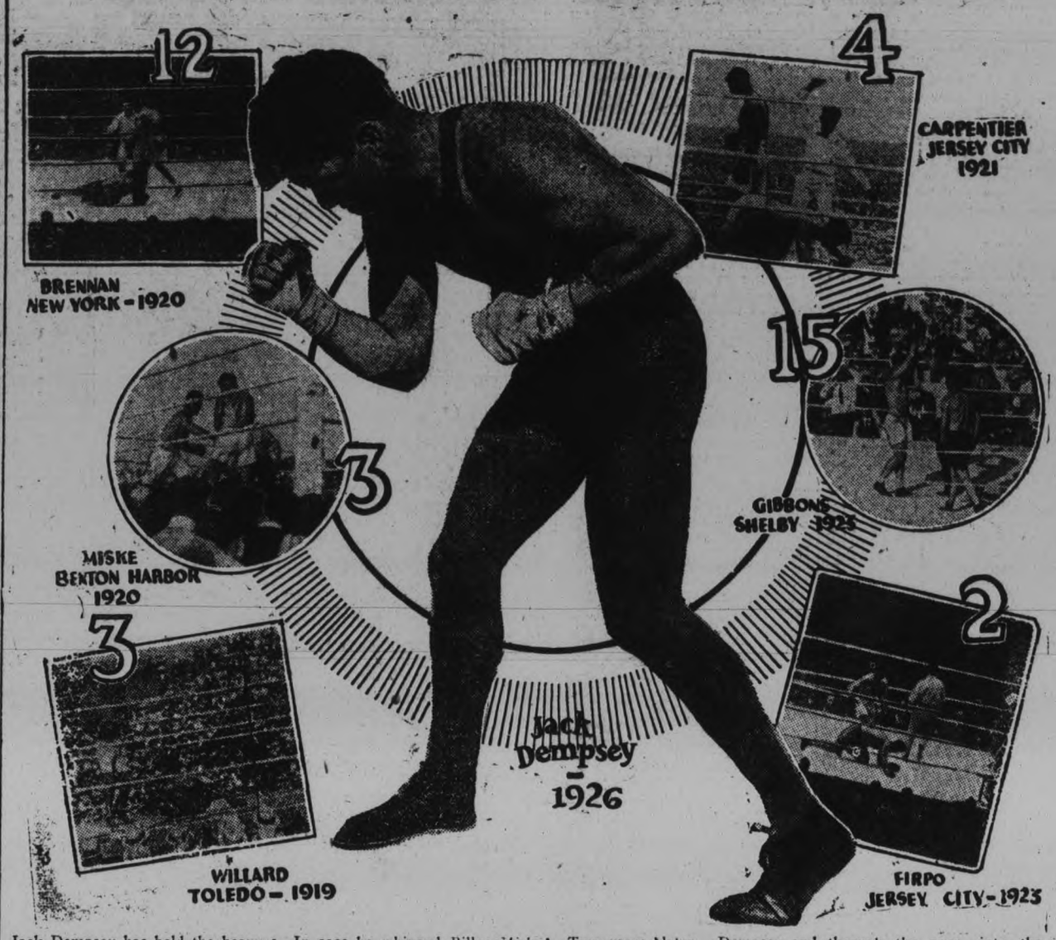
Borotra's courageous triumph assured an all-French final for the lawn tennis championship of the United States, a spectacle unprecedented in nearly fifty years of the tournament's history and startling in its setback to the prestige of a nation that until this week had dominated nearly all it surveyed on the courts over a seven year stretch.

Borotra will meet Rene Lacoste today at 3 p.m. to decide which will take the United States title overseas for the second time in its history and for the first time since 1903.

Twenty-four years ago in 1902, Reginald F. Doherty, Britsh ace, won the all-comers, only to be defeated by William A. Larned in the challenge round then in vogue to decide championships. The following season, however, Hugh L. Doherty, second of the two famous English brothers, lifted the title.

Lacoste won the United States indoor championship in New York last February by defeating Borotra in the finals, also had an uphill battle on his hands yesterday before he joined his rival compatriot in the title bracket. The cool and calculating stylist took the measure of his countryman, Henri Cochet, whose spectacular attack accomplished the downfall of the six time United States champion, "Big Bill" Tilden, Thursday. Cochet seemed headed for another startling triumph yesterday when he romped through the first two sets in impressive fashion but he tired, lost control and succumbed finally to the remorseless steadiness of Lacoste. The scores were 2—6, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4, 6 to 3.

FINALS MOMENTS IN JACK'S SIX TITLE FIGHTS



Jack Dempsey has held the heavyweight championship of the world longer than any other titleholder in history. Jack has ruled the roost more than seven years.

It was back in 1919 that the famous "Giant Killer" reached the heights by crushing the huge Willard at Toledo. Since that memorable victory Dempsey has defended his honors five times. All but once he won via the kayo route.

In 1920 he whipped Billy Miske and Bill Brennan. Miske went out in the third, while Brennan fell in the twelfth after putting up a gallant fight. A year later came his 'battle of the century' with Georges Carpentier, the gorgeous one from France. Carp went to sleep in the fourth round after staggering Dempsey with a terrific wallop in the second.

Two years later Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons clashed at Shelby. Gibbons was still on his feet at the end of 15 rounds, but Dempsey took the verdict on points.

A few months later Jack met Luis Firpo, the so-called "Wild Bull of the Pampas." Firpo went to the floor a number of times, finally staying down for good in the second session, after having floored Dempsey once and knocking him through the ropes into the press box another time.

Six championship battles in seven years. Now comes Gene Tunney ex-marine and outstanding contender for Dempsey's laurels. What will Jack do? Will Tunney follow the trail previous Dempsey rivals have taken or will it be Jack's turn this time? You'll know the an- Final moment z

Newark Splits Twin Bill With the Skeeters For Third Place.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—The International League season closed yesterday with the Toronto Maple Leafs—the new champions—taking a double header from Rochester, 8 to 4, and 3 to 0.

The Baltimore Orioles, dethroned by the Canadian after holding the championship for six consecutive seasons, clinched second place by winning a double bill from Reading, 8 to 3, and 8 to 0, while Newark, which finished third, was breaking even with Jersey City. Newark won the first game 3 to 1, but was shut out in the second, 2 to 0.

Buffalo and Syracuse also divided a double header, Buffalo taking the first, 4 to 3, and Syracuse the second 5 to 1.

Phillies Defeat Robins in Final Meeting of This Season.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—The New York Giants reduced the lead of the St. Louis Cardinals in the National League to a full game yesterday by winning the opener of a series by 6 to 5, before more than 40,000 fans.

It was the third straight game that the Giants have taken from the Western contenders by a single run margin. McQuillan hurled a steady contest for New York with the exception of the fifth inning, when St. Louis bunched five of its twelve hits for three runs. Haines started for the visitors but was ineffective and his successor, Sherdel, yielded what finally proved to be the deciding run.

After losing three straight to the Robins, Pittsburg turned about yesterday and defeated Brooklyn, 7 to 4, in the final meeting between both clubs this year. Ray Kremer hurled effectively and in winning hung up his 19th victory of the season.

DOBERAN-ON-THE- BALTIC, Germany, Sept. 18.—(Associated Press).—Society women are turning to horse racing as a favorite sport. At the first women's horse race just held in this fashionable Baltic watering place, ladies of the former nobility and of the moneyed aristocracy assumed the roles of jockeys and drove their thoroughbreds personally. The prizes were distributed by the former Crown Princess Cecile. The former Grand Duke of Mecklenburg acted as patron.

Goes To Foreigner For Second Time in Forty-Five Years.

BROKE BASQUE'S SPIRIT

Both Players Make Courageous Fight in Play For Title.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 20. —(Canadian Press). — Four minutes under the hour was sufficinent for Bene Lacoste of France to capture the final match of the United States Tennis Championship on the courts of the west side Tennis Club here on Saturday when he downedhis compatriot Jean Borotra 6-4; 6-0; 6-4; and assumed the crown which for six years had been worn by William Tilden. This is the second time in the firty-five years history of the National championship that the title has gone to a foreigner, the previous trans-atlantic victor being Hugh L. Doherty of England, who secured the crown as far back as 1903.

Tilden had worn the laurels continuously since 1920.

Ten thousand tennis enthusiasts thronged the Forest Hills Stadium on Saturday and witnessed a debacle which swept Borotra, obviously fatigued by his strenuous journey up to the final game, to such quick annihilation that it came almost as a tragedy to Americans themselves. The "bounding basque" had enshrined himself in the hearts of Americans so deeply that they feel towards him almost as they do towards one of their own, while Lacoste's victory was well-merited and popular, much sympathy was felt for theloser and much admiration expressed for his courage and determination against such odds.

Lacoste was relentless in his game and played with a resoluteness of purpose that sapped his opponents confidence. Every shot that left his racquet was crafty, enetrating deeper and deeper into Borothras defenses until the basque stood helplessly open to a finishing shot. Lacoste's game was flawless and his generalship impeccable while Borotra fought with the courage of desperation, but always gave ground.

In the first set Borotra played gallantly and at one time required only one point to square the score 5-all, but Lacoste attacked and with furious placement drives of service he broke the basque's spirit The second set was pitiful. Borotra entered it a beatn man, losing all co-ordination of mind and muscle, six games went in succession to Lacoste.

In the third, it was noted that Borotra had obviously lost heart and was resigned to his fate. But for a brief period he made a comeback when Lacoste ran into a series of errors. Twice in this game Lacoste sent the ball out of court as he lifted it over Borotra's head and those two errors and a double fault enabled the basque to boot through. He speeded up his footwork and there developed a bitter struggle, but gradually Lacoste regained the upper hand and Borotra collapsed, the game, the match and the title going to Lacoste.

BOBBY JONES LOSES TO VON ELM IN NATIONAL GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

By Two and One in One Hole Short of Thirty-Six.

NOT USUAL FORM

Former Champion Not Up to Usual Form in Final Tilt.

SHORT HILLS, N. J., Sept. 20. —(Canadian Press). — All predictions were upset here on Saturday when George Von Elm, defeating the hitherto invincible Bobby Jones of Atlanta, Georgia, in a game that went only one hole short of the thirty- six, won the National Amateur Golf Championshp of the United States by two and one. In so doing Von Elm robbed the Atlantan of a treple honor for, having won tittle on two successive occasions Jones, had he emerged victor on Saturday, would have been the first player to earn the triple crown.

The outcome of the game was all the more surprising inasmuch as on two previous occasions Jones had encountered Von Elm and vanquished him.

Saturday the dethroned champion was not up to his usually faultless game, but this not detract from Von Elm's victory for the latter proved himself to be a great golfer and a great fighter, only in driving did Jones outmatch his opponent; in all other departments Von Elm had him beaten, when it came to playing with the irons Von Elm was Bobby's master and it was these clubs that decided Saturday's match. Time after time when Von Elm was playing the odd from the tee he put his ball so close to the pin that Jones was unequal to the task of getting inside his ball, and then too on the green he was Jones' equal—if not his superior.

Two instances of sportmanship seldom seen anywhere occurred. The first was on the 17th hole in the morning when Bobby, noting that his rival was nettled by the movements of the gallery conceded him a putt that the Westerner might have missed. At the first opportunity Von Elm repaid him, foron the 18th green when Bobby was three anda half feet away from the hole, putting for a half, and disturbed, Von Elm rushed out and knocked his ball away, giving Jones the half.

In spite of Van Elm's admitted and evident superiority over Jones, the match was in the lap of the Gods until the 28th hole. That was where Von Elm crossed the golfing rubicon for until they reached that point he and Bobby were deadlocked in a struggle that could have turned either way. As they came off the 27th tee, Von Elm was one up. He had had any number of bad breaks against him but he refused to lose heart. Jones had out-driven him, but the Atlantan failed to make the green on his second shot and pulled it into a trap. Von Elm was on the green and Jones wasted a couple of shots in the bunker. The westerner holed out and became two up. That was the crucial hole. The enext was halved, and two holes later Von Elm became three up with five to go. Thereafter, all the Westerner had to do was to play his man even or nearly even.

The 35th green was a sea of seething humanity as the two finalists came up to play what was the final hole of the match, fully 12,000 people who had rushed hether and thither, across fairways and through traps in order to get a glimpse at the gladiators were gathered around to see the finish.

The match was drawn and both were on with their third shots. Bobby had only one chance left to carry the match. If he could hole his ten-foot putt he would win the hole and the match would go to the home green for Von Elm's attempt for a birdie four had slipped eighteen inches past the hole.

Jones took his putt and missed the side of the cup. A groan of disappointment from the crowd was rapidly followed by a rousing cheer for the new champion. The redoubtable Bobby Jones had at last found his master.

MIDGETS LOSE O.B.A.A. GAME

Kingston Beats Royals 6-3 in First of the Series.

ERRORS COUNT.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 20.—The Kingston Midgets were just a little too good for the team from the Lift Lock City here on Saturday afternoon when the visitors lost by the score of 6 to 3, after a fairly good game. Holmes, for the Petes, pitched well, but his support wobbled at times, often enough to allow the Kingston youngsters to cross the platter with runs. The sixth was the worst for the Petes, two errors, two stinging singles, and a well-placed and timed two base hit gave the Kingstonians their runs to make the score 5 to 2 after the Petes had led with a 2 to 1 score from the second inning. An error, a sacrifice and a hit gave Kingston another in the eighth to make it 6 to 3.

The Petes netted two in their second; an error, a stolen base, an out, and a hit coupled up with good base running, doing the trick. Good pitching and fast fielding by the Kingstonians held the Petes scoreless till the ninth, when a walk, two stolen bases and a beautiful hit gave them one more. Fast fielding and one strike out stopped a rally by the Petes which looked dangerous.

FRENCH LEAVE SAAR AND RHINE IF AGREEMENT OF MINISTERS IS ACCEPTED BY TWO NATIONS

France Wants Ready Money From Germany For Evacuation.

SOME OPPOSITION.

French People Unwilling To Give Up Occupied Territory.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Foreign Minister Briand has returned from Geneva and announces that German Foreign Minister Stresemann and he had come to an understanding on all the points which could lead to a conflict between the two nations. It remains, he said, for each to get the consent of his Government to the tentative bargain they have struck.

It is going to be difficult to carry out their plans in both countries. Dr. Stresemann wants to go before the Reichstag with something so big that no opposition can stand before him. He wants to be able to announce the end of the Rhineland and Saar occupations. The end of the Saar Valley occupation will mean its return to Germany, according to the German view, as a plebiscite will not frighten the Germans there once the troops are gone.

France Needs Money.

If Dr. Stresemann can get these results he can snap his fingers under the noses of the Nationalists and ask them what they could do to compare. For this he is willing to pay a high prrice, but the price asked of him is much easier for him to pay than it will be for M. Briand to end the Saar and Rhine occupations.

France, however, wants ready money, and the biggest untouched credit available is the $4,000,000,000 German railroad and industrial debenture bonds, of which, under the Dawes Plan 52 per cent. is due to France.

These exist only on a piece of paper in the hands of Reparations Agent General Gilbert, and to make them active requires the willingness of the German Government to meet the interest on the bonds if thrown on the international market.

S. Parker Gilbert, Agent-General for Reparation, is empowered to use his own judgment in the matter, but the issuance of them means creating a big German debt abroad, and unless Germany is prepared to buy itself out from the reparations payments at a single stroke, the money cannot be realized. Germany will do this only at a price, and it has been known for a long time that Germany's price is evacuation of the Rhineland.

Public Not Yet Ready.

In this essential of the Stresemann-Briand discussion there is nothing new. To put this through and get ready cash amounting to $2,000,000,000—more than the cash value in dollars of all the French paper francs in existence—and be able to use it to pay off France's war debts to Great Britain and America, would also be a striking victory for the present French Government and one worth sacrifice.

Public opinion in France is not ready yet for such a radical change in the Treaty of Versailles as the withdrawal of all control, even if the other signatories of the treaty were to agree. But France has made so many conciliatory steps toward Germany since the adoption of the Dawes Plan that the realization of this plan by which the Rhineland occupation would end in seven or eight instead of fifteen years is well within the bounds of possibility.

M. Briand wants the public to accept the idea rapidly and that is why he dramatized the bargain by the luncheon in the little Jura inn. The two statesmen discussed the general lines of the commercial treaties which are necessary between France and Germany to make the frontier economically negligible.

Reuniting the Rhine, Ruhr, Saar and Lorraine into an iron and steel region in which no frontiers exist in practice, is the first essential of the plan. Reciprocal trade agreements are next. These are agreed on provided the bargain—the ending of occupation against ready reparations cash—can be made firm.

Opposition Develops.

Foreign Minister Briand has encountered opposition within the French Government over his tentative agreement with Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany. Conservatives in the Poincare Coalition Cabinet ,notably Marin and Barthou, are opposed to his plan of cutting down the Rhineland and Saar occupation. If he persists there is talk in political circles of "another Cannes," referring to how he lost the Premiership over his efforts to settle reparations and war debts with Lloyd George at Cannes.

Opposition to Briand is more likely this time to be limited to hampering and perhaps preventing further negotiations with Stresemann. The Radicals and Socialists are, on the other hand, favorable to Briand's efforts to make a definite peace with Germany and they are ready to back him up in the bargain he arranged with Stresemann by which the Rhine and Saar occupations would be cut short in exchange for the final settlement of reparations based on $4,000,000,000 of Dawes plan bonds on German railroads and industries.

The radical Le Quotidien says: "Briand is ready now to sign a bargain which will later be presented with less advantageous conditions. The ultimate date of occupation was fixed by the Treaty of Versailles for 1935. Is it not better to negotiate now than await the day when the retreat of our troops will be imposed upon us without our getting anything in exchange? That is the thought of Briand and of all men who honestly wish to efface the pace with whatever secret sorrows our griefs cause us."

Le Quotidien confirms, however, the opposition to Briand within the Government, saying the Conservatives will attempt to prevent the bargain, Le Quotidien being radical, hoping they will not succeed.

Implacable enemies of Germany are, within the Government, only in the minority and they are equally hostile to ratification of the American and British debt settlements. Briand's task with the Government is to convince them that the only way to finish with the debt problem and free France from this constant weight is to take the fresh cash which Germany can give if the reparations bonds are placed on the world market and pay off the debts at one blow.

WIND WRENCHES BUILDINGS AND SINKS VESSELS

Great Tower of Miami News Now Leaning Far To Side.

WIRES ENTANGLED.

Wind Sweeps Water Up On Shore, Drowning and Wrecking.

By AL RECK
(United Press Staff Correspondent).

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 20.—A great hurricane blowing 130 miles an hour out of the West Indies has devastated the Florida east coast from near Palm Beach south to below Homestead, sweeping away lives, property and destroying cities and towns.

Fifty thousand people are estimated to be homeless. The damage in Miami alone is set at $100,000,000.

Hollywood, Fort Lauderdale, Hialeah, Pompano, Dania, Hallandale, Moorehaven, Clewiston, Keylargo, Homestead, Coral, Gables, Muckway and Key West all have suffered in varying degree—the first six named as well as Miami, to a point where they will probably have to be rebuilt.

The cities which were built almost overnight in the greatest era of development an American community has ever known, have fallen over night beneath probably the greatest disaster which has struck an American community since the fire and earthquake leveled San Franciso in 1906.

It was six days ago that the hurricane was born out in the West Indies. It rolled westward, and at 2 a.m. Saturday, it broke up upon Miami from the north-west.

For four hours the wind roared and whirled at a velocity of 130 miles an hour.

Tower Twisted.

The great tower, the Miami News, famed over the world for the beauty of its architecture, leaned over to a 20 degree angle, twisted and wrenched.

The ten-storey Meyer-Kiser Bank building was practically demolished.

Building after building was blown down or shattered and torn. Boats were tossed, sunk or destroyed in the harbor as if they were but things of flimsy tissue.

People were crushed, injured and killed.

Wires were twisted into entaglements like those on the battlefields of France.

Lights went out. Communication was an impossibility. Railroad lines were disrupted and tracks destroyed. Rain fell in torrents.

Water Swept Up.

Water, banked up in the harbor by the vast power of the hurricane, swept on to the shore, wrecking what was in its path and leaving boats high on the land.

And while this was going on in Miami, other of the magic cities of the Florida east coast were almost equal sufferers.

Hollywood, perhaps the most famous of the Florida developments, was wrenched and torn. Estimates of the dead there were placed at 200.

Fort Lauderdale, hardly less famous than Hollywood, was visited within hardly less fury. Fifteen bodies have been recovered from its wreckage, and the dead there may go up much higher.

Race Track Ruined.

Hialeah's famous race track was ruined and 17 were reported killed.

The storm swept inland over Lake Okeechobee, and an aviator who on Sunday flew over that vicinity came back with an estimate that probably 140 persons had been killed in Moore Haven and Clewiston.

Another man who had been over the territory said he estimated the dead along the railway between Moore Haven and Muckway at 40.

Coral Gables suffered with six reported dead.

Out at Key Largo and in Homestead, the hurricane visited with its fury and the dead in these communities was reported to approach 40.

Key West also suffered and 18 were reported killed there.

GEORGE WHITE'S 'SCANDALS'

The attraction at the Grand Opera House tomorrow, matinee and evening, will be that glorious glittering array of beauty in the gorgeous George White's Sixth Edition of "Scandals" with the New York production intact and a cast of over one hundred headed by Jeane White, sister of the producer including the world famed Parisian beauty chorus of sixty and the Royal Philapino Sheik Band with the company's own orchestra also under the leadership of the noted leader Baldy Wetzel. Mr. Franklin H. Chase the well known dramatic critic of Syracuse, N.Y. had this to say about "Scandals" the same company which will be seen here.

"It's a scandal the way they crowded into George White's "Scandals" at the Weiting. You would think that we hadn't had a chance to see a clever show in years, instead of quite a constant opportunity these days. But then, you see, the White "Scandals" have a reputation for a lot of show for the money. There is also the consideration that a scandal is always brand new until you hear it and this 1926 edition had made a rather widespread hit. If you should ask me for an example of a musical, dancing and nonsense show of the period that makes the greatest hit for the largest number of people, I would say that a White "Scandals" came the nearest. It is glorified—much glorified.

First of all, it is frequently gorgeously scenic both in feminines and fabrics. This present edition, and well preserved for a road show, is distinctively noteworthy for such scenes as "Year After Year", "Araby", "Mah Jongg", "Rose of Madrid" and "The Land of the Congo" I still believe that the wardrobe is the big star of the show. There were not only gorgeous gowns, but graceful scandals.

Give George White credit. He puts over more show than a three-ring circus. He is one of the producers who has not only recognized the eighteenth amendment by burlesqued lines, but also by consideration of the audience. He doesn't keep an audience sitting the seats for long waits between acts, with no place to go. There's three hours' show from the start, but it's there. It's snappy. It's sophisticated. And if your eye is quicker than your ear—you get an eyeful. Usual thing when a White "Scandals" come to town, is to dig up a lot of new adjectives. They are all very much overworked, and this is enough to tell you what it is all about—about three hours of circus gorgeously done, and about the most serious thing in it is getting the price and hustling to the box office before the seats are all gone."

AT THE REGENT

LIFE, LUCK AND LUBITSCH.

Turning Points in Career of Monte Blue, Now in "So This is Paris."

Life, Luck and Lubitsch—these three—have played the biggest parts in the making of Monte Blue, who is again starred with Patsy Ruth Miller in the Ernst Lubitsch production for Warner Brothers, "So This is Paris," which comes to the Regent Theatre to-day for a run of 3 days.

Blue, to begin with, showed superb judgment in his choice of a birthplace. Riley, Ade, Nicholson, Tarkington, and a host of other successful people had chosen the same state as a starter. Blue, not content with being a native of the state, must choose its capital—Indianapolis—for the fade in.

No ordinary height would suit him—and taking Lincoln as the model, he came within one inch of attaining Lincoln's height. For father, he picked a keen-eyed locomotive engineer—one of those unobtrusive individuals to whom we trust our lives, and who never fail to bring us to the haven where we would be. Blood of those sturdy wanderers is in the veins of Monte Blue. He must always be on the go. Always exploring. Rough-and-heady. Hail-fellow well-met! Witness his vocations and avocations up to date. And life is rather a new affair with him, even yet!

It is a story so swift-moving, so glittering, so mirthful, so filled with touches of humanity, as to make every onlooked glad he is living. To make him thank Life, Luck and Lubitsch for conspiring to make an interpreter of life as heartening and hale as Monte Blue.

MOB TAKES RUM FROM OFFICERS

Besieges Customs Men In Barn With Rifles and Revolvers.

POLICE SEARCHING.

HALIFAX, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—A force of Royal Canadian Mounted Police was yesterday scouring the countryside in the vicinity of Tantallon, a fishing village on St. Margaret's Bay, near here, in search of a gang of eight, headed, it is claimed, by "Wild Archie" McNeil, a Cape Breton boxer of some local prominence, and 13 kegs of rum, factors in an all-night battle between officers of the law and members of the rum-running fraternity.

Road Littered With Glass

On Thursday afternoon, shortly after 14 kegs of rum had been seized on the property of Edmund Smith, at Tantallon, by Customs officials, a gang of eight men drove up in a car and openly threatened the officers. Revolers were drawn and the gang were finally induced to disperse. Some hours later a start was made for Halifax with the seized rum in a motor truck. Suddenly all four tires went flat and it was discovered that the road had been littered with nails and broken glass.

Temporary repairs were made, but it was found that on account of the condition of the tires litle progress could be made. Attempts to communicate with Halifax by telephone were unsuccessful, and it was found that the wire had been cut.

Barn Taken by Storm.

It was then decided to spend the night at Glenhaven, where the rum was stored under guard in a barn belonging to John Smith. Shortly thereafter the barn was attacked and following a barrage of rifle and revolver shots an entrance was effected, the guards on duty, in view of the numbers opposing them, secreting themselves in the haymow. The gang then made off with 13 kegs, missing one remaining in the motor truck.

Up to a late hour none of the desperadoes had been apprehended.

THE SLENDER MAN ALSO WINS.

Slender men as well as women win to-day. But they always have won, for fat men die comparatively young just when success has arrived. And fatness can be prevented by proper body care.

Dr. Robert G. Jackson, at 67, still has the vigor and figure of 25, although he and his family naturally "run to flesh." He still plans and is sure of many years of youthful, productive effort; is never sick, has not had even a cold since 1912; keeps physically fit by eating natural foods, nuts, fruits, vegetables, Roman meal, milk, all non-acid foods.

Dr. Jackson is dietetic editor, "Archives of Therapeutics," New York, a physicians' journal, advisor to "Defensive-Diet League," a physicians' associatin. Send for his free leaflet, "How to Keep Well," to Robert G. Jackson, M. D., 108 Vine Ave., Toronto, Ont.

NOVEL CAUSES BIG SENSATION

AUTHOR ANNOYED.

LONDON, Sept. 20. — (United News.) — The suggestion that Lord "Raingo," the leading character of Arnold Bennetts new novel of Love of Country and a Woman, was in reality member of Lloyd George's war time cabinet, has caused a political and social sensation in London.

When a newspaper which has bought the serial rights to the new book called "Lord Raingo," began to ballyhoo it by printing the question "Who is Lord Raingo?" the public generally looked upon the matter as a publicity stunt and nothing more. Evidently however Londoners tried to identify the characters and finally a sort of elimination contest was held which resulted in complete disagreement over "Lord Raingo's" identity.

Some contended that the man Bennett had in mind was a prominent Cabinet member who literally worked himself to death in England's interests, dying towards the end of the war. Others, perhaps better informed, declared that it concerned another more obscure official, but not a former cabinet member.

It is now reported that Bennett is enraged at the newspaper's campaign over Raingo's identity.

H. G. Wells is said to have tried to joke with Bennett, asking him "Who is Raingo?" whereupon Bennett lost his temper completely, violently denouncing the newspaper.

He remains stonily silent as to whether or not "Raingo" has any counterpart in real life.

LONDON PRAISES NEW GOVERNOR

Inspiring Addresses and Discussions During. Session.

WORK TAKEN.

Evangelistic Campaigns To Be Held in District This Fall.

LONDON, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press). — The Observer devoted a column yesterday to a glowing appreciation of Viscount Willingdon, Canada's new Governor-General. After paying tribute to Lady Willingdon, and Lord Willingdon's work in India during the Great War in promoting British and Indian co-operation and good-will, the paper concludes: "The Canadian people, as Lord Reading remarked the other day, will find in their new Governor-General and his wife what is best in the English character. They cannot fail to be attracted, as the people of Bombay and Madras were attracted, by the frankness and sincerity of the King's representative, his staunchness in friendship, his wide and liberal sympathies and his breadth of outlook.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

Speaking at the morning Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday...., His Lordship Bishop O'Brien read a pastoral letter in which he solemnly warned the members of his congregation against patronage of theatrical production of any type, "which degrade womanhood by advertising her in a semi-nude st... and feature her in this way as an attraction." Realizing that Catholics form a large proportion of the audiences of local theatres, His Lordship said that frequenting by them of such productions would be regarded as a grievous sin, and that they should avoid such performances as they would the face of the serpent.
On Friday next His Lordship will celebrate with Pontifical High Mass at half past seven oclock at the Cathedral, the thirteenth anniversary of his elevation to the Episcopate.

NEW ADDITION.

An addition to the factory is at present under construction by T. C. Ephgrave, a local contractor.

FAIR GROUNDS ARE DESERTED

Mounds of Litter Mark Places Occupied By Midway Stalls.

CHANGED SCENE.

The Exhibition grounds present a spectacle to-day vastly different from that of last week. The turf showns signs of the wear and tear of the thousands of feet that trampled over it during the Fair. Large mounds of litter are accumulated on the sites of the various stalls on the Midway.
The barns are deserted, save for half a dozen cattle awaiting shipment to the pasture fields at home. A few fowls still cluck and crowd in the poultry tent, but not a sound is heard from the dog show tent, where all the benches have been taken down ready for removal. The riot of color and fragrance that delighted visitors to the flower show last week has disappeared. All the exhibits have been taken away from the Manufacturers' building, and the blare of music and shouting that accompanied the side shows of the Exhibition is now succeeded by a silence broken only by the sounds made by the electrical workers taking down the electric globes which created such a flood of light and color during the week of carnival.

MOTOR CAMP IS HERE TO STAY SAYS F. L. ROY

Rotarian Describes Conditions in Tourist Camps He Visited.

MOVING PICTURES.

Local Club Sees Something of Camp Life in Northern Part of Province.

"The Motor Tourist Camp has come to stay, whether we like it or not, and the only thing municipalities have to do is to decide whether they are going to make conditions comfortable for their visitors or put up a 'No Admission' sign," declared Past President Fred L. Roy, in the course of a talk at to-day's luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary Club on the subject of motor camps.
Mr. Roy's remarks were based on his own observation of camps along the road during a motor trip to North Bay, and were illustrated by some interesting moving pictures taken by himself of tourist camps at Huntsille, Sundridge, North Bay and other places.
The film included pictures of Lake Timagami and of Swatstika, Kirkland Lake, Colbalt and other points in the mining country.
The speaker stated that he had found conditions in the various camps on a whole most satisfactory. Although in some respects not as good as Peterborough's own camp at the Exhibition grounds. Of the latter, Mr. Roy stated that in regard to water supply, toilet accommodation, and other facilities the Exhibition camp was rated highly. If there was any criticism to make it was that Peterborough, claiming to be the gateway to the Kawartha Lakes, should have its camp located where the natural beauty of the district could be better seen and appreciated. A site along the water with bathing facilities available was always more appreciated by tourists, the speaker explained.
President C. H. Rogers suggested that Rotary might be able to do something in co-operation with other organizations in pressing for facilities by which motor cars could be transported on the Rochester-Cobourg ferry, pointing out that Rochester tourists would be here in much greater numbers if this accommodation were available.
Rotarian S. R. Armstrong explained the steps that had been taken in this matter, showing that the difficulty of getting automobiles down to the ferry landing on the American side was the obstacle that had defeated all efforts to secure the transportation of cars.
Rotarian C. G. Graham stated that only 5,000 bass fingerlings had been furnished by the Ontario government for re-stocking district waters this year. If tourists were to continue to come here the supply of fish would have to be replenished.
Rotarian A. Brown informed the club that Mr. J. J. Duffus had offered Rotary the use of his new bowling alleys to-night and the speaker appealed for a fine turnout of Rotarians and their ladies. Rotarian Ross Dobbin immediately threw out a challenge on behalf of Rotarian Doug. Loomis and himself to meet any two Rotarians in a match game of five pins and the defi was quickly snapped at by Rotarians Jerry McClelland and Jack Primeau. And two more hats were in the ring a moment later when Past President Jack Seels and Andy Brown challenged the winners.
There was a large attendance today, the visitors including Rotarian A. P. MacLean, of Regina, formerly of Peterborough.

Florida Storm Affects Trading In New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. — Canadian Press. — Despite flurries of strength in some of the investment rails and high grade industrials, the stock market lost ground to-day on selling inspired by gigantic property losses in the Florida storm, which may necessitate a heavy sale of securities by the insurance companies affected and by uneasiness over the monetary outlook as the result of a sharp deficit shown in last Saturday's clearing house statement.
Another temporary outburst of took place in Van Sweringen issues. Chesapeake and Ohio touched a new record high at 173 5-8; "Nickle Plate" common at 193 and Pere Marquette at 111.
In the industrial group, new Peak prices for a year or longer were attained by General Motors, new stock, at 158½; Dupont at 317, and Bethlehem Steel at a 1-4.
The publication of a relatively poor quarterly earnings statement by Hudson Motor Car Co., sent that stock down about 4 points shortly after mid-day.

Mine Market Irregular Noranda Shows Weakness

TORONTO, Sept. 20. — (Canadian Press.)—Noranda demonstrated considerable weakness in trading on the standard mining exchange to-day, closing at noon 40 cents off at 17.80, after touching a low of 17.65. The market was irregular.
Dome gained five cents to 10.95, Gold Hill five to 45, McIntyre 15 to 24.90, and Wright Hargreaves ten to 8.70, while Kirkland Lake lost three cents to 1.07, Lake Shore two to 13.95, and Teck Hughes seven to 4.48. In the silvers Beaver firmed 2 3-4 to 89 3-4, Castle Trethewey one to 1.41, Keeley one to 1.64, and Nipissing one to 6.16, while Bell Allen eased one-quarter to 22 3-4, Mining Corporation 15 to 3.45 and Bourlamaque one to 1.14.

Toronto Market Strong With Several Features

TORONTO, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—Noranda, Gooderham and Worts, Brazilian Common, and Industrial Alcohol were the active issues on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Prices were generally stronger. Noranda declined 30 cents to close at noon at 17.80, and G and W. eased 1-4 to 35 1-2. Brazilian Common advanced 1 5-8 to 118, and Alcohol 1-4 to 22 1-4.
Gains were made by Massey Harris Common, 1 1-8 to 67 7-8, Smelters 1-2 to 246 1-2, Brompton 1-2 to 34, Davies A 2 to 30, and Page Hersey Preferred 1-2 to 105. Favourable Weather Reports Makes Wheat Market Drop

CHICAGO, Sept. 20. — (Canadian Press.)—Influenced by favorable weather in Canada and by large receipts at Winnipeg, wheat values here advanced lower to-day during early dealings. Corn market weakness was additional bearish factor, May corn touching the lowest price yet this season.
Starting unchanged to 1-2c. off, wheat continued easy, although at times scoring slight gains. Corn opened unchanged at 5-8c. lower and subsequently underwent a material set-back all around. Oats held almost steady. Provisions were firm

TRAGEDY ENDS TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIGHT

Gale Sweeps North; No Communication With Gulf Districts

Towns of Seminole and Lillian on Perido Bay Receive Worst Onslaught of Storm — Several Reported Killed—Damage to Property Over Millions.

RADIO MESSAGES FROM NEW ORLEANS STATE FURY LESSENED AT PENSACOLA

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 21 (United Press).—The centre of the tropical hurricane was reported sweeping up Perido Bay, thirty miles east of here, yesterday. Meagre reports said a 100-mile gale had struck the towns of Seminole and Lillian at the head of the bay. Several were reported dead.

Telephone lines running east and west were down, with just one or two lines to the north working. Despatchers reported trains running far behind their schedules.

Heads Northward

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 21—Mobile is being whipped by an 84-mile wind and the intensity of the gale is expected to increase, but no serious damage has been done as yet, The Mobile Register declared over a long distance telephone at 10.45 o'clock.

This was apparently the only wire to Mobile.

Nothing has been heard from Pensacola since 6 o'clock, The Register said, at which hour the city was being whipped by a hundred-mile-an-hour gale.

The wind at Mobile is blowing from the northeast, while it is southeast winds that have always done chief damage in the past.

Thus far damage has only been minor and there has been no loss of life, the Mobile newspaper declared.

Grave fears were felt for the safety of Pensacola. The last report from there said that the centre of the storm had not been located, but it is believed to be venting its full fury on Pensacola.

Communication Stopped.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 21.—All telephone communication with Pensacola, Fla., was cut off at 8 a.m., yesterday, local telephone officials reported.

Last word received here about 7 a.m. reported the hurricane had struck Pensacola with a wind velocity of about 100 miles an hour. The report came from the United States weather bureau.

The hurricane which crossed the Gulf of Mexico during the night was veering north-north-west toward Pensacola and Mobile.

The wind was attended by a terrific downpour.

Toward Louisiana.

The storm apparently was headed toward Burwood, La. Whether its progress along the gulf coast will be marked with destruction equal to that which attended its disastrous trail across Florida, was causing worry to thousands.

Observers of the hurricane said that it seemed to have caused its greatest damage when it doubled back on itself and crossed its old trail. This is believed to have been the case in Miami and vicinity where reports estimate the greatest loss of life and heaviest damage to property.

Hundred Mile Wind.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The wind velocity at Mobile, Ala., has reached 100 miles an hour, the weather bureau was informed in a report at shortly before 9 a.m.

New Orleans reported high wind No report was received from Pensacola, Fla. Weather bureau officials said it appeared that Mobile and Pensacola were now in the center of the hurricane.

Communication Resumed.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 21.—Communication was resumed with Mobile, Ala., but the United Press yesterday, after a short interruption during which it was feared all wire connections with the city had been destroyed.

AT MOBILE.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 21.—United Press wires to Mobile, Ala., failed at 9.05 a.m. yesterday. The following was the last despatch received from the stricken city:

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 21. — The tropical hurricane here is increasing rapidly in intensity. At 8.45 o'clock this morning the wind gauge at the weather bureau registered 62 miles an hour and had been as high as 69 miles. The barometer at 7 o'clock read 29.36, is now registering 29.32 and continuing to fall.

At 7 o'clock the local weather office had telephone connection with the bureau in Pensacola and was told at that time that the wind was blowing at 100 miles an hour there, and the barometer stood at 29.10. Just then the telephone wire failed, and since that time no connection has been available.

The wind has been of serious but not extremely alarming velocity here all morning, but seems reaching the point of some danger.

The writer, in passing from the weather bureau building, narrowly escaped being hit by a large bank sign, which crashed to the pavement, driven by the force of the wind, and scattered broken glass from outside light globes all along the street.

It is difficult to make headway against the wind walking along the street.

Street car traffic has been abandoned because of trolley wires being down at places.

Airplanes Sent.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 21.—With Southern Alabama in the grip of a terrific hurricane and all communication to the south cut off by fallen wires, Governor W. W. Brandon to-day dispatched two airplanes from Maxwell field to survey the situation in SouthAlabama.

Worst Has Passed.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 21.—The worst of the tropical hurricane has passed over Pensacola and the wind has dropped from 100 miles to 80 miles an hour, the Southern Bell Telephone company was informed here at noon to-day in a radio message via New Orleans.

Heroic Sacrifices.

MIAMI, Sept. 21. — (Canadian Press). — Stories of heroism and sacrifices seeped out over the ravaged district yesterday as refugees, some travelling in box cars, made their way out of the area. A mother, with her three children tied to her, braved the surging waters at Moore Haven when Lake Okeechobee overflowed and flooded the city. Huge waves enveloped them and two of the children were drowned. The mother, undaunted, cut them from her and devoted her attention to the survivor.

Raising it to her shoulder she held out until rescued.

Still clutching two of his children the body of a man was washed ashore. A couple who had taken refuge atop of a house were thrown into the water when the building collapsed and for five hours they clung to palmettoes before being rescued.

The fate of several house-boats anchored along the Miami Bay front still was undetermined tonight. One with two persons aboard was seen to break away and drift towards the open sea.

Reports received here told of families being torn asunder and many children separated from their parents, anxiously searched the ruins of what had been their homes.

Sheets of galvanized iron roofing were carried about as if made of paper during the nine hour storm at Miami on Saturday morning, a Pullman conductor reported on his arrival here. Scores of persons were injured by the flying debris.

The storm at Miami came in three sections, Roy Jackson, a Pullman porter said, the gale becoming worse after each brief lull.

"We stayed in the car most of the time,' he said, "and about 25 people came and stayed with us. All their homes had been washed away and they had no place to go. You couldn't see ten feet in front of

DOUBT PREMIER WILL ATTEND LONDON PARLEY

London Hears That New Premier Will Remain Absent.

ASKS POSTPONEMENT.

Forming of Governing Cabinet Might Prevent Him From Attending.

LONDON, Sept. 21. — "I doubt whether Canada, in the unprecedented predicament in which the Government finds itself, can be represented at the Imperial Conference in London."

This statement is attributed to Hon. Mackenzie King by C. J. Ketchum, representative in Ottawa of the London Daily Express. Mr. King said he desired to go to the conference and suggested that if it could be postponed for a few weeks the problem would be solved automatically, but he added that the question of a postponement had not yet been considered.

Consider Others.

Questioned regarding a possible postponement, government officials here recently stressed the difficulties of such a course owing to the fact that delegates from the other Dominions are already on their way to London. The disposition here is that they would like to accommodate the Canadian wishes and there is a recognition of the difficulties owing to recent elections, but it is also pointed out that naturally the desires of other delegates must be considered. During the last few weeks, however, there has been a growing sense of the important part Canada would be called upon to play at the Imperial Conference and if there is no Canadian representative, much of the importance and significance of the Conference would be lost.

Dominion Independence.

H. Wilson Harris, writing in the Daily News, says in presuming that Mackenzie King will be able to attend:

"The immediate indications point to the probability that Mr. King will be sitting in the Imperial Conference next month, and King goes several degrees further in the direction of Dominion independence than his Conservative opponent Meighen, and that is one factor that will contribute to make the conference an exceedingly interesting affair." Mr. Harris also refers to the balance between New Zealand and Australia on the one hand and South Africa and Ireland on the other. "It will make all the difference," he says, "what third party tilts the scales and King will tilt it a good deal further than Meighen."

INDUSTRY OUTLOOK IS BRIGHTER STATES REPORT GIVEN AT TRADES AND LABOR CONGRESS MEETING

Gives Official Statement After Covering Whole of Year's Activities.

HELD AT MONTREAL.

Matter Will Be Fully Debated By the Congress Members.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press).—"The outlook for improvement in the industrial field is much brighter than at any period since 1921, declares the report of the Executive Committee of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress which opened its 42nd annual convention here yesterday under the presidency of Tom Moore. The matter in the report, which is of considerable length, will be debated by the convention in the course of the sittings which last until Saturday.

The report covers the whole range of the year's activities, the legislation sought from Federal and Provincial Governments, immigration and migration matters, prison reform, exploitation of labor, unemployment relief, nationalization of natural resources, minimum wage acts, the eight-hour day, unemployment insurance, mothers' allowances, etc.

The convention has before it 72 resolutions, and it is expected that others will be forthcoming, though a decision was taken that further resolutions might be introduced only by consent of two-thirds of the delegates.

One resolution from the Ottawa Allied Trades and Labor Association calls on governments to make the granting of licenses for motor cars more stringent. The same organization also wishes legislation to compel owners of motor buses to provide rear exits in case of emergency. Montreal Lodge, No. 235, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, asks for endorsement of its resolution calling for legislation to prohibit the use of paint spraying machines in the railway shops. Greater measures of safety for workers in gaissons and tunnels is asked for in resolutions passed by Toronto labor organizations. Measures to regulate closely the operation of barber colleges is asked for by the Toronto Barbers' Union, and this is supported by a resolution couched along similar lines from the Winnipeg barbers.

The Montreal Trades and Labor Council has a resolution on education on the order paper. It is asked that there be in Quebec free and compulsory education, compulsory and uniform tuition in the French and English languages in all the schools of the Province; all text books to be issued by the Government and to be sold at cost price, pending their free distribution; uniformity of school books throughout the Province; all courses in the Provincial Government schools, technical and others to be given free of charge; a minimum salary for teachers in keeping with the cost of living, and the naming of a Minister of Education.

The Edmonton Trades and Labor Council wants a minimum wage law for all male workers in Canada, such wage not to be less than that set out in the Labor Gazette as necessary to maintain a family in a decent standard of living, and based on an eight-hour day.

The Regina Lodge, 253, of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, has a resolution to the effect that "Congress use every effort to have immigration restricted to English-speaking people as much as possible."

The Montreal Trades and Labor Council has a resolution urging its views as to workmen's compensation legislation and several Ontario labor bodies want amendments to the Ontario Act. The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, Prince Albert Lodge, wants guards and other employees in penitentiaries to work no more than eight hours a day. The Ottawa Federal Office Cleaners' Union has a resolution asking that their members be classed as permanent employees. The Hamilton Boot and Shoe Workers want legislation to force employers asking for labor to state the fact if there is a strike in progress.

The Montreal Trades and Labor Council wants approval of a request that the Quebec Legislature be asked to amend its conciliation law so as to prevent any municipality requiring constables to promise not to belong to a trades union.

Bullet Pierces Gas Tank of Vessel Thought Smuggling Aliens.

DETROIT RIVER.

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 21 (Canadian Press).—Set afire by the bullets of an American border patrol, a boat believed to have been engaged in smuggling aliens dashed for the Canadian shore last night and was beached near the foot of South Street at Sandwich, the four occupants subsequently taking a street car for Windsor. The boat is a complete wreck, burned to the water's edge. How the occupants escaped serious injury is a mystery. A bullet from the American border patrol pierced the gas tank, setting the craft on fire, when those in charge refused to answer the American officer's hail. Throwing out a stream of flame and smoke, the blazing boat was "opened out" in a wild dash for the Canadian shore. A Detroit fire boat crew sighting the flames put out to aid the unknown craft, but those aboard the alleged smuggler refused their assistance and continued the race against the flames to land.

SCIENTISTS GIVE EXPLANATION OF HURRICANE

Permanent High Pressure Area in North Atlantic Ocean.

PROTECTS STATES.

In Fall It Withdraws, Leaving Land Open To Hurricanes.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Hurricanes are the creatures of atmospheric temperatures and pressure, and variations in these in turn are caused by the sun beating down on the expanses of Atlantic water and the land mass of our continent. The first such storm on record devastated Cuba in 1494.

"Annually between July and October, about ten hurricanes are born somewhere east of the Caribbean Sea, usually to sweep westward, then northward, and finally back north-eastward, their paths forming pretty accurate parabolic curves. The primary factor in the births and careers of these storms is believed to be an area of high atmospheric pressure or 'high,' that exists practically permanently over the middle Atlantic. In other words, a great blanket of heavy, sluggish air lies continually over this area. Along its southern edge in the tropics little swirling disturbances occur which are the seeds of possible hurricanes. But there is a certain infant mortality among these stormlets, especially in winter and spring. Then the Atlantic 'high' extends in a broad band on into the North American Continent, forming in effect a fence of heavy air which the storms cannot pass. Confined to the tropics, they are dissipated without causing the United States any concern.

Atmospheric Football Game.

"But when summer heat has warmed up the land the 'high' withdraws to its ocean home, jutting out like an air peninsula toward America. The atmosphere over the land becomes an arena for shifting 'highs' and 'lows.' It is as though an atmospheric football game were in progress. The newly born storms of the tropical Atlantic regions seek, because of the general drift of the atmosphere, to move northward. The 'highs,' whether stationary or in motion, furnish the interference which they must dodge. The weakest place in the defence is between the permanent mid-Atlantic 'high' and the American coast. Most tropical hurricanes, therefore, move east to avoid the mid-ocean barrier and then dash northward well east of the coast. Once around the end of the 'high' they swing north-eastward and continue on even into Europe.

"Some of the storms do not have such plain sailing. If the Atlantic 'highs' extends farther westward than usual the disturbances must swing over the land to round the end. It is upon such rather infrequent occasions that the Atlantic coast suffers as it did in Florida.

"Hurricanes are not wind that drives straight ahead. They are swirls of the cyclonic type. These swirling storm centres move relatively slowly across sea and land, sometimes at no greater speed than eight or ten miles an hour. But they suck air toward them from all sides at terrific speeds, up to 100 or more miles an hour."

LEAGUE COUNCIL WANTS DOMINION

Emery Favors Empire Representation at League of Nations' Assembly.

PLAN IS OPPOSED

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Daily Telegraph's diplomatic correspondent emphasizes the importance of the question concerning the council of the League of Nations, and says the situation which recently arose at Geneva cannot be permitted to recur and wants a single vote cast in favor of one dominion or a seat.

He hints that Hon. Mr. Amery, the colonial secretary, is sympathetic toward the idea of the dominions having a seat at Geneva, but that Hon. Mr. Chamberlain, the foreign secretary, is not so enthusiastic over the proposal. All of these questions are being stirred up in preparation for the approaching session of the imperial conference.

Plane Catches Fire When Wheel Buckles Two Men Lose Lives

Rene Fonck, French Ace, and American Aviator Leap Out Just in Time—Mechanic and Radioman Burned To Death.

BUILDERS OF PLANE ANNOUNCE ANOTHER ATTEMPT AT FLIGHT

WESTBURY, N. Y., September 21. —(Canadian Press) — Two men lost their lives this morning when the Trans-Atlantic Aeroplane of Captain Rene Fonck crashed in flames in an attempt to take off on a 3,600 mile non stop flight to Paris. They were Charles Clavier, French Radio Operator, and Jacob Islamoff, Russian Mechanic. They were trapped in the closed cabin of the huge three motored biplane.

Capt. Fonck, the French ace in command of the flight, and Lieut. L. W. Curtin, United States Navy, the alternate pilot, leaped to safety before the plane burst ino flames.

Fonck was slightly scratched about the face. After the flames died out the bodies were left in it pending the arrival of the coroner. The plane, which was valued at $100,000 without motors, was a total loss.

An attepmt was made to take off last Thursday but had to be postpoed on account of gasoline leakage discovered at last minute Afterwards Parisian friends of Fonck urged him to attempt the flight for the honor of France even at the risk of death.

The crash was caused by the buckling of a wheel on the extra landing gear that was to have been dropped into the ocean as soon as the plane got under way. The plane burst into flames instantly after the two pilots leaped from it. It had been travelling at a speed of 95 miles an hour but had not left the ground. Nearly 1,000 spectators crowded around the plane and several woman fainted and one man went into hysterics. The fire raged for more than an hour after, consuming the 2,300 gallons of gasoline in the tanks, and it was impossible to rescue the bodies.

Officials of the Sikorsky Aerial Engineer ing Corporation, builders of the plane, exonerated all participants from blame and indicated another attempt would be made at a non stop flight.

PECK MAJORITY REACHES 2,109 ON FINAL COUNT

Winning Candidate Receives 8,934 Votes and Loser 6,825.

74.9 PER CENT.

15,797 Electors Vote of 21,218 Listed in the Riding.

E. A. Peck, M.P.-elect, was found to have a majority of 2109 over J. J. Duffus, the Liberal candidate, in the election last Tuesday by Returning Officer S. Whatley in the final count this morning. The total vote for Mr. Peck was 8934 and the vote cast for Mr. Duffus 6825.

The number of voters on the list was 21,218 and the number using their franchise was 15,797 or 74 per cent. In the count this morning there were found to be 38 rejected ballots and 27 spoiled ballots or ballots where the voter demanded a second one.

The country deputy returning officers far surpassed the city ones in the way they made their returns in their boxes. One box from the country was found to be in poor shape, but their were quite a number in the city where the instructions have not been followed. At the Orange Hall, Union Creek, in the Township of Galway, there were fifteen voters on the list, and they all voted.

Mr. Duffus got his biggest majority at Mr. Leahy's house, Douro, where his majority was 160, and Mr. Peck's bigges majority was at Poll No. 8, Heasman's store, 161 Rutherford Street, where it was 84.

FIRE BRIGADE TO HAVE MOTOR LADDER TRUCK

G.M.C. Chassis To Be Purchased at Price of $6,700.

MAY BUY PUMPER.

Utilities Commission May Purchase Apparatus To Save Mains.

At a meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, held last night, it was decided to purchase a motor ladder truck and equipment. The motion was moved by Messrs. Greene and Cotton, and was as follows: "That this committee recommend that a motor ladder truck and equipment be purchased from the General Motors Products of Canada, Limited, at a cost of $6,700, and the horse-drawn vehicle and equipment now in the fire hall and as much as can be provided out of this year's appropriation be paid on the purchase price, and the balance raised by the sale of debentures."

Alderman MacDonald moved an amendment that a Reo ladder truck be purchased at a cost of $6,000 on the same terms, but his amendment lost.

E. F. Mason and G. S. Matthews, Utilities Commissioners, were present. They said that if a pumper was procured and used by the fire department at fires it would save the Utilities Commission increasing the pressure on the mains when an alarm was rung. This would save them a considerable amount each year in maintenance by relieving the system of extra pressure.

It would also save the householders in the cost in maintaining their plumbing.

They asked permission of the Council to set up a reserve from surplus to pay half the cost of the pumper, the Council to pay the other half. After some discussion Mr. Mason said that the Commission might pay the whole cost of the pumper using any surplus in the water department that they would have this year, and supplement that from the contingent fund, providing the Council approved, but as Mr. Bradburn, the other Commissioner, was not present, his approval would have to be obtained.

On the motion of Aldermen Phelan and Cotton, it was recommended that the Utilities Commission be authorized and requested to set up a fund from the surplus they may have this year and sufficient additional from their contingent account to purchase a pumper to be used by the fire department, and that if the Commission does so, the pumper be purchased as soon as can be done.

Mayor W. T. Holloway moved and Alderman Cotton seconded a motion that this committee be given authority to advertise for tenders for a motor vehicle with the triple combination pumper, hose wagon, and chemical tank.

Mr. Mason stated that he had written to James J. Mason, who was at one time chairman of the Stratford Utilities Commission, in connection with a pumper, and had received the following reply:

Dear Sir:—

"The pumper purchased by the City of Stratford was financed 1-2 by Council 1-2 by Utilities Commission, and to-day the city would not be without it for double the cost. What it does:— It gives adequate fire pressure everywhere in the city, without undue pressure on the mains and since its purchase in 1923, the Commission has not been called upon once to put up more than 85 lbs. pressure on the mains while previously pressure of 120 lbs. was called for at every alarm even if false. We tried it out at the greatest distance and height of land in the city limits and where we could get from one hydrant only 45 lbs. at the nozzle with one stream we got 3 streams of 120 to 140 lbs. with the pumper from the same hydrant. The saving to the Department is largely problematical but undoubtedly saves considerable in power cost and where gasoline stand-bys are used a very large saving in fuel as one gasoline driven pump was always kept running during fire alarms in case of emergency or accident. However, the saving in other ways must be more than appears, as leaks in mains now are seldom found, while before the purchase there were two or three weekly, and the saving to house-holders in plumbers bills must be enormous. Just write our Fire Chief for his opinion and what he thinks of it, and remember we are nearly in the snow line, 1186 feet above sea level, and it has never refused to go anywhere either winter or summer.

In conclusion, I think the City never spent money more wisely, as it gives the same efficient fire protection to all parts of the municipality. I there is any further information I can give just let me know.

Sincerely yours,
James J. Mason.

LITTLE GIRL KILLED.

Three Year Old Girl Struck By Kingston Street Car.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—Thelma Wainwright, aged 3, was struck by a street car yesterday afternoon near her home, dying a few hours later in the General Hospital. An inquest is being held this afternoon.

Boys In Girls' Pool Surprised Town Clerk

BELFAST, (United Press).—The solemn assembly of the Town Council of Youghal was shocked to hear that its mixed bathing regulation was being ignored. Boys were swimming in the women's enclosure. The Town Council sent the Town Clerk hot-footing to investigate.

He went. Like Caesar of old, he came, he saw—and then he hastened back again, more hastily than he had come.

The boys, it seems, were girls with shingled heads.

Bad Weather In West Wheat Market Stronger

CHICAGO, September 21. Canadian Press. — Something of a rush to buy gave an early upswing to wheat values to-day. Rain and snow in Canada, likely to delay marketing of newly harvested wheat, was an outstanding factor together with unexpected strength of quotations at Liverpool.

Starting 3-8c to 1 1-8c up, Chicago wheat prices quickly scored further gain. Corn, oats and provisions were easy, corn opening unchanged to 1-2c higher, but later receding.

Call Money Reaches Peak Professional Efforts Fail

NEW YORK, September 21. Canadian Press. — Stock prices turned upward this afternoon as new leaders were brought forward to offset earlier declines resulting from renewal rate of 5 1-2 per cent., for call money the highest opening figure since March 1st. This created considerable uneasiness in early dealings and led to flurries of selling in both investment and speculative issues. Professional efforts to depress entire market met with resistance however, and appearance of strong support for influential shares started short covering movement.

With both raw and refined sugar selling at highest prices of the year, sugar stocks staged a rally under leadership of South Porto Rico and Cuba Cane preferred.

Adams Express mounted more than seven points to new high record above 130 and recoveries of two to four points were scored by Allied Chemical, General Motors, Westinghouse Air Brake, Texas Gulf Sulphur and United States Steel.

Brazilian Traction Has Hectic Section

TORONTO, Sept. 21. — (Canadian Press). — Brazilian Traction common, acting under outside influences, was focal point of hectic session of Toronto Stock Exchange in which stock climbd to new high of 122 1-2 and closed at noon at 122 3-8 for net gain of 3 1-4 points over previous close. Turnover approximated 7000 shares. Brazilian preferred was also in limelight with one point gain to 106 and turnover of more than ordinary proportions.

Noranda rallied to-day after showing weakness yesterday and closed 40 cents higher at 18.25. Consolidated smelters also shared in general bullishness of market and firmed 2 1-2 points higher to 26 1-2. Massey Harris common closed up one point to 69. Page Hersey common are 1 to 48 & Good erham and Worts one quarter to 35 1-2, Montreal Power with loss of three quarters to 73 1-8 was one of few issues to exhibit weakness, although Bank of Commerce eased three quarters to 220 1-2.

Few Features Mark Steady Mining Market

TORONTO, September 21. — Canadian Press. — Stocks on Standard mining exchange this morning were generally steady, but the session had few features. The price changes were for the most part fractional, Noranda advancing 25 at 18.25 and Lakeside Lorrain firming 3-4 at 4, were the firmest issues. Teck Hughes strengthened a point at 454 and Kirkland Lake was also slightly better at 5 1-8; Mining Corporation at 3.40 and Beaver at 89 1-2 all were slightly improved. Canadian Lorrain softened 2 at 76, and McIntyre eased 15c at 24.75.

BRIAND TO QUIT UNLESS POLICY PASSES CABINET

French Foreign Minister Expects Opposition From Three Men.

MEETING TO-DAY.

His Main Point To Be Two Billions in Ready Cash.

PARIS, Sept. 21. — If Foreign Minister Briand does not get the backing of the cabinet to-day for his policy of complete reconciliation with Germany he is expected to resign. He went before his fellow ministers this morning in the Poincare Coalition Government to explain the details of the tentative bargain he made with German Foreign Minister Stresemann last week.

If Briand finds the opposition that he anticipates from Marin, Barthou and perhaps Tardieu, will make it impossible for him to carry out his anrangement with the German Foreign Minister, he is prepared to declare he has been working with Dr. Stresemann for over a year on a policy of reconciliation with Germany as a basis for a definite peace in Europe and as he considers it the biggest work of his life he will return his portfolio rather than renounce it.

To-day's Cabinet meeting is thus of capital importance, and M. Briand will need all his eloquence to carry the day. So far the other ministers hardly know a detail of the Briand-Stresemann conversations, other than the general public. I have learned that M. Briand made his appointment with Dr. Stresemann and talked over the plan with him without consulting Paris.

France Stands to Gain.

On his return to Geneva he went to the country for two days returning to Paris yesterday morning. In the meantime the newspapers of the world have had time to comment on Franco-German peace, and it is obvious from the many columns of comments published that France will gain in world opinion far more than she can lose by ending her occupation of the Rhine.

To further compensate France is the tentative German agreement to issue railroad and industrial bonds for $4,000,000,000 under the Dawes plan. Half of this belongs to France so M. Briand will do his best to argue with the Conservatives in the Cabinet as $2,000,000,000 in ready cash would put France on her feet, and solve the war debt problem.

FRENCH SPEAKING PHYSICIANS MEET

Seven Hundred Delegates at Convention in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21. — (Canadian Press)). — Seven hundred delegates including nineteen from France, and representatives from England, Cuba, Switzerland, the United States, South America, and Canada, attended the opening meeting to-day of the Congress of the French speaking physicians of North America.

BISHOP CONSECRATED.

Clergy and Laity Gather at Sault Ste. Marie For Ceremony.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press.) — Clergy and Laity from all over the province attended the consecration here to-day of Rev. Dr. R. R. Smith to the office of coadjutor bishop of the Diocese of Algoma. The ceremony began at ten o'clock and continued into the afternoon.

Sir Oliver Lodge, in a paper read at the recent meeting of the British Association, declared there are as many atoms in one drop of water as there are blades of grass on the earth, while in one tumbler of water there are as many atoms as there are tumblers of water in the ocean.

MORE ACCOMMODATION WANTED.

The Peterboro Industrial Exhibition is growing faster than its accommodation in the way of permanent buildings.

This year the exhibits took every inch of space available, and in the case of manufactured products and commercial displays, many applications had to be refused.

It is evident that the erection of a larger building for such exhibits will have to be included in plans for future exhibitions.

As the Examiner pointed out recently, many large firms would be glad to show their products here were they assured of proper accommodation, and this department of the Exhibition would show a huge expansion with an adequate building available.

Manufacturers appreciate the possibilities that are offered by a demonstration of their products before many thousands of people, and there would not be the slightest difficulty in securing many most attractive exhibits of this kind.

One of the items on next year's programme will undoubtedly be this matter of another commodious building for special displays.

THE FALL FAIRS.

With the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition over comes the round of the district fairs.

The Examiner would bespeak on their behalf the patronage of Peterboro citizens who are in a position to take a half-day off now and then to visit some of the country exhibitions.

The people of the district gave the local Exhibition loyal and enthusiastic support last week; when there is a chance to reciprocate this should be remembered.

And besides, for the motorist, there is nothing better to be sought than a pleasant trip on one of those glorious autumn days, with a few hours fun and recreation at the end of the journey.

Some of you, of course, make it a point to visit several of the nearby fairs; perhaps this year you can widen your itinerary so as to include a fair or two you have missed.

To the others who have never taken the trouble to drop in at one of these events, the Examiner's advice is, pack the family into the car and get acquainted with the people of the district.

They'll be glad to see you and you'll be glad the suggestion was made.

ACTION IS NEEDED.

Local fishermen and the public generally will be surprised at learning that the only step taken by the Ontario Government to re-stock the waters of this district with game fish during the present year has been the furnishing of 500 bass fingerlings.

This utterly inadequate supply was deposited in Pigeon Lake, and none of the other lakes in this section have received any attention, according to local Fish and Game Association officials.

It is obvious that a much more energetic policy of replenishment will be necessary if the Kawartha district is to continue to attract the tourist traffic.

The average tourist is looking for an opportunity to fish, and if one section does not give him what he wants he goes somewhere else.

And worse than that, he tells all his friends about it, and they, too, go somewhere else.

Greater protection of the game fish during the spawning season and re-stocking on a large scale are the two things necessary to save the reputation of the Kawarthas from the anglers' viewpoint, and judging by the small allotment made this year, the time has come to prod the Ontario department into something that approaches action.

GET ON WITH BUSINESS.

The Examiner submits the following as the most valuable, shortest and most pointed of all post-election editorials.

It appears not, as might be supposed from its tone, in a business journal like the Financial Post, but in the Alberta Farmer:

Did the election result suit you, or are you disgusted?

No matter which; the country decided and that settles that.

Remember, Canada is our country and it is up to us to make the most and best of it.

The election was only one opportunity. Each succeeding day will bring others.

BACK TO SCHOOL.

The boys and girls are back at school, and the universities will soon be open again. It is a sight to stir the blood and fire the imagination of older men and women, even more than the historical monuments and places in which older lands are richer than ours. We grow so accustomed to the spectacle of the development of young and plastic minds that our sense of wonder is blunted. We take it for granted, as we take for granted the air we breathe and the sunshine and the domestic affections and the other mighty impulses that inspire the daily toil of men and women. Romance lies all about us, and if we do not see it the fault lies in ourselves, not in our environment.

One sometimes hears the question discussed whether Canada has or can have a distinctive literature. Great literature does not come from a man or woman chewing a penholder, waiting for inspiration and studying literary style, though style is important. It comes from observation of what is going on about us as well as from reading, and from the exercise of reflection and imagination in considering our environment.

Let us take an instance from an older country. Scott belonged to what is called the romantic school. His novels are filled with adventure, action, fighting, chivalry, kings and warriors, though he had also a genius for describing homely people like Dandy Dinmont and Jennie Deans. Soon after his death a new light burst upon the world. Dickens surveyed what seemed to be an unpromising field. He took for his subjects commonplace scenes and commonplace people. He wrote of little shops, the workhouse, paupers, clerks like Bob Cratchett, humble homes or middle-class homes, where dullness prevailed or seemed to the unseeing eye to prevail. But Dickens had the seeing eye. He saw what others did not see, and he added to his observation marvelous imaginative and creative powers. He was no less romantic than Scott, though in a different way. Chesterton, in a brilliant essay, says that Pickwick was a moon-faced fairy prince and Guilp an ogre; and in this there is some truth as well as fancy.

The moral is that there are materials for romance and for great literature everywhere. Family life everywhere is a romance. The common domestic affections represent a force which if generally applied would put an end to war and establish the brotherhood of man. The struggle of the ordinary man and woman to provide food and clothing and education for the family is full of interest to one gifted with sympathetic imagination. The sight of a troop of children on their way to or from school is a spectacle to move the heart. The possibilities of development of all this plastic mental and spiritual material should inspire the thoughtful mind with awe. Such are the true sources of great thinking and great writing.—London Advertiser.

THE "WATER STEAL."

Canada will be surprised to hear that the low levels of the Great Lakes are caused "by the greed of Canadian power barons." They will be further astonished at the news that Chicago has been "browbeaten," and they will probably gasp to learn, furthermore, that Canadian greed is actually blamed for the fact that the Niagara River is wearing away the rock ledge at the Niagara Falls.

Yet all this is about the substance of a special despatch in the eminent Chicago Tribune, from a Detroit correspondent. The story is full of heart-throbs for noble Chicago. It teems with self-pity. It rakes the "grasping" and "moneyed" Canadians. Hark to this roar:

". . . . They have gouged out the bed of the St. Clair River selling out nature's gravel to dredging contractors for a handsome royalty and lowering the levels of Lake Huron and Michigan by causing their waters to flow faster into Lake Erie."

And if you have tears, prepare to shed them now:

"Not only the health and lives of Chicagoans are set aside by the grasping Canadians, but the natural beauty of Niagara Falls is threatened as well. With the rapid flow of the Niagara River, the effect has been to wear back the crest of the falls, which have receded 110 feet in 19 years, according to engineers."

These Canadian "power barons" are credited with amazing feats. They have apparently influenced the minds of Congressmen, enlisted American power interests and shipping kings, mislead the officials of three States, hired expensive counsel, reaped the profits from power of water "stolen" and passed on through the Niagara and St. Lawrence power plants. And to cap it all, Chicago pays the shot to the tune of $60,000,000.

One weeps for Chicago. One is overcome with remorse (?) at the thought of these bullying Canadians going down there and abusing the Sanitary District which has done nothing, save perhaps to double and treble its treaty allotment of water and to make a river run backward and to send its deluge of polluted water through one of the richest valleys in the United States. One wonders at the callousness of these "moneyed" Canadians, in dealing with such kindly people.

But the fact remains that Canada takes water for power only after it has passed through four of the Great Lakes. And if the Chicago Tribune's charge be right, that the flow into Lake Erie has been increased, then why is the level of that lake lower than its average for the last ten years?

There is only one natural channel from the Great Lakes to the sea, and that is the St. Lawrence route. From this route Canada draws her power. Nature arranged that, and until the next glacial age, which may change the contour of this country, there will be only one moral argument as to lake waters.

In the meantime, the Chicago Tribune's article would be a serious slur on the good name of Canada, if it were not so funny.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

A Columbus man played the piano continuously for 105 hours. There must have been a lot of bad shots among his neighbors.

Some people are worrying about whether it will be a wet or a dry autumn, and others as to whether it will be a wet or a dry election.

It will be noticed that the usual battle for Conservative nominations in the Toronto ridings is beginning to take form. There must be an election just around the corner.

The people of Canada were asked last week to vote so as to avoid another election. And judging by the way Premier Ferguson is hesitating, they may have avoided two instead of one.

The Peterboro Exhibition has outgrown its accommodation. More buildings will be needed for next year's fair.

Visiting judges were surprised at the magnitude of the Peterboro Exhibition. The directors hope to surprise them again in 1927.

Electors in unrepresented Ontario ridings are asking why they should be put to the annoyance of by-elections now when the candidates could only sit in one session of the Legislature and the whole disturbance would have to be endured again? And it must be admitted there is much force to their objections.

CHICAGO GRAINS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press). — Eastern buying with a forecast of wet weather in Canada gave much strength at times yesterday to wheat values here. Closing quotations, though, on wheat were unsettled at only 1-8 to 3-8c net advance. Corn finished 1 1-2 to 1 3-4c down; oats 1-4 to 1-2c down, and provisions varying from 10 to 12c decline to a rise of 10c.

Likelihood of enlarged receipts of corn here had a bearish effect on corn and oats. Absence of frost, too, had also a similar influence.

In the provision market profit-taking sales largely counteracted upturns due to strength of hog values, and of cotton.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 32,000; 1,263 pound steers $11.75; few heavies above $11 late; 1,388 pound average early $11.60; bulls and vealers strong, largely $14.

Hogs 23,000; top $13.75; paid for 210 to 230 pound weight, bulk better grades 170 to 260 pound averages $13.25 to $13.70; bulk 280 to 325 butchers $12 to $13; most strong weight slaughter pigs $12.50 to $13; few upward to $13.25; bulk better grade packing sows $11 to $11.75; heavies largely $10 to $10.75.

Sheep 37,000; fat lambs 25 to 50c lower than Friday. Top westerns $14.25, bulk $13.50 to $14; sheep, steady; bulk fat ewes $6 to $7.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for grain of the Montreal market yesterday was again quiet. Local exporters accepted a few odd orders for Manitoba spring wheat and barley. The demand for ocean grain room was also inactive, but the tone of the market was firm and rates showed no important change.

The only business of importance reported in the local market was a sale of 50,000 bushels of No. 2 northern wheat at 17c per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, and 100,000 bushels of No. 3 northern at 11c per bushel over, C.I.F. Montreal. The tone of the market for oats was steady under a moderate demand for car lots.

The feature of the flour trade was the weaker feeling that developed in the market for spring wheat grades and millers generally reduced prices ten cents per barrel. They are now 40c per barrel below a year ago. The report business was quiet but the local trade was fair.

There was no change in prices for winter wheat flour announced, but the undertone was easier in sympathy with other grades. The trade was quiet.

Prices for all grades of millfeed were well maintained under a good demand and a moderate amount of business was done. The movement of standard grades of rolled oats was steady and prices ruled firm.

The egg market was moderately active and prices for large and fresh grades were firm. The receipts were 1,398 cases.

The high light of the potato trade was the stronger feeling that developed in the market and prices scored an advance of five to ten cents per bag owing to the increased demand. Sales of car lots of New Brunswick cobblers were made at $1.25 to $1.30 per bag of 90 pounds, ex-track.

The market for beans was quiet, but the offerings were not large the undertone was steady with car lots of white hand-picked selling at $2.25 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

A moderate amount of business was worked in butter and the feeling was firm. The receipts were 1,845 packages.

The undertone to the cheese market was again stronger under a fair enquiry and values were fractionally higher. The receipts were 6,900 boxes.

Lyrics Of Life

SATURATION

"I used to hear her lightest word—
And there was plenty that I heard,"
Said Uncle Ez, and then he chuckled.
"When her and me at first was buckled,
And bound and tied, and all of that,
The slightest thing she hinted at
I used to hear. But, take it lately,
I ain't affected, not as greatly,
By things she says of such and such,
I guess because she's said so much.

"Why, she could make me mad as mad,
When she was young, and me a lad,
And us just married. There is one thing,
When marriage is a said and done thing,
A fellah hitched, and hitched for good,
He don't get mad the way he would
In younger days, however much he
May have to hear, he ain't so touchy,
To tell the truth," said Uncle Ez,
"I don't remember half she says.

"She says, as though it was a sin,
That nothin' that she says soaks in.
And yet I wonder if it ain't, though,
The same with talkin' as with paint, though?
When first you paint a piece of pine
That board drinks paint like Frenchmen wine;
But, if another coat should follow,
Not near the paint that board'll swallow,
I guess it's so with talk and such:
A man can soak in just so much."

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

WRONG USE OF "LIMITED"

(By The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

Do not use the word "limited" in the sense of "low" or "poor," as in the sentence, "I have a limited opinion of his ability." Such use is incorrect, and is not recognized by authorities, although it is common.

"Limited" means "confined within limits; narrow, restricted." You may use the word, if you wish, in such sentences as the following, "His admiration of the President's achievements was limited by his personal dislike of Roosevelt," and "The amount of aid that can be sent to the famine stricken districts is limited by the lack of railroad equipment." But do not say "I have a limited opinion of his ability" when you mean that your opinion of his ability is low.

"No speech can do more than express the ideas of those who employ it at the time," says Lounsbury. "It cannot live upon its past meanings, or upon the past conceptions of great men which have been recorded in it, any more than the race which uses it can live upon its past glory or its past achievements.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

TRADE FOLLOWS THE FILMS

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

The British seems to be waking up to the efficiency of film advertising.

The trouble is that American films cover the world. They show American clothes and American automobiles, and other American goods. The consequence is that people buy what America has to sell. Thus America with its 120,000,000 population is formidably challenging the British Empire with its 450,000,000.

The British naturally consider themselves superior to Americans and regard the latter as materialistic and otherwise backward. They have not the high moral qualifications of the British, according to British ideas.

America will spend thirty million pounds on motion pictures the coming year. In the face of such tremendous advertising it is difficult for Great Britain to hold up its end in the matter of trade.

Sir Robert Donald wants the government to take action in hte matter by financing British pictures in sufficient numbers. He says that Britain has the money, the latent capacity and the talent for out-doing America.

Consular reports say nothing of the film business, notwithstanding its tremendous effect upon trade.

"If we had shown the same somnolent complacency," says Sir Robert Donald, "in the face of attacks on other industries, such as tobacco, matches, cycles, motor cars, steel, cotton and the like, the country would have been in a state of insolvency and unable to pay interest on its debt.

"By offering handsome fees for scenarios, and supplying ample funds for productions Great Britain may yet forge to the front as a film maker with the attendant consequences of a betterment in trade."

An unexpected result of America's prominence in film making has thus been its effect upon commerce.

POPE OBSERVES MOURNING DAY

Anniversary of Capture of Rome in 1871 is Still Kept.

CAUSES COMMENT.

ROME, Sept. 21. — (Canadian Press.)— The scheduled reception yesterday of Premier Averescu, of Roumania, by Pope Pius was postponed until to-day because of yesterday's anniversary of the taking of Rome in 1870.

Postponement of the reception at the Holy See has caused much comment here since it is felt to indicate that the Pope, despite ameliorated relations between the church and the state, intends to continue some of the various forms of protests devised by the Holy See after its loss of temporal power. One of these protests consisted in considering yesterday's anniversary as a day of mourning for the Papacy.

BAPTIST ASSOCIATION MEETING HELD AT LAKEFIELD CHURCH

Pastors and Laymen Hear Addresses and Discussions on Work.

EVANGELIST COMING.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 20.—The Pastor's and Layman's Conference of the Peterborough Baptist Association was held in the Lakefield Baptist Church on Thursday morning with a satisfactory attendance in spite of the adverse weather conditions. There were present: Rev. T. E. Meldrum of Port Hope -(President of the Conference); Mr. L. B. Randall, Port Hope (Secretary of the Conference); Rev. R. S. McKechnie, Belleville; Rev. L. H. Coles, Colborne; Rev. J. W. Edwards, Mr. C. Baker and Mr. George Post of Brighton, Rev. J. N. Norton, Cobourg; Rev. W. S. Edgar and Mr. G. W. Mann of Gilmour Memorial Church Smith; Rev. C. W. Rose, D.D., and Rev. N. R. MacLeod of Peterborough; Rev. E. D. Ford of Campbellford; Mr. George Spencer of Warkworth and Rev. William Spencer and Messrs. Alex. MacDonald and Joseph Nicholls of Lakefield; Rev. Mr. Marks of Cochrane was a visitor and was made welcome and accorded all privileges of membership.

The meeting opened at 10 o'clock with Rev. William Spencer in the chair for the devotional exercises. After singing a hymn, Mr. Spencer read from the 33rd chapter of the Book of Exodus, beginning at the 12th verse, giving a short address on the subject dealt with in the reading. "Moses wants to know God," he said, "so that he might realize His ideals and that he might have God's presence and His power working within him. God's ideal for St. Paul was to send him far off among the Gentiles, and we want God's ideal realized in us and in our churches by our zeal for His work and a passion for winning souls to Him. Our personal responsibility is governed by a sense of consciousness of God. One of the difficulties of to-day is a lack of realization of God and His Lordship and power over us and of personal responsibility which brings in its train a yearning to win souls and only the sense of God's presence and His power can help us to the achievement."

Mr. Spencer welcomed the Conference to Lakefield. Following this discourse, Rev. N. S. McKechnie, Rev. J. N. Norton and Rev. W. S. Edgar led in prayer, after which the business session was begun with Rev. T. E. Meldrum in charge. Mr. Meldrum expressed his pleasure at the inspiration derived from the opening exercises and hoped for a continuation of it.

Mr. Randall read the Minutes of the last meeting held in June last, and announced that the next meeting would be held in June when the Association meets in Picton.

Rev. W. S. Edgar gave a very thoughtful address on the spirituality of the individual and the care of spiritual lives taking as his text the 14th verse of the 8th chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Romans: "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the sons of God."

"This text has always been a great favorite of Christians," he said, "for it is full of comforting and precious teaching. In the sense of creation, all men are the sons of God, but in the deeper and more significant sense through the grace and redemption of Christ only through this can man realize God's ideal and become sons of God in the best sense of the word.

"One can't help believing that there is a lack of intelligence in the distribution of sympathy which is given in fullest measure to those who have experienced great sorrow, but those who go through the world spiritually blank are much more to be pitied for, although they have money and many comforts, their eyes never rest on the pearl of great price, they never see the world as God made it. They may boast of their great learning, but they miss the grand, eternal truth, which is in possession of the most illiterate enquirer. This text pierces the darkness and brings us face to face with the living universe of God and gives a new and grander outlook to all humanity; the meanest member of whom can become a son of God. If men do not submit to God and are led by Him, then their conversion is a delusion and they are not God's sons... God's spirit directs man toward Christ and through Him he finds unfading holiness made radiant with the beauty of a Christian life. When his ideal fades, enthusiasm ebbs and he is eager and keen for holiness only as long as God's loveliness abides in his heart, and only by God's presence can his heart be kept pure and sweet. Then there is the key to spiritual power; Christ told His followers to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endued with the power from on high, and after this great experience they went forth filled with the Holy Spirit, fearless and bold. The Church of to-day, preachers and members alike, needs more of that Spirit of God; perhaps the old-time preachers were no better than those of today, although Christ is the theme of the modern sermon, but there must not only be the theme but the living presence of God.

"The real test is the amount of vitalizing energy which pours into the hearer's ear and that is only possible when the message runs like a flame on the preacher's soul and falls red hot on the hearer's ear. Probably there was a greater dependence on God in those old-time preachers than is usual to-day.

"Then there is the great passion for soul winning which comes with the genuine realization of God. A man with this grand master passion and with all his energies concentrated upon it is one of the greatest powers in the world. Our Lord, with His great passion for men, went up to Jerusalem to finish His work, knowing all that lay before, but set His face like flint to carry out His task and men must catch the love which led Him to sacrifice all for the souls of men."

In this discourse the speaker emphasized the fact that being led by God imparts a divine sacredness to humanity; it teaches us the secret of a holy life and gives the key to spiritual power and begets a passion for souls.

Rev. N. R. MacLeod of Park St. Church, Peterborough, led the discussion on Mr. Edgar's address.

One thinks of the individual as four-sided: the physical, mental, social and spiritual sides all having their place and the last named is the one which reaches unto God. The matter resolves itself into the question, What does it mean to be spiritual and how can it be developed. Spirituality is the endowment of the Holy Spirit and in the 1st epistle of St. John are found four tests of this given: 1, Fellowship with God and the Brethren; 2, Consciousness of Sin and Repentance; 3, Obedience to God; 4, Love for the Brethren.

Rev. J. N. Norton, Rev. L. N. Coles, Rev. N. S. McKechnie, Rev. W. S. Edgar, Rev. J. W. Edwards, Rev. Dr. C. W. Rose, Mr. G. W. Mann and Rev. E. D. Ford joined in the discussion and it was urged that as a means of developing spirituality it was necessary to keep constantly in touch with the fountain head.

Dr. C. W. Rose, of Murray Street Church, Peterborough, spoke of the test of character which is apt to come in middle life when all the bubbles are pricked and it is exceedingly difficult to maintain the sense of power of God and the only way to meet this peril is to strive to get closer to God, read God's word, not critically, but let it pour in and it will give renewed spirituality.

Evangelistic services are going on at Sydney at present and will be held in Warkworth from September 21 to October 3, in Lakefield from October 19 to 31 and in Park Street Church, Peterborough, from November 2 to 16. Union services will be held in Brighton, beginning October 1. Prayers were asked for the success of these meetings and that there will be a genuine revival for God's work.

The ladies of the Lakefield Baptist Church provided an appetizing luncheon which was thoroughly appreciated by the delegates. During the noontime intermission committees met and some of the delegates went out to view the beauties and activities of the village, many visiting the gigantic plant of the Canada Cement Co., now in course of construction and also the work on the power development which is being rushed on this summer.

The afternoon seassion opened at 2 o'clock with Rev. J. N. Norton in charge of the devotional exercises. Following the singing of several hymns, Mr. Norton read several portions of scripture, referring to the importance of the work of evangelization. Rev. C. W. Rose and Rev. T. E. Meldrum led in prayer, after which Mr. Meldrum took charge of the business session and the reports of various committees were received. Regarding the church at Bewdley which had been closed for sometime, Mr. Meldrum reported that it had been re-opened and Port Hope was carrying on the work with good results. The closed church at Bailieboro was not so satisfactory and it was recommended that the local Home mission Board take the matter up. Rev. N. S. McKechnie, chairman of the Home Mission Board gave a favorable report of the work in Trenton. A student worked there all summer, holding service in a hired hall on the west side of the river and opening a Sunday School in the north-east section of the town, near the C.P.R. station. He left the town two weeks ago and since there has been a supply, but Rev. Mr. Holland, who has resigned the church at Picton, will go to Trenton for the winter and will carry on. The Baptists have secured a lot and are preparing to build and at present they are worshipping in a large tent which has proved more satisfactory than a hall. There is a great spirit of loyalty and enthusiasm manifested there.

Rev. L. H. Coles and Rev. N. S. McKechny who formed the committee to discuss ways and means of doing evangelistic work reported, Mr. Coles speaking first.

Mr. Coles states that all Baptist ministers are intensely interested in evangelism. Scripture shows its importance and the church cannot afford to overlook its opportunities. Everyone can look back to the ecstasy of the human soul produced by attending these services, in holding them or assisting others to hold them. Of course there are disappointing elements, for sometimes the evangelist uses methods which the resident minister cannot practice and there is a liability of urging a profession of faith prematurely. Soul experiences are not always up to the profession, but they must stand the test that will surely come. Sometimes the evangelist overlooks the old sinner in his excessive zeal for the young.

The united prayers of the Association are needed for the evangelistic effort to be made this autumn, he said. Some evangelists are exceedingly gifted in this regard and sometimes one pastor can aid another and in this co-operation is found the really ideal condition.

Mr. McKechnie expressed his agreement with Mr. Cole's statements regarding the danger of urging premature decisions from boys and girls. The human soul is a delicate thing to deal with and vast harm has been done among boys and girls for it is the easiest thing to stampede a Sunday School and have all on their feet ready to make a profession, but in spite of the grave dangers attending the work with the young it should not be abandoned. Some boys and girls have made their decision again and again and probably at first in a stampede, but many are sincere in their profession.

What religious experience can be expected from a child? All are different. St. Paul had a spectacular religious experience, but can any one put their finger on the time when St. John became a Christian. People are often apt to make too little of quiet experience. Failure of the evangelist's efforts often follow a lack of following up his work. One great difficulty today is found in the fact that the churches are not touching any large portion of the community. Belleville city has 10 churches and the census of church going is not over 50 per cent, and this condition prevails in many other places and has largely increased in the past ten years. Evangelistic meetings draw a large number of people already deeply religious but apparently do not reach those who are sinners. "Should we hold shop meetings at noon; how can we arouse the apathy? There is not a large enough proportion of mature men attending church at present and we should not be content to let them go."

Mr. Meldrum said that people have to have problems before they can work them out and if the sinners were not coming to them they should follow the Lord's advice and go out into the highways and by-ways and compel them to come in. Dr. Rose said that pastors are all interested in evangelistic work and regard it as a supreme business, but it is increasingly difficult to carry out, the problem being largely one of leadership. The life of the church depends on evangelistic effort in which God is revealed. Educational evangelism is worth while, but needs the vitalizing breath of God to make it effective.

Mr. Meldrum told of an evangelistic campaign held in Port Hope in which they were aided by the McMaster Band and two evangelists with results far below their expectations, because those who needed conversion did not attend the meetings.

Mr. Edgar claimed to be an evangelistic pastor and has had wide experience in Scotland, where open-air meetings were held with splendid results. These things are good if properly done, with a company of singers and a programme of speakers, but Canadians seem shy of open-air meetings, he said. Regarding the statement that children could not be expected to have the same religious experience as an adult, Mr. Edgar drew attention to the story given inthe Acts of the Holy Apostles, of the man who required an earthquake to convert him and Lydia, whose heart was opened by God. A child's conversion is like Lydias', the heart is opened like a flower to the sun.

Mr. McLeod spoke in favor of open-air meetings citing a successful summer campaign once held in Brantford with truly gratifying results.

Mr. Spencer spoke also in favor of open-air meetings and pastoral interchange and co-operation. Last year in the Norfolk Association groups, four men exchanged and successful campaigns resulted and this year the same method has been adopted. Mr. Edwards gave a note of warning against professional evangelists, becoming too professional, saying, "Preaching at people does not lead them to Christ, but loving them does and may the love of Christ constrain us."

Mr. Ford spoke of the value of a church bulletin; the value being increased if the board is lighted. He had one in one of his churches and found it a silent preacher and he wished for funds to put one up at Campbellford for dignified church publicity.

Mr. Marks spoke briefly of the value of these conferences for discussion of problems. It is a privilege they do not enjoy in northern Ontario where they too, are faced with the non-church going problem. A brother pastor from Florida who is now living in Cochrane assisted the speaker in a campaign of evangelism, but it was a hard and apparently useless task, so his friend urged that he get his deacons interested and get them working which he did, with the result that 23 were added to the church in Cochrane. "If the rank and file could be got to realize what we have to offer they'd come out to our meetings," he said.

Mr. Meldrum urged personal evangelism and stated that he had accomplished more in this way than in any other and pastoral visitation, formerly distasteful, has become a delightful part of his duty.

Mr. Spencer supported this statement giving an example from his personal experience when 63 were added to the church in a town of 3000. Personal evangelism is a strong factor in church life and activity.

Mr. Ford suggested that some measure of success resulted from finding key men and key women in the congregation. The conference closed at 5 o'clock, after which the ladies served tea to the delegates before their departure by motor for their homes. A hearty vote of thanks was given to the ladies for their generous hospitality.

SCARCITY OF FISH BLAMED ON SEWAGE

Lake Erie Men Say Detroit Killing Fish at West End.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Sept. 21. — Port Stanley commercial fishermen are beginning to worry over the scarcity of fish in those waters, according to reports reaching the city. Several tugs have gone out of late and set nets but have brought in no fish, the waters being virtually barren. It is very close to the fall fishing season, considered the best of the year, and it is felt that the fish should be starting to run again with this period so close.

The Detroit sewage theory has been advanced by some as being the probable cause of the scarcity of fish in the Port Stanley waters. Fishermen west of Port Stanley claim that a foul smelling green slime that has been in the water for weeks comes from Detroit sewage and the refuse dumped into the lake from industrial plants. Pound netters reported finding many of the fish brought up in their nets dead, not a few being badly decomposed. Dead fish also have been seen floating in the lake.

At one time the waters off Port Stanley were considered among the best fishing grounds in the entire lake, but in late years fishing at Port Stanley has gradually fallen off while the Port Dover grounds are now considered among the best. It is suggested that this is the result of the fish being driven from the west end of the lake to the east end.

One of the surprises of this season is the white velvet wedding frock. The velvet used is of the most chiffon-like texture.

PICNIC HELD

MARMORA, Sept. 21.—St. Paul's Anglican Sunday School held a very pleasant picnic on the grounds of Marble Cliff Pavilion last Saturday afternoon. Games and races occupied the greater part of the afternoon. A delicious communal tea with ice cream as dessert concluded the picnic.

PRESBYTERY MEETS IN OSHAWA CHURCH

Cobourg Division of United Church Will Elect Officers.

NORHAM, Sept. 21.—The Cobourg Presbytery of the United Church is called to meet in King Street United Church, Oshawa, at 10 a.m., on Tuesday, September 28. At this meeting the annual election of Presbytery officers will take place. Committees and commissions previously appointed will give their reports. All matters sent down by the second General Council and from the June meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference will receive consideration. Every pastoral charge is entitled to a lay representative who may vote on all matters under discussion. All delegates are required to make a record of travelling expenses as these will be met from the funds of the Presbytery.

Rev. F. J. Horwood, Mus. Bac., pastor of Marmora circuit and a former pastor of Norham circuit, has announced his resignation, to take effect at the end of October, when he goes to Toronto to take up work along musical lines for the United Church.

Alex. Peterson, of Warkworth, has purchased the farm owned by the late Fred. J. Laver.

While Charles Pierson was leading his horse over the temporary footbridge that had been erected over Salt Creek while a top was being put on the new bridge, the horse broke through the covering and injured itself severely.

Greater interest was manifest in the election last Tuesday than had been taken in that event for a number of years.

There is yet considerable grain out in the fields. It is badly damaged with wet and many farmers have sustained heavy losses.

There was a heavy frost a few nights ago, but little damage seems to have resulted.

FARMERS FIND CROPS ARE GOOD

Expectations of Light Yield Not Fulfilled—Plenty of Hay.

ROOTS ARE SCARCE

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 21. — Throughout the district of South Monaghan this year the crops are on the whole "good." It was generally considered at the beginning of the season that the hay crop would be light, but when the crop was taken off and put in the hay mows it was found that the crop on the whole was fairly good.

The alsike and pea crop astonished the majority of farmers, and in most cases the yield has been splendid. C. Dawson had ten acres of alsike which yielded in the neighborhood of eight bushels to the acre. There are only a very few crops threshed as yet, and some farmers expect even a larger yield.

Fall wheat is not as heavy a crop as it was last year, but it is yielding wonderfully well to the amount of straw. W. Barnard threshed about twenty acres recently which yielded in the neighborhood of thirty bushels to the acre, and it is though that some summer fallows in this district will yield around fifty fine bushels per acre.

Oats, barley and buckwheat are generally an excellent crop. There will be some heavy yields of spring grains when threshed.

The pastures during the summer months have been excellent owing to the frequent rains, and fall approaching finds abundance of pastures on the farms for livestock.

The potato and root crops are real good, but there is a small acreage of roots and potatoes sowed this year.

Throughout the district there is a large acreage of fall wheat being sowed this fall, and the land has in most cases been well prepared for cropping.

The major portion of the harvest is now off the fields, but as the farmers are busily engaged in sowing fall wheat, and doing their summer ganging, they are not extensively engaged as yet in threshing their crops. This will follow later, however, when the weather becomes dry, and the wheat is growing.

Hundreds Drowned. (United Press).

At the field Hospital and Morgue Base, Sebring, Fla., Sept. 21. — Tales of horror that followed the complete ruin of the town of Moore Haven, leveled by the tropical hurricane, were brought back here yesterday by Wade H. Marlow, one of the first of a rescue party to reach the stricken town.

"I arrived in Moore Haven not long after the levee holding Lake Okeechobee had broken in three places, loosing its gigantic wall of water upon the town," Marlow told the United Press.

"The water poured through the streets and countryside at a depth of twelve feet. There was no warning and the people had no chance to escape.

"Those who lived yesterday to tell of the disaster saved themselves by swimming and clinging to the wreckage of flimsy homes that collapsed under the first impact.

"A few made their way to two-storey buildings, which had remained standing, and there we found them.

"They were too frightened and too near physical collapse to venture forth from their temporary shelter, and it was only after considerable persuasion that we got them away.

Bodies Afloat.

"Fifty-one bodies had been recovered late yesterday and were being embalmed at Venus. They will be brought here later.

"We saw other bodies of men, women and children floating about on the high waters, but made no attempt to recover them, first seeking possible wounded who were still alive.

"The state's railroad was completely wrecked for more than two miles. I saw three bodies, those of an old man, a woman and a child caught under a rail."

"Wild animals and snakes fell victims to the onrushing waters.

Perched on Shelves.

"Effie Sutton and Mrs. Louis Fallow were found perched on shelves in their house, which was floating away from its site.

"Searching further in our boat we came upon another house that was floating and there we rescued W. H. Edwards and R. E. Green. They too, were riding the shelves.

"We would pass floating bodies, near which were dead animals and snakes. The cries of the frightened women and children were maddening.

"Only one child of the Dequilla family of seven was saved. Of another family named Bowman, the father was the only one of six who is alive to-day.

At the Morgue.

Three rescue trains arrived there at 6 a.m. yesterday; one was manned by legionnaires from Tampa, under command of Major Williamson, and the other two came from Haines City and Sanford.

Pitiful scenes are being enacted at the morgue here as refugees walk slowly through the somber aisles seeking to identify missing relatives.

A little girl, who gave her name as Juanita Morrison, was brought here all smiles and asking for her parents. She has not been told she is the sole survivor of her family of eight.

Fear Damage.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.— The navy department said yesterday afternoon it had received no reports from its Pensacola, Fla., radio station since 8 a.m., when a weather report told of the approach of the hurricane center. It was feared the station was storm damaged.

Mississippi Rising.

BURWOOD, La., Sept. 21 — The Mississippi river was rising here yesterday afternoon.

There were three feet of water in the streets in some parts of the town.

An increasing northwest wind has struck and the barometer is 29.54.

Power System Crippled.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 20.— The receiving aerial of the Tropical Radio station was carried away by a terrific wind storm which swept this city yesterday. The municipal power system has been crippled. A high wind of ever-increasing velocity is being experienced.

NEW AIR RIFLE HAS LONG RANGE

German's Invention Will Shoot More Than Mile.

HOLDING PATENT.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Hermann Plieth, engineer, is reported to have invented a noiseless high compresion air rifle with a greater range than the orthodox military weapon. The magazine holds 25 bullets.

Though Pileth only claimed a range of 1,600 yards for his gun, in recent tests by police and army officers the bullet is said to have pierced a steel plate three-twentieths of an inch thick at 2,200 yards.

The present cost of the rifle is $120, but Plieth says this will be reduced greatly with mass production. On account of the restrictions on arms by the Versailles treaty, the Reichswehr will not take up the invention, but Plieth says he will not sell the patent to any former enemy. He values it at $1,500,000.

CHURCH JUBILEE BEING OBSERVED

Special Sermons on Sunday and Social Gathering Tonight.

AT HARWOOD

HARWOOD, Sept. 21. — The fiftieth anniversary of the opening of St. John's church in this village, was celebrated on Sunday with appropriate Jubilee services, while a congregational gathering and Old Tyme supper are to be held to-night. Rev. Mr. Creisal is rector of the church.

The special preachers Sunday were Rev. William C. Allen, M.A., whose father the Ven. Archdeacon Allen, was present at the opening of the church, and Rev Temple Stannage Boyle, D.D., of Cobourg, who was in charge of the evening service.

St. John's church, Harwood, has an interesting history.

The first Anglican services were held in the waiting room of the old Cobourg and Peterboro Railway, which spanned Rice Lake, and connected Peterboro with Cobourg. This was made possible by the kind invitation of the manager of the road, J. R. Barber, and later with the help of the late R. J. Craig.

Another early effort, made prior to the building of the church, was the inauguration of a Sunday school, which was conducted for some years by Mrs. Thompsoh and her daughters in the dining room of Ludgate's mill, erected upon what is now the McCurdy property here. This Sunday school has been in existence ever since. At times when there was no rector in charge of the parish the work of the school has been carried on by devoted women and other church workers.

It was in 1876 that St. John's church was built. Rev. Mr. Wadleigh had been appointed to the parish and he began at once to collect money for the building of a church. So successful was he that the building was erected and furnished free of debt. The opening services were held in September, 1876, and on St. John's day, December 27, 1876, the sacred edifice was formally consecrated by Bishop Bethune.,

The Memorials.

There are several memorials in St. John's church. An altar cross and a pair of flower vases were given by the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Cruso of Cobourg who spent the summer season at Tic Island, Rice Lake. The stained glass chancel windows were erected in memory of Miss Hattie Farr by her sister, Mrs. H. B. Boswell. The bell was given by Mr. J. R. Barber

The Incumbents

The parish of Gore's Landing and Harwood, to which Perrytown was added in 1900, has had the following incumbents:

1851: Alexander McNabb; 1853: J. W. H. Beck; 1862: W. C. Clarke; 1868: Archibald Lampman; 1876: W. H. Wadleigh; 1881: F. W. Squire; 1884. George Ledingham; 1896: W. Major; 1898: A. J. Gadd; 1900: G. A. Field; 1904: T. F. Summerhayes; 1908: O. E. Newton;; 1910: T. M. Lowe; 1913: L. Morris; 1914: W. Morgan; 1919: L. Smith: 1925: J. M Cresisal.

A feature of the social congregational gathering will be the cutting of the Jubilee cake with its 50 candles. That happy rite is to be performed by Mrs. James Drope, the oldest resident member and Miss Mary Thompson, who is a sister of the first church warden.

The Archdeacon of Peterboro, the Ven. J. C. Davidson, M.A., will preside at this social gathering

Mr. Charles Thompson and Mr. James Drope were the first church wardens at St. John's church.

TRADE UNION HAS LARGE DECREASE DURING THE YEAR

Due To Disuniting Western Miners From United Workers.

OFFICIAL REPORT.

Annual Convention of Trades Trades and Labor Congress at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press).—Due to the breaking away of the Canadian Western Miners, District No. 12, from the United Mine Workers of America, the convention of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress learned here yesterday that there is again a decrease in the membership of international trade unionism in Canada of 2,875 for the year ended September 1, 1926.

P. H. Draper, secretary-treasurer of the Congress, in presenting this report, pointed out that only those members of unions on which per capita tax has been paid to the Congress are included. Per capita tax is not paid by unions on its membership not working, and Mr. Draper estimated that the figure of 103,037 which he gives would be increased by one-fourth if this were done. He said he felt it necessary to make some explanation of the figures because of critics of the movement, within and without labor, who might wish to refer in gloating terms to the reduction of membership in international unionism in Canada.

"If I should trust myself to predict anything to the delegates," which is not my custom," added Mr. Draper, "I can say because of my observations in the last nine months that we are due to a substantial increase in membership within the next six months."

Mr. Draper's figures, as submitted to the delegates, show the peak in 1921 to have been 173,778 members, and the decline is shown for subsequent years as follows: 132,071, 121,842, 117,063, 105,912 and 103,037 for the present year.

Dissension and secession were responsible for the decrease in membership of the Congress, said Mr. Draper. In 1924 the United Mine Workers had 17,000 members in Canada; in 1925 the number had fallen to 9,875, and for the year under review the number showed a further drop to 7,055.

Delegate Wilkinson, of Edmonton, Alta., commenting on the figures, said that there were signs that the Western miners now realized that they had been led into error in deserting the United Mine Workers of America, and he believed that they would again become members of that international.

Further light on the Western miners' situation is shown in the report of the Executive Committee of Congress, which will be discussed later. The statement is made that last December an application for membership was received from an organization formed of miners who had seceded from District 18 of the United Mine Workers of America, the title of this organization being the "Mine Workers' Union of Canada," claiming jurisdiction over both coal and metal miners. The report adds: "In refusing the application your executive pointed out the provision of the constitution of the Trades and Labor Congress that 'in no case shall an organization be admitted to membership whose jurisdiction conflicts with any international or national union already affiliated to this Congress.' As the United Mine Workers of America were already affiliated to the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, no other organization covering this class of workers could be granted a charter."

The financial statement submitted by Mr. Draper shows receipts of $23,100, and expenditure of $19,273, leaving a balance of $3,826.

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan's disillusioned father had warned him: "Destroy women or they will destroy you; take their love scornfully—and forget!" This advice has made Juan the greatest lover of all time. But his cynicism is suddenly checked by the disarming innocence of Madonna-like Adriana Varanese. The lovers incur the fearful enmity of infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves Juan, and Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana. To save her father's life Adriana agrees to marry Donati, but when Duke Varanese is dragged to the Vatican to sign the agreement Donati breaks into Adriana's room.

There Donati stood with his feet wide apart, his hands on his hips, watching her go, thinking of how easily he would reach her and catch her up in his arms, holding her close, pressing his lips to the white, smooth curve of her throat.

There were all the still night hours in which to conquer her; he need not hasten. And it was amusing to see her trying to face him courageously, with terror in her wide dark eyes.

Adriana's lips moved. She was murmuring a prayer. Surely the Virgin would protect her, would somehow save her from this fate that was far worse than death.

Her terror made her weak; she could hardly stand. All her strength went into that whispered prayer, and Donati, realizing what she was doing, smiled more broadly than ever.

In the hall below there was suspense almost as great. For Juan was there questioning the servants. Not daring to tell him the truth, they swore that Adriana was not in the house; fear of Donati had torn their loyalty to shreds. Knowing that they were lying, Juan thought at first of fighting his way thru their ranks and up the stairs; then another plan came to him, and he strode from the house.

In the courtyard he stood for a moment, looking about him. Donati's horse was tethered to one of the great metal rings fastened into the wall. On its blanket was embroidered Donati's initials; Juan traced them with his finger, even as he laid his plans. He turned to study the side of the house.

For an instant he was almost mad with anger. Then reason forced him to stop and think. After all, what he at once suspected might not be true. New realization of her purity and loveliness swept over him. He fought down the inclination to rush away, and instead turned, crossed the courtyard, and began to climb the wall, instinctively finding footholds in the crevices between the great stones.

In the room above Donati stood staring down at Adriana, who lay back, almost fainting, in his arms. He had pursued her across the room, had fought down her resistance, and now stood gloating as he held her limp body. The brocade had fallen from her shoulders; their rounded bareness was like that of some exquisite statue.

Juan's made haste was heedless, and the edges of the great stones crumbled beneath his feet. Bits of stone fell to the courtyard, and the sound brought Adriana back to consciousness, and made Donati turn toward the nearest window, his own face like that of a snarling animal whom someone wishes to rob of its prey.

He knew that it must be Juan; in fact, he had been expecting him. Adriana felt that her prayer had been answered, that it might be Juan who was coming she did not suspect. She would have cried out to this unknown rescuer, but Donati shook her threateningly.

"If you betray me by a look or sign I'll kill this intruder!" he told her, and the cruelty of his face left no doubt in her mind that he meant it.

Releasing her, he laid one hand on the hilt of his sword, and backed slowly toward the curtains concealing a small alcove, barely a niche in the wall. Adriana watched him, terrified. Only when a sound came from the balcony did she turn away.

The long windows opened slowly. Juan stood between them, staring at her, unbelievingly.

To him it seemed that her delicate face was pale because of her guilt; he thought that it was because of shame that she trembled, never dreaming that terror was the cause.

His eyes searched the room, came back to her.

"Where is he?" he demanded.

Behind the curtains stood Donati, his sword drawn. Knowing that he was only waiting for an opportunity to spring upon Juan from his hiding place, which she could see as she turned to watch Juan as he walked about the room, Adriana stood horrified. She could see the outline of Donatis sword as it pressed against the curtains.

"Where is he?" again demanded Juan. Adriana shook her head, trying to smile. At first she could not control her voice enough to speak; finally she managed to reply to him.

"There is no one here," she told him. "Please—oh, I beg of you, please go!"

It was then that Juan felt sure that his suspicions were based on truth. He fought the conviction. Surely she was not like all other women—surely she was all that he had believed her to be. And yet—here she was, like the others, hiding her lover, lying about him.

Wildly he asked her over and over again, "Where is he? Where is he?" She would not meet his eyes, would not say anything but "Please leave me," and insist that there was no one there.

He surveyed the room. There was but one hiding place, behind the heavy curtains of the furthest wall. He started toward them, but Adriana ran before him, and stood with outstretched arms, barring his way.

No physical wound could have made him suffer as did this action of hers. It was agony to see her standing there, begging him to go, swearing that there was no one else in the room but they two.

Even as she spoke the curtains moved slightly. He followed their movement to the floor. A man's foot protruded slightly from beneath the curtains' edge.

A hideous feeling of sickness swept over Juan. As if a curtain had been unrolled to show him another scene, he saw the tower room in his father's castle, when he himself had sat, a little child, watching while another man questioned another woman—while his father questioned his mother, who replied, as this girl was doing now, "There is no one here! I swear there is no one here!"

And suddenly, instead of his mother, he saw Adriana as she faced him, beautiful, innocent seeming, lying as his mother had lied, to save her lover.

The cry that parted his lips was one of rage, and of hatred. With a sudden, swift movement he leaped forward and tore down the curtains, revealing Donati, standing with drawn sword.

Then, as if possessed by demons, he began to laugh like a maniac, harsh, mad laughter that echoed in the lofty room.

"I believed in a woman's goodness, in her purity and loyalty!" he cried, and his voice broke on the words. "Laugh—for I am the fool of Rome!"

"Juan! Juan!" Adriana cried, and would have thrown her arms about him, but he thrust her back.

He was himself again, suddenly, the self he had been before he knew and loved her. His smile was bitter, sardonic, his voice cold.

WEDDING BELLS.

HUGHES—YOUMANS.

NORWOOD, Sept. 21.—A wedding of interest to a number of Norwood friends took place in St. Mark's church, Orangeville, on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 16th at 3.30 o'clock when Mildred Bernice youngest daughter of the late J. S. and Mrs. Youmans of Orangeville was united in marriage to Mr. Raymond Lees Hughes, B.A., son of the late Mr. William A. Hughes and Mrs. Hughes of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. J. D. McDonald. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. Harry Sanderson of Waterford, was gowned in white taffeta and net, embroidered with silver. She wore a simple veil with bandeau of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Verna Youmans, gowned in buttercup georgette with picture hat and carrying yellow chrysantheums with delphiniums, attended her sister and Mr. Robert Forsythe of Toronto supported the groom. During the signing of the register Mr. J. Stan Weir of Norwood, brother-in-law of the bride, sang. Following the service a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes left later on a motor trip to Niagara Falls, New York and Washington, the bride travelling in a tailored coat dress of canton blue and amber fox fur. Upon their return they will reside at 423 St. Clair Avenue, East Toronto.

The bride, who has frequently visited her sister, Mrs. J. Stan Weir, made many friends in Norwood, who extend hearty felicitations.

EDDY—PAYNE.

PONTYPOOL, Sept. 21.—A pretty but quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Payne, Pontypool, on Saturday, September 18th, at 3.00 o'clock, when their daughter, Esther Isabella, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. Freeman L. Eddy, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Eddy of Newcastle, the Rev. A. J. Terrill of the United Church officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a gown of brown georgette, and carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses and maiden hair fern. The young couple were unattended. The wedding march was played by Miss Ida Payne, sister of the bride.

The house was decorated for the occasion with gladioli and hydrangea and the bride stood under an arch of evergreens. The bride's table was centred by the wedding cake and prettily decorated with flowers. Streamers of white ribbon hung from a white bell above the table, and were tied in large bows at each corner. After the ceremony a dainty luncheon was served to the guests present.

Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Eddy left for a motor trip to Toronto and American points. On their return they will reside in Bowmanville.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

INDUSTRY OUTLOOK

There are a dozen resolutions dealing with picketing during strikes, all much in the same strain, labor organizations in all parts of the country bringing them forward for consideration of the convention.

It is asked by several unions that approval be given to action of the British Trades Union Congress in working towards an understanding with Soviet Russian unions. The Ontario Provincial Council of Carpenters has a resolution to the effect that old-age pension legislation should not include partnership with the provinces, since some of the legislatures would refuse to take advantage of such a provision. A permanent commission to have charge of all elections is urged in a resolution brought forward by the Ottawa Allied Trades and Labor Association. There are resolutions on Senate reform from several labor bodies, other resolutions against military training in the schools, others against private labor bureaus, one to encourage trade with Russia by means of the extension by Canada of Government credits to Russia to enable purchases to be made in Canada.

The Toronto Brewery Workers urge the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act, and the substitution of a system similar to that which prevails in Quebec.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Todays' Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE SPLASHY STONE

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"Whoo-oo! Wait a minute, please!"

Uncle Wiggily heard this invitation called to him as he was hopping out of the front yard of his hollow stump bungalow one morning.

"That can hardly be the Bob Cat or the Skillery Scallery Alligator," thought the rabbit gentleman to himself. "They would hardly dare to try to catch me so near my own home. Besides, the bad chaps would not be so polite as to say 'please.' It must be some of my friends."

As he looked down the street, Uncle Wiggily saw Jackie and Peetie Bow Wow, the puppy dog boys, standing near the edge of the path and looking sort of expectant like—I mean as if something was going to happen.

"What is it?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Wow!" howled the bad chap.

"Would you mind if we splashed you a bit?" asked Jackie, with a sly little wink of his left eye at his brother.

"Splash me? Splash me?" inquired the rabbit gentleman, sort of puzzled. "What do you mean?"

"Mother told us we were not to splash any one unless they wanted to be splashed," barked Peetie.

"What sort of a joke is this?" the rabbit uncle wanted to know.

"It is a joke!" admitted Jackie. "But say yes and we'll do the rest and maybe you'll laugh."

"We'll laugh, anyhow!" chuckled Peetie.

"I don't see how you can splash me when there is no pond of water here," said Uncle Wiggily.

The bunny gentleman well knew that to be splashed water was needed, unless, indeed, one is to be splashed with molasses or maple sugar or sawdust, or something like that, and he saw none of these things. He did notice, however, that Jackie and Peetie were standing on a sort of flat stone that wabbled a bit. And, being always ready for a joke, for he thought it might lead to an adventure, Uncle Wiggily said:

"Go ahead, boys. You may splash me!"

Suddenly, all of a quickness, Jackie and Peetie jumped up in the air and came down on the flat stone with a bounce. And then, all at once:

"Splish! Splash! Splosh!"

A lot of water shot out from beneath the flat, tilting, wobbly stone and sprayed, as if from a little fire engine hose, right in Uncle Wiggily's face.

"Goopie!" cried the bunny rabbit.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Jackie and Peetie. "Now you're splashed! But it's all right, isn't it?" asked Jackie quickly. "You said we could splash you, didn't you?"

"Yes, I did!" laughed Uncle Wiggily as he wiped his face on his handkerchief. "It's all right! But how did you do it?"

"With this splashy stone," explained Peetie. Then he and Jackie showed the bunny how, beneath the stone, was a little puddle of water. And when the doggies bounced up and down the water popped out.

"We found this out all by ourselves," said Jackie. "But mother told us never to splash any one unless we asked them first, and that's what we have been doing."

"That's all right," said Uncle Wiggily. "Splash me again!" and the doggies did. Then the bunny hopped away and Jackie and Peetie had a lot of fun with the splashy stone, showering Mr. Whitewash, the polar bear, and Mr. Doodle, the rooster. But they asked permission first each time.

And late that afternoon, when Uncle Wiggily was coming home from his visit to Mr. Twistytail, the gentleman pig, all of a sudden the Bob Cat jumped out from behind a bush and tried to catch the rabbit. But Mr. Longears noticed that he was standing close to the splashy stone. So, all of a sudden, he jumped on it hard.

Out shot a stream of water and hit the Bob Cat again with the wobbly stone.

"Wow!" howled the bad chap. "What happened?"

"I splashed you, that's all!" laughed the bunny. "And I didn't ask you first, either, because I thought you might nibble me!" And he splashed the Bob Cat again with the wobbly stone until the unpleasant creature ran away, taking his silly little tail with him.

So this ends the story of the splashy stone, but if the cups and saucers don't jump out of the dishpan and go to the movies without the knife and fork, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily.

adian Press).—Radio stations here have been unable to get in touch with Mobile or Pensacola during the past 12 hours. The train arrived here this morning from Mobile. It left there after the storm struck the city and the crew said no loss of life had been reported.

Fear for Bahamas

BOSTON, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press).—The Tropical Radio Company has been out of touch with the Bahamas ever since Friday, it was said today. It is feared that the same storm which wrecked Florida cities might have caused damage in Bahamas.

NASSAU, Bahamas, Sept. 21 (United Press).—Government relief boats have been despatched to Long Island of the Bahamas group, where eleven persons are reported to have been drowned when the hurricane swept the area.

Many houses are reported wrecked on Long Island, but the relief boats so far have not rendered a report on conditions.

Nassau was undamaged by the storm and conditions were normal today. All the other islands excepting long Island seem to have escaped damage.

RESCUERS FIND MORE CORPSES IN MIAMI RUINS

Expect List To Reach 700 When All Are Recovered.

TASKS HEAVY.

Burying Dead, Attending Injured and Providing Food and Shelter.

MIAMI, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press).—While the first relief contingents were arriving here to-day, rescue workers continued their efforts at identification and the burial of the dead, relief of the injured, and the greater task of supplying food, clothing and shelter to thousands made homeless by the hurricane which Saturday lashed the coastal area from West Palm Beach to Miami.

The known dead early to-day stood at 369. This steadily increased as additional bodies cast up by the waters of Biscayne Bay and found in the tangled wreckage of torn buildings were brought to the temporary morgues and rescue workers believe the death list will reach more than 700.

The list of known injured was placed at 1,532, while it is estimated that a complete check will reveal the injured list to be more than 4,000. Varying reports from the entire storm area place the damage at from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000.

Fear For Pensacola.

While Miami and surrounding areas strove for a complete check of its dead and injured, grave fears were felt for Pensacola on the north western coast of Florida, and directly in the path of the gale. Last reports from Pensacola yesterday before wire communication was severed told of a gale there approaching an intensity of 100 miles an hour.

Scarcely a city or town in the storm area escaped the death toll left in the wake of the hurricane.

The greatest havoc was done in Miami and Hollywood, where more than 300 are known to have been killed and drowned by the rushing waters which swept in from the Gulf Stream. The known injured in these two cities alone is fixed above 500, while estimated property damage has been placed at more than $50,000,000.

Fifty-six deaths are known to have occurred at Moorehaven; Dania reported 14, Fort Lauderdale 13, Homestead 10, Clewiston 11, Coral Gables, Miami Shores, Little Rover and Hialeah, outlying suburbs of Miami, had a combined death toll of 45, while a score of cities along the coast from Deerfield on the north to Florida City on the south, reported scattering casualties ranging from one to seven.

No estimate has been placed on the number of injured, in other cities where the force of the wind was said to have been high.

Martial law, established on Sunday in Miami, Hollywood and other cities in the storm-torn area, continued in effect to-day, and national guardsmen patrolled the streets. A number of looters are reported to have been shot at Hialeah, a suburb of Miami.

Two cities were without water for 48 hours, and yesterday and to-day thousands stood in line for medicines, bread, water and fuel, doled out in small portions from the first stores of relief supplies to arrive from the northward.

Relief Trains on Way.

Numerous relief trains and parties have moved and are headed into the stricken area, carrying physicians, nurses, and medical and provision supplies. Speeding from the north was a relief train from Chicago, breaking all records and following no schedule, having as passengers experts in healing and salvation work.

Jacksonville was acting as the relay city in the work of rushing aid down State, and numerous cities of North Florida were organizing to rush supplies into the region, through Jacksonville.

Many organizations and leading business men and municipalities of the country were preparing to aid Florida. Messages of condolence from practically every section of the United States were received by Governor Martin, and the news indicated that relief funds, amounting to thousands of dollars, and much needed supplies, would soon be pouring into the State.

France and Germany have expressed their sympathy to President Coolidge and the United States.

Efforts were being made to rush tetanus anti toxin into the region. An aeroplane and its cargo of 464,000 units of anti toxin was marooned at Jacksonville yesterday, due to an accident in landing.

Miami a Shambles.

Miami is a shambles and Miami Beach presented a similar picture. In the Royal Palm Park, one block from the water's edge, a large steamer lay on its side, and scattered about the tall royal palms were a number of smaller craft. Scarcely a building in the city remained undamaged, while every pane of glass in the region is broken. The tower of the Miami Daily News building was blown off, and the 21-storey Meyer Kiser Bank building badly damaged.

Hollywood, located 17 miles north of Miami, was said to present the most pitiful scene in the hurricane area. Scantily clad children cried for their parents, while great numbers of homeless searched the wreckage for missing relatives.

Bread lines have been established in Fort Lauderdale, seven thousand persons waiting in line yesterday. Twenty of the 600 injured there were not expected to live. Progresso, a suburb, was reported totally destroyed.

Reports from farm and citrous growing areas show a steadily mounting estimate of damage to crops. In Nade County the loss will be $2,000,000, while the Fort Myers district on the west coast reports crop damage there will be $2,000,000.

Damage in Mobile.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Meagre reports from Mobile to-day indicated that the West Indian hurricane which swept the region yesterday had taken little or no toll of life. Anxiety was felt, however, for a group of exposed fishing towns along the coast and the resort towns in Baldwin County, across Mobile Bay. Estimates of property damage are varying and uncertain until the height of the storm passes and makes a survey of the territory possible.

Storm Turns West

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press).—The tropical storm after reaching the vicinity of Mobile, Ala., has turned west with diminishing intensity, the Weather Bureau reports.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

To-day's talismanic stone is the carnelian, symbolic of marital felicity. It was believed by the ancients to have the power of assuring a happy home to the married women who wore it.

The natal stone for to-day, the sapphire, was believed to be especially potent in healing those who suffered from poor eyesight, and in protecting them from all diseases.

White, symbol of purity, is the color to be used to-day. It preserves the harmony of which the pearl and the emerald are the two leading factors.

Pansies, emblem of thoughtfulness and constancy, will exert their influence over the household which they adorn.

CONDITION—Fingernails that are yellow or discolored underneath.

DIAGNOSIS—Often this is the result of bruises, or your nails may be particularly susceptible to stains.

TREATMENT — Wrap your orange stick in cotton and dip it in peroxide of hydrogen. Afterwards there is no objection to using some nail whitener underneath, if you scrub afterwards with soapy water and a nail brush. Nails that have obviously been painted white underneath are not considered the best taste.

Astrologers read this as rather an unfortunate day, since certain adverse aspects are strong in the influence.

It is held to be especially unfavorable for the signing of leases or agreements and it is well to delay the affixing of signatures until a more promising aspect prevails.

Writers and publishers appear to have the augury of a fall season that begins rather unsatisfactorily, but it will progress to a point where great results are apparent.

Turning away from pictures and the theaters people probably will read much more than formerly, for world interests of moment will engage attention.

Politicians should not be active while this configuration prevails, for there may be an attitude of suspicion and criticism on the part of the public.

This is not a propitious day for seeking any sort of employment and all who seek to improve their financial positions should delay effort.

This may not be a favorable rule under which to engage in any sort of lawsuit or controversy.

Mars frowns upon certain negotiations making for war settlements at this time but the seers foretell no lasting difficulties.

There is likely to be a thwarting of initiative under this rule which makes for defeated effort and for this reason it is well to delay the starting of important undertakings.

Criticism of public men is said to be encouraged under this rule of the stars and it will be equally just and unjust, astrologers assert.

Secret organizations will become exceedingly active under this planetary government, it is forecast, and they will gain political power.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(United Press).—Some women are spending so much on the new handbags and pocketbooks that they have little money left for other accessories. And who can blame them?

Pocketbooks have never been so beautiful as they are this season and each costume must have its own harmoniously matched bag to be considered smart. Shapes of handbags vary from large or medium-sized envelopes to flat pouch effects. Bags with long strap handles are not as new or smart as those with short straps or disappearing ones. On many of the pouch bags we find the short strap handle which can be slipped down into the bag when one wishes the handle-less model.

Lizard and reptile skin of all sorts calf's leather, suede, velvet, and even ostrich hide is used in the making of the modern handbag. Black suede is particularly important this year and it is astonishing how many black bags are being sold. Chanel red, jungle green, tan and brown are other good bag colors which come in both suede and glazed leather styles. The large square envelope of suede with the flap outlined in tiny gilt clasps is new and smart. Some smaller envelope shapes are made exactly like envelopes being stitched to represent and envelope.

Velvet bags appeal to those who plan on wearing velvet costumes. Pouch shapes in velvet are not so good this year. The velvet bag may be trimmed in gilt or silver piping and adorned with a gold metal clasp set with brilliants or with a cut-steel clasp. Dull costume shades are those best liked for velvet models. A handsome dressy bag is made entirely of gilt leader in envelope shape. Stenciled effects on undressed leathers are among the novelties with plaid, mottled or modernistic designs on dull backgrounds.

HER OWN WAY A GIRL of TODAY

A REBUKE FOR JOAN

"The great trouble, Joan, that you and all the rest of those who love your brother have made, is that you have not tried to interest him in anything except himself. Everyone about him has made him the center of his little universe and it is a sad little world, as you know. When he found me he found someone who laughed and smiled and it was an entirely new experience for him and it would not be a great wonder if he did not want to keep me with him in the future.

"People would rather smile, my dear, than cry, and I think you have done your brother a great wrong by not making him leave that camp up there in the Adirondacks and come out in the open even if he is lame."

"I expect that's true, my dear Judy, but if you had known our beautiful mother you would understand what a grief it was to her to know that her only son was a cripple."

I shuddered. "Joan Meredith, if John was my brother, my twin brother as he is yours, I would banish from my tongue, indeed I would banish from even my thoughts completely the word 'cripple.'

"If I should ever think of my brother it would be only to affirm that which you as well as I know. He is one of the handsomest men I have ever seen and you should be proud to be his sister. He is going to do some great thing in the world; he cannot help it, for his brain is most wonderful. He will make people forget that he has any lameness."

"Judy, what a loyal little person you are," said Joan. "Everytime I see you I say to myself 'I certainly made no mistake when I asked you to dine with me that night and told you my troubles.' I wonder if you are going to marry that nice Mr. Hathaway? He is head over heels in love with you. I was not so engrossed with my own troubles that night when I went to dinner with you both that I could not see that."

I started to speak. Joan held up her hand. "Wait, Judy, I want to say something more to you. Do you know dear, that today I feel as though our positions were reversed? You know when I first met you you seemed so self-reliant and gave me such splendid advice, but today you seem to be undecided and I want to give you some advice."

I broke in. "Joan, you may think you can advise me, but did you ever realize that no one in this world ever takes advice?"

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

YAKUMO KOIZUMI (LAFCADIO HEARN) AND AN UNKNOWN

(By The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

The celebrated American writer, Lafcadio Hearn, did something that no other white man whose life is worth recording, has done: He renounced his own citizenship and became a Japanese subject.

Hearn was born in the Ionian Islands of an Irish father and Greek mother. His peculiar temperament took him on extensive travels and though he worked as a journalist in Cincinnati and New Orleans, he never found his true inspiration until he came to Japan and began to express in the English language the ideals of that land, its art, mythology and philosophy. He married in Japan a girl of high Samurai rank named Setsu Koizumi and was appointed lecturer in English at the Imperial University. Afraid that his wife, and the children that would come of the union, would lose their Japanese citizenship through marriage to an American, Hearn became a Japanese citizen and adopted the name of his wife's family.

This letter was written by Hearn to a lady in America who is unnamed, a year before his marriage to Setsu.

". . . after looking at your portrait I must tell you how sweet and infinitely good you can be and how much I like you, and I like you—or at least some of those many who are one in you. I might say love you—as we love the dead (the dead who still sleep in our lives) . . .

". . . I like you best in the simple dark dress, when I can forget everything except all the souls of you. Turn by turn one or other floats up from the depths within and rushes to your face and transfigures you. . . .

". . . I do not think you really know how sacred you are: and yet you ought to know: it is because you do not know what is in you, who are in you that you say such strange, material things. And you yourself, by being, utterly contradict them all."

In another letter to the same person, Hearn signs himself,

"Always, and in all things, yours,

"Lafcadio Hearn."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

JUNE

The lovely name of June is as suggestively sweet and fragrant as the month which it honors. Of course, there are two explanations of the existence of June and its fortunate possessor may take her choice.

For those who prefer to establish a direct classical connection, June may be said to be bestowed in honor of the goddess June, wife of the mighty Zeus father of the gods. Not only was June the feminine ruler of the mythological kingdom on Mount Olympus—and more than often the ruler of Zeus as well—but her splendid physical proportions have set aside as an ideal of feminine womanhood. Her modern namesakes have a standard of beauty almost unattainable.

However appealing the classical legend may be, the simpler explanation for the bestowal of the name to-day points to the sixth month of the year. June is generally given to girls born in the "month of roses," though its adaptability to romance has given it tremendous vogue among the fanciful names.

June is, of course, pure English. It has no derivatives or contractions and no translations into other languages which may be said to preserve its identity. Junius, meaning "of June," is the only masculine form.

The agate is June's talismanic stone. It is said to give its wearer courage, to guard her from danger, and to bring her her heart's desires. Monday is her lucky day and 2 her lucky number. The wild rose is her flower.

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE WINGED HORSE—X — by W. J. ENRIGHT.

THE STORY UP TO NOW

ONCE A POOR LITTLE GIRL NAMED EVELYN LIVED AT THE EDGE OF A FOREST WITH HER MOTHER AND DOMBY, A HORSE TOO OLD TO WORK. ONE DAY THE LITTLE GIRL GOT LOST. A LITTLE OLD WOMAN WITH A HOUSE IN A TREETOP GAVE HER A SILVER KEY THAT UNLOCKED A GREAT TREE. THERE SHE FOUND A BRIDLE. WHEN SHE PUT THIS ON DOMBY HE GREW WINGS AND FLEW AWAY WITH HER THROUGH THE CLOUDS. THERE THEY SAW A KETTLE. IT WAS FULL OF GOLD AND THEY TOOK IT HOME.

THE WINGED HORSE LANDED GENTLY AS A FEATHER JUST OUTSIDE THE STABLE DOOR AND EVELYN SLID SAFELY OFF HIS BACK TO THE GROUND.

HE THEN TROTTED INTO THE BARN, PLACED THE POT OF GOLD IN THE CORNER AND STOOD QUIETLY WAITING FOR EVELYN TO REMOVE THE MAGIC BRIDLE. WHEN THIS WAS DONE A CHANGE BEGAN TO TAKE PLACE IMMEDIATELY AND IN A FEW MOMENTS HE WAS POOR, DEAR OLD DOMBY AGAIN.

SHE KISSED HIM AFFECTIONATELY ON THE NOSE AND THEN RUSHED INTO THE HOUSE TO TELL HER MOTHER OF HER ADVENTURES. SHE FOUND HER WITH HER FACE IN HER HANDS, CRYING. FORGETTING HER GREAT GOOD FORTUNE AND WONDERFUL ADVENTURE SHE THREW HER ARMS AROUND HER MOTHER'S NECK AND ASKED WHAT THE TROUBLE WAS.

"OH," SAID HER MOTHER, "IT IS JUST THAT WE ARE SO POOR AND I FEAR WE WILL HAVE TO SELL DOMBY FOR WHAT LITTLE HE WILL BRING." EVELYN SMILED AND SAID, "NO, MOTHER, WE WILL NEVER HAVE TO DO THAT, FOR JUST COME WITH ME THAT I MAY SHOW YOU SOMETHING!"

DEMPSEY MAY NOT FACE CHARGES UNTIL AFTER CHAMPIONSHIP BOUT

Attorneys for Clements Expected to Give Definite Answer Today.

READY FOR TEST

Tunney in Pink of Condition for Battle With Champ.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Threatened injunction proceedings to stop the Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney heavyweight championship bout did not make their appearance yesterday, but to-day is expected to settle the matter one way or the other. Attorneys representing B. C. Clements, president of the Chicago Coliseum Club, who obtained an injunction in Indiana prohibiting the world's champion from meeting any other boxer before he fights Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, were in consultation most of the day.

They were trying to decide which would be the better method to press Clements' claim that Dempsey broke a contract to fight Wills. One method is to enjoin him, if possible, from fighting Tunney here, and another to bring suit to attach his receipts in the Tunney fight.

Other lawyers who filed actions against Dempsey, notably Arthur H. Sager, counsel for Jack Kearns, who is suing Dempsey to recover money alleged to be due him, are steering clear of any move that would stop the bout. The do not favor "killing the goose that lays the golden egg."

While these matters held legal interest at the scene of the fight, Jack Dempsey at Atlantic City crossed everybody, including his sparring partners, by failing to show up at the dog track for his last public workout.

The world's heavyweight champion contented himself with road work this morning and a little light scuffling with the light punching bags.

Dempsey considers himself ready for his test next Thursday night and feared that any other work might be detrimental rather than helpful. He will do no more boxing unless he decides to slip a round or two with Big Bill Tate, his chief sparring mate, in a strictly private workout.

"If I am defeated, it will be because Dempsey is the better man," declared Gene Tunney, challenger for the heavyweight crown, in a statement issued at his Stroudsburg camp.

With the big event but three days away, Tunney said:

"In accordance with ancient pugilistic custom, I suppose I ought to make a formal statement on the eve of my contest with Jack Dempsey.

"There is little that I can say that I have not already said. I am in the finest condition of my entire ring career and I am confident that this condition, my years of application to the study of boxing and the urge to win the heavyweight championship of the world will carry me to victory over Jack Dempsey Thursday evening.

"I am not foolish enough to say that he has no chance to whip me. I merely state that I think I am in good enough physical and mental to justify a prediction on my part that I wil win."

Tunney, ended his vigorous training period yesterday. He did his final boxing and tomorrow will content himself with light work. The challenger, this afternoon boxed four rounds, two each with Jimmy Delaney and Harold Mays. He seemed at the top of his form and declared himself fit for the fray.

Before entering the training camp for the last time he stepped on the scales, weighing 191¼ pounds in ring togs.

This weight three days before the bout indicated that he will not be below and may scale a bit above the 186 pounds stripped he had set as a tentative fighting weight.

CARDS RAISED TWO GAMES IN PENNANT RACE

BRILLIANT FIELDING

Bush Has Seven Strikeouts in Opening Game With Phillies.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Boston boosted the chances of St. Louis in the National League pennant struggle yesterday by defeating Cincinnati in both games of a doubleheader at Boston, 4 to 3 and 3 to 0, while the Cardinals were idle. St. Louis thus gained a two-game advantage of the Reds.

Bob Smith was the hero of the second game. His single in the fifth drove in the first run after Brown had doubled off Luque. A home run drive by Welsh in the sixth went over Roush's head. Moore's Texas Leaguer, a bunt by Burrus and Bob Smith's triple gave Boston its third and last runs in the seventh.

The Braves fielded brilliantly behind their pitcher. The outstanding defensive play was Welsh's catch of Pipp's short drive to right in the sixth and his throw to Burrus at first, which doubled up Roush and ended the inning before Walker, who had reached thrid, could cross the plate.

In the first game Rixey held the Braves to five hits, but a muff by Zitzmann, of High's drive to left field, in the eighth with two out and two on bases let in two Boston runs. High knocked out a home run in the second inning.

Pittsburgh won the opening of a three-game series with the Phillies yesterday 4 to 0. Joe Bush held Philadelphia to two scattered safeties and struck out seven batters.

Earl Smith hit a home run in the ninth with the bases empty, for the final Pirate tally.

The Chicago Cubs won both games of a double-header here yesterday, 4 to 2, and 2 to 1. Kauffman yielded 11 hits in the opener but steadied at critical periods. In the closing struggle, Guy Bush turned in his fourth successive victory over the Giants. While Barnes alolwed only four hits, the Cubs bunched three of them in the seventh when they scored two runs aided by two errors.

CHANNEL SWIM DEFEATS THREE NEW ASPIRANTS

Two Men and Women Forced to Turn Back Within 24 Hours.

ENDURANCE RECORD

Mona MacLellan Forced to Give Up Within Sight of Shore.

DOVER, England, Sept, 21 (Canadian Press).—Although conquered five times this year, the grim English Channel again has lived up to its long established tradition and turned back three more aspirants who hoped to swim across it. Two men and a woman within the past 24 hours sought to swim from Cape Gris Nez, France, to Dover, England, only to meet defeat. The woman, Miss Mona MacLellen, a physician of Hythe, England, put up the best fight against the turbulent waters, and failed only by a scant half mile. She established a new Channel endurance record for women by remaining in the water 25 hours and 20 minutes.

With Shakespeare Cliff looming in full view and the crowds on the beach ready to cheer their country woman through the last few hundred yards of water, which for a time it seemed certain she would conquer, Miss MacLellen was forced by a suddenly freshening wind to quit.

Miss MacLellen left Cape Gris Nez at 5.32 o'clock Sunday afternoon and swam all night and all day yesterday until 6.52 p.m.

When forced to yield to the entreaties of her friends that she be taken from the waves that were buffeting and punishing her exhausted body, Miss MacLellen was within hailing distance of the shores of her homeland and almost grasping all the honors which England is ready to shower on the first of her womenfolk to follow up the conquests of Gertrude Ederle and Mrs. Clemington Corson.

Only the 26 hour and 50 minutes swim of Henry Sullivan is longer than that of Miss MacLellen, while Miss Clair Belle Barrett's attempt which covered 21 hours and 45 minutes is the nearest approached among the women.

Horace Carey, also of Hythe, a bus driver, and a swimmer in his spare moments, started with Miss MacLellen, but was unable to maintain the sharp pace that she set. He was outdistanced after five hours swimming Sunday night and was hauled aboard the accompanying boat. Although most of his time is spent driving a bus, he is a Channel swimming addict. He worked until 10.30 o'clock Sunday morning and then started to swim that same night.

Colonel Bernard C. Freyberg, British war veteran, also once came within 600 yards of swimming the Channel, failed yesterday. He started from Cape Gris Nez at 5.30 o'clock yesterday morning, but was forced to abandon his effort in the afternoon. It was his second attempt to swim the Channel this year.

Miss MacLellen used a back stroke most of the time, varying with short spells of the breast stroke.

BRIGHTON WINS FIRST OF SERIES

Beats Campbellford 5-3 in Game for Clarke Cup.

AT TRENT TOWN

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 21. — Brighton won the first of home-and-home games in the elimination series for the Clarke Cup, defeating Campbellford here on Friday, 5 to 3.

It was the local's first game this year, and behind the clever pitching of Ibey, they gave the lakeshore outfit a real battle all the way. The youthful hurler held the Greys hitless for seven innings. He weakened somewhat in the eighth, and after the first two batters got on through errors, Scriber, who had been a strike-out victim in his former appearances at bat, cut a clean single between second and short, scoring two runs, and going to second on the throw to the plate. Scriber stole third, and after Pickle fanned, came home when Cameron worked the squeeze play with a perfect bunt.

Brighton got a run in the first innings without the semblance of a hit, and added another in the ninth on a pair of singles, a stolen base, and a caught foul fly.

It was a pitchers' battle all the way, with the sensational High School youngster having a shade the better of his more experienced rival. Ibey sent eleven of the Greys back to the bench by the strike-out route, while Langdon was credited with ten. Langdon was aided by some bad guessing on the part of Umpire Smith behind the bat, four of the locals having third ones called that were plainly not strikes. Each pitcher walked two batters, and Langdon hit two.

The Greys got four hits off Ibey, while the locals touched Langdon for five. Had Ibey's support not wavered at critical moments, the young pitcher would probably have emerged on the winning side. He will likely be sent back at the Greys again in Brighton on Thursday, and Charlie Davidson and his athletes have hopes of making a third game necessary.

CHICAGO CUTS YANKEE LEAD TO THREE GAMES

Takes Both Ends of Double-Header, While Boston Defeats Indians.

ATTACK IN SEVENTH

New York Overcome by Early Leads in Both Games.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Chicago cut down New York's lead over Cleveland to three games yesterday by taking both games of a doubleheader, 7 to 3 and 5 to 3, while the Indians lost their game to Boston. Chicago launched a vicious attack in the seventh inning of the first game and took a commanding lead which New York was unable to overcome because of Faber's steady pitching.

Meusel's error coupled with Jones' wildness and some daring base running by Mostil and Hunnifield put Chicago out in front in the second game and they bunched their hits thereafter to win. The league leaders played an uphill game and they bunched their hits thereafter to win. The league leaders played an uphill game and threatened in the ninth inning when Blakenship weakened. Connally came to the rescue, striking out Reuther, pinch hitter and disposing of Severeid and Paschal, another pinch hitter, with only one runner scoring.

Cleveland's chances to win the American League pennant practically went glimmering, however, when the tailend Boston team defeated them 3 to 2, in 10 innings. Wingfield at Cleveland held Cleveland down to seven hits and did not allow a run until the sixth. A home run by Speaker tied the score in the ninth. In the 10th Tobin led off with an infield single, took second on Jacobson's sacrifice, and third on Regan's out. As Rosenthal came up to bat for Shaner, Speaker replaced Hudlin with Shaute, whereupon Bratche batted instead of Rosenthal and singled to left, scoring Tobin and the winning run. The Washington Senators slugged freely today and won both games of a doubleheader from the Browns at St. Louis, 7-4, and 8 to 2.

In the first game home runs by J. Harris in the fourth and fifth innings accounted for three scores. Five Brown errors helped the visitors win.

The Senators touched Ballou and Davis for 17 safeties in the second game. Judge got two doubles and a home run.

After taking the first game, 8 to 0, behind Rommel's airtight pitching, Philadelphia dropped the second, 5 to 2, when the Tiger pitchers proved too much for the visitors. Rommell alolwed only two hits in the first game.

ELEPHANT CAUGHT AFTER LONG CHASE

Circus Animal Had Been Roaming Forests For Six Weeks.

CRANBROOK, B. C., Sept. 19. Canadian Press. — After weeks of wild escapades, travelling over mountain trails and forest pathways, "Charley Ed," sheik of the circus elephants, who along with four companions escaped from his keepers, has been captured, none the worse for his mad career, which put fear into the natives of the Cranbrook district, and hundreds of men, including Indian guides and animal trainers, on his path.

Charley, who had been at large for about six weeks, did not give in without a fight, and before he had been firmly secured with heavy iron shackles, two men had been seriously injured. The truant pachyderm was captured five miles from here.

The bark of a little dog which was watching the proceedings while the circus was entraining, set the elephants on the wild stampede into the mountainous country. Two were quickly captured but the remaining three wandered afar, and with the cunning of the big beasts, evaded the trainers, and hunters.

After a hard and arduous search two of the animals were apprehended, but "Myrtle," Charley's partner, was in a weakened condition, and died. Her skull and forefoot are now on the way to Edmonton, where they will be kept with the other relics in the museum of the University of Alberta.

ORE ON ROAD

Bonar Law Finds It an Improvement Over Crushed Rock.

BONAR LAW, Sept. 21.—A marked improvement has been made on the gravel road as the road has been covered with porcupine ore purchase at the Porcupine Rock Quarry near Havelock. About four car loads have already been used. This road has always been repaired with crushed rock which wears out quite fast, owing to the large amount of traffic.

This new ore makes a perfect road quite free from dust or mud and is very satisfactory.

300 CATHOLICS UNDER ARREST

Seized at Meeting in Home of Priest in Mexico City.

BISHOP HELD.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 21.—Three hundred Catholics were arrested in a body here on Sunday night, charged with making seditious propaganda.

Bishop Juan Navarrete of Sonora also was taken into custody on suspicion of having incited the Yaqui uprising in that state a week ago. He will be turned over to the Federal prosecutor.

Other arrests of Catholics are expected. The police allege a plot was being hatched to overthrow the Government, and drastic reprisals are looked for.

A heavy military escort took the prisoners to police headquarters. As they passed through the Avenue Madero, the principal thoroughfare of the capital, the captives shouted, "Viva Chisto Rey," and sang the Te Deum.

Nearly 200 women were taken on Sunday night in a raid on a Catholic gathering. Scores of heavily armed police, both on foot and mounted, surrounded the house of Padre Genaro Mendez, in the Calle de Cinco de Febrero, half a dozen blocks from the National palace. At a signal, they rushed into the house, and the Catholics, in a panic, dashed for the doors. They found the exits barred by rifles.

A tremendous crowd assembled in front of the priest's house. The demonstration became so threatening that the fire department was called on and several streams of water speedily dispersed the crowd.

The Catholics found in the house declared that they were holding a peaceful meeting.

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 21. — (Canadian Press).—Jack Dempsey, in an affidavit presented in Chancery Court to-day, answering Jack Kearns' suit forcing him into a receivership, charged his former manager with stealing $500,000, and alleged that Kearns at one time was imprisoned for criminal practices. Dempsey gave these as his reasons for discharging Kearns. The case was continued for two weeks.

LADIES' MEETING.

Mrs. Adjutant Ham Gives Address in S. A. Temple.

The second of a series of special meetings for women was conducted by Mrs. Adjutant Frank Ham, in the Temple, Simcoe Street, last night.

Included in the programme were items of interest by several of the ladies present. A quartette of female voices composed of Mrs. M. Shagett, Mrs. Naish, Misses Gilmour and Payton sank most acceptably. Mrs. George Thomas gave a vocal solo, and Mrs. J. J. Cunningham a recitation.

Mrs. Adjutant Ham gave an inspiring address suited to the occasion, and her message was well received by the one hundred ladies present. These gatherings promise to become of great value to the community and the announcement for the next of the series will be looked forward to with eagerness.

BOARD OF HEALTH HEAR COMPLAINTS

Will Fix Dumping Ground—Asks Inspection of Slaughter Houses.

The Board of Health met this morning, with Alderman W. J. Hancock in the chair, and Mayor W. T. Holloway, Dr. J. M. O'Brien and Messrs. J. J. Turner and S. A. Armstrong, city clerk, in attendance.

A resolution was passed, instructing the Medical Officer of Health to notify several milk dealers in the city that their milk had, on examination, been found to contain a high bacterial content, and that they had to take measures to remedy this condition.

A letter was read from Dr. N. H. Sutton, District Medical Officer of Health, stating that the city's dumping ground was insanitary and a nuisance. The Board directed that Dr. Sutton be advised that steps had been taken to remove the cause of complaint.

Several residents and property owners were directed to have sanitary conveniences installed in their premises.

The Sanitary Inspector was instructed to inspect the plant of the Canadian Packing Company to find if refuse from the plant was entering the river. He was asked to report his findings to the Board.

Dr. Sutton was requested to inspect the slaughter-houses in the district with the object of having the owners comply with the Provincial regulation.

OFFICIALS EXPECT LARGE ATTENDANCE

Hotel Rooms Scarce and Scalpers Active in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press).—Officials concerned with the Dempsey-Tunney heavyweight championship battle on Thursday night estimate that 132,000 people will witness the struggle. The gate, it is expected, will exceed by $46,000 the highest previous attendance record for boxing.

While most expert observers are picking Jack Dempsey to defeat Gene Tunney the former Marine has many supporters. The scarcity of hotel accommodation for the night of the battle has developed a variety of scalpers seldom seen in Philadelphia. They are scalpers of room reservations and they were said to be doing a thriving business, despite the efforts of hotel proprietors to forestall them. Nearly every hotel in town is sold out for Thursday night; more than 60,000 reservations having been made.

Photographs will be taken at the rate of 400 a minute by a new camera, if it comes up to its inventor's claims.

THEATRE

AT THE REGENT

LUBITSCH'S GENIUS ACHIEVES MIRACLE OF CINEMATIC ART.

Charlston Dance in "So This Is Paris" Like a Futuristic Rhapsody.

Lubitsch's "So This is Paris," the Warner feature film which came to the REGENT Theatre yesterday, contains one of the most marvellous achievements of modern photography. The sequence is that of the swirling, glittering, joy-mad shoots of Midnight Revels in Paris. The way in which the camera had caught the pulsing, dissolving pandemonium of the scene is a miracle of Lubitsch's genius. It is like an animated futuristic painting.

This however, is but one of the many unusual and delightful features of "So This Is Paris." The picture is a clever adaptation of 'Reveillon' 'that merriest and spiciest of all French farces. Furthermore it was directed by Ernest Lubitsch, which fact alone, places any film among the masterpieces. Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller appear at their best, which is very good, and parts of prominence are interpreted by Lilyan Tashman and Andre Beranger.

The picture is sophisticated, swift-moving, mirthful in the extreme and gloriously human. "So This Is Paris" is too good to miss. It is almost too good to be true. You'll agree, after seeing it.

AT THE CAPITOL.

BEBE DANIELS IN "THE PALM BEACH GIRL"

"The Palm Beach Girl," the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for the first half of this week, is an outstanding example of the manner in which advertising posters of an attraction can belie the production itself. Unless the picture has been censored severely for local consumption, and it doesn't bear any traces of such scissoring, the poster sheets are absolutely misleading. There is no sketchily-clad bathing beauty in the picture, there is no aquaplaning and there is nothing suggestive. Just why such advertising should be done is a problem.

"The Palm Beach Girl" is an exceedingly entertaining picture, starring Bebe Daniels in a new role, that of a gawky girl from Iowa who descends on a Florida resort, and proceeds to ball up everything she takes a hand in. Owing to an unfortunate dose of coal-dust, she gets the attention of a black porter on her arrival at the station, and comes to the hotel by way of the "Jim Crow" 'bus, set apart for colored people. The young man set aside for the new arrival by her kindly Aunt Jerry sees her first in this condition, and has to put up later with a lot of her foolishness, when she messes things up considerably for him. Owing to fear of the water she makes a terrible fiasco of a fishing trip, and then gets tangled up with a party of bootleggers, who confiscate her friend's speed boat. The same boat is entered in a race in which the owner, Jack Trotter, has most of his fortune staked, but the girl again messes matters, and finally is compelled to race the boat herself, as her admirer is quarantined in a supposedly mump-infested house. The way in which she races the powerful speed boat and the accidents which befall her, are ridiculous in the extreme, and add the final zippy touch to a picture that goes with a whiz from start to finish.

The short reels and comedy, the latter a Bobby Vernon affair, in "Page Me," are exceptionally good, particularly the colored views of Sweden which are shown in the "Hodge Podge" section.

The Capitol orchestra is starting the season in splendid style. Even the minor sections of the short reels receive appropriate treatment at their hands, in music suited admirably to the incidents portrayed. — Jeanette.

The funeral of the late Linda Helm, widow of the late Thomas Bradburn, who died at her home, 250 St. Clair Avenue, East, Toronto, took place yesterday from the residence of her son, W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.

Mrs. Bradburn was one of the oldest residents of Peterborough and was loved by all.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. S. D. Robinson of Hamilton and Mrs. Spry, of Los Angeles; also two sons, W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., of Peterborough, and R. H. Bradburn, of Los Angeles.

WEDDING BELLS.

HOPKINS—WOODGATE.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place Saturday afternoon in St. John's Church, when the Rev. Dr. Blagrave united in marriage Dorothy Woodgate, daughter of Mrs. and the late Mr. Woodgate, 657 Reid St., and Cyril D. Hopkins, son of Mrs. Hopkins, 492 Murray street.

The bride who entered the church on the arm of her brother, W. Woodgate, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mr. F. Mann, looked lovely in a gown of peach georgette, with hat, shoes and hose to match, and carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses and lily of the valley. Her bridesmaid, Miss Grace Woodgate, wore a gown of powder-blue georgette and hat to match and carried a bouquet of roses and maiden-hair fern. Miss Alma Story, dressed in pink and carrying a basket of roses, made a pretty little flower girl, and Master Albert Woodgate, nephew of the bride, acted as page boy. The bridegroom was supported by Mr. L. Smith of Toronto.

The bride and groom, after a buffet luncheon at the home of the bride's mother, left for Toronto. They will return to Peterboro for a few days before leaving for their future home in Cleveland, Ohio. Numbers of beautiful presents testified to the esteem of a large circle of friends.

PRATT—HICKEY.

St. Peter's Cathedral was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday morning, September 14, when Violet Hickey, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hickey of 500 Murray Street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Leonard Pratt of Orillia.

The bride was attended by Miss Chic Godfrey of this city, and the groom was supported by Mr. Joe Hynes of Orillia.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. and Mrs. Pratt motored to Buffalo, Rochester and Cleveland. On their return they will reside in Orillia.

NEW ESTIMATE 400 FATALITES

Five Thousand Injured in Florida Cities By Hurricane.

DAMAGE $50,000,000.

MIAMI, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press).—Four hundred dead and five thousand injured was the estimate placed to-day as the result of Saturday's hurricanes which laid waste a 60-mile stretch of Florida's east coast. Fifty persons are missing.

As out of the way places became accessible, more injured refugees were found, and more bodies located. The monetary damage also was increased. Actual damage to homes and business buildings was estimated at nearly $50,000,000, but many held that the value of the millions of priceless palms and pines which were uprooted or cut to the ground would double the damage estimate.

THE WEATHER.

Those who have been lamenting that our summer, which is now drawing to a close, has been so short, may be surprised to learn that it is longer than usual. Ordinarily, summer ends on September 21st (to-day), but this year it lasts until September 23rd at 2.27 p.m., when autumn begins and continues until December 22nd, at 9.34 a.m. That the seasons vary from year to year is a fact of generally known but can easily be proved by consulting any almanac worthy of the name. Temperature this morning, 40 degrees. Some white frost again seen.—W. P.

BUYING OF MOTOR LADDER TRUCK IS LAID OVER FOR NEXT MEETING; ALDERMEN TO STUDY REPORTS

Matter of Choosing Machine Not Settled at Special Meeting.

BROACHED IN JUNE.

Centre Street Bridge Left To Alderman Fife After Much Discussion.

Purchase of a motor driven ladder truck, which has been under consideration by the City Council since the end of June, was further postponed at last night's special meeting. The clause of the report of the Fire, Water, and Light Committee recommending the purchase of a General Motors apparatus for $6,700 was struck out, and the Fire Chief will prepare another report on the tenders and specifications in order that the Aldermen may come to a decision at their next meeting.

Representatives of three firms, The Godfredson Co., the Reo Co., and the General Motors Co., were present and spoke on the good points of their own particular makes. Alderman Turner, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, on presenting the report of his committee, moved that the item be struck out for discussion later. When it came up he reviewed the steps already taken by the committee.

Mayor Holloway said, after the representatives of the three firms had spoken, that it was necessary to select what was to the city's greatest advantage. He advised against making a decision too quickly and thought that the matter should be left to the next meeting. Alderman Meyers said that he, too, was not prepared to give his decision.

Alderman MacDonald asked if the report prepared by the Chief had not been sent to all the Aldermen, and was assured that it had. Alderman Fife said that other machines had been bought on the recommendation of somebody who knew about such things, and that this could be done in the same way. Alderman MacDonald added that the matter had been under consideration since July and that if the Council could not decide now it would not be able to decide two months hence. He wanted to know where the $700.00 difference came in in the prices.

Alderman Greene moved that in view of the difference between the two prices, the fact that some of the aldermen had not received the report, and that two members of the Council were absent, the matter should be left over until the October meeting. (October 4). Alderman Hancock seconded the motion which carried, Aldermen Phelan, Turner, and Fife dissenting. Alderman Phelan asked what would be gained by the delay, and Alderman Turner moved that the chief prepare a new report, which brought from Alderman Fife the question, "Will we be more intelligent after reading the specifications?"

Centre Street Bridge.

"We could have built the thing ourselves in less time than we have spent in discussing it," said Alderman Greene after the question of the Centre street bridge had been threshed out again with the net result that Alderman Fife was confirmed in the "power to act" given him two weeks ago. Three residents of that street appeared to back up a petition signed by all the residents with regard to provision for pedestrian traffic along the street. Their claim was that they had had a wooden bridge across the creek right in line with the path until the new culvert was built, when they had been forced to walk up the road and cross the creek with the vehicular traffic. Their petition asked for the rebuilding of their foot bridge but they expressed themselves as satisfied with any proposal that would keep them from walking on the road or walking into the ditch in the dark.

Considerable time was spent in discussing the matter, with several

PEACH MOTHS ARE PREVALENT

MUCH FEARED.

HAMILTON, Sept. 22.—Dreaded by orchardists, the peach moth, it was stated yesterday, has made its appearance in many orchards in the Niagara Peninsula, and appears to have become prevalent in several localities since Sunday. J. E. Jarvis, fruit inspector, of Burlington, and C. Burgess, a grower, of Grimsby, showed specimens of the moth yesterday, and said that as many as 15 moths were found on one peach.

Attacks Fruit on Stands.

The moth is light brown in color and about half an inch in size. It punctures the peach and causes rapid decay of the fruit, it was said. Mr. Jarvis said that he saw no sign of the moth when he looked at his peach trees on Sunday. Growers in other localities report having found the moth. The moth was even found attacking fruit in baskets at stands along the Queenston Highway, growers said.

Heavy losses are feared by the growers, especially in Elberta peaches, as these are said to be just ripening. Growers report that there is no known spray or fungicide which will effectively eradicate the pest. The only successful method of checking its ravages is to burn the trees affected, growers state. They believe that the moth has been carried into the Niagara Peninsula by imported nursery stock or containers formerly used for peaches.

Comes From United States.

The peach moth is supposed to have been brought into Canada from the United States, where it has been responsible for serious ravages, particularly in Georgia. With a view to excluding it from the country, the Dominion Government some time ago placed an embargo upon the importation of any peaches from States east of the Mississippi River.

Despite precautions, it was stated, early this spring one or two were found. Known methods of control were said to be expensive, although the Federal Department of Agriculture has been working on means of extermination for some years.

Women's Clothes So Scant Ragman Quits the Business

MAMARONECK, N.Y., Sept. 22.—Isadore Kretzbaum, a ragman of this village, who for the last forty years has travelled with horse and cart from house to house throughout Westchester County, buying rags, papers and old clothes, announced the other day that he had retired from business.

Pressed for his reasons, Kretzbaum said: "They don't wear enough clothes, these women, and men use their white shirts to polish their automobiles. This means less rags, and we have to go to Europe for them. The demand of paper manufacturers is so great that it can be supplied in in no other way."

The ragman added that when bustles and petticoats were popular and before the automobile required all the old shirts for cleaning rags, he had acquired enough money so that now he could quit.

FINAL MEETING OF TORY CABINET SET FOR TO-DAY

Expected Meighen Will Hand in Official Resignation on Friday.

PORTFOLIOS OPEN.

Majority of Ministers Will Be Chosen From Former Government.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 22. —(Canadian Press). — Cabinet making continues here with Mr. Mackenzie King seeing former ministers, prospective ministers and others at Laurier house.

At the same time, the members of the retiring cabinet are engaged in preparing for their departure which is to take place on Thursday. What will probably be the final meeting of the present cabinet is set for today and Mr. Meighen will probably wait upon His Excellency the following day.

There is still a good deal of conjecture about the portfolios of Public Works, Customs, National Defence, Post Office, and Immigration The others will probably all be filled by the Ministers in the last King Government who adminstered them, with the exception of Trade and Commerce. For this portfolio, James Malcolm, of North Bruce, seems to be the probable choice.

The name of M. D. Euler, member-elect for North Waterloo, is now mentioned in connection with the Customs Department. Mr. Euler has been in Ottawa for some days and will probably confer with Mr. King to-day. He has been mentioned as Cabinet material on previous occasions when Mr. King was engaged in selecting his Ministers. Robert Forke has returned to Winnipeg, and it is now suggested that he carries with him an invitation to enter the cabinet possibly as Minister of Immigration. He goes home, it is rumoured, to consult his fellow Liberal-Progressives as to what course he should pursue.

Col. J. L. Watson, of Halifax, is considerd possiblity for the Department of National Defence, formerly administered by another Nova Scotian, Hon. E. M. Macdonald. Hon. Lucien Cannon, former Solicitor-General, may be the new Post-Master General. Hon. P. J. Veniot is regarded as a likely selection for the New Brunswick representative, but whether he will lenter with or without portfolio remains to be seen.

At least a part of the new Government will read as follows:—Minister of Finance, Hon. J. A. Robb; Minister of Justice, Hon. Ernest Lapointe; Minister of the Interior, Hon. Charles Stewart; Minister of Marine, Hon. P. J. Gardin; Minister of Labour, Hon. J. C. Elliott, Hon. C. A. Dunning will probably take over Railways again, Hon. M. R. Motherwell is the likely choice as Minister of Agriculture, and James Malcolm seems to be the probability for Trade and Commerce.

There will be a number of Ministers without portfolio.

MISSISSIPPI STATES SUFFER HEAVY DAMAGE BEFORE STORM FINALLY EXPENDS ITS FORCE

Three Children Drowned in Southern Alabama—Crops Laid Low.

LOSS IN MILLIONS.

Death List Increases as the Work Proceeds at Miami.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—Residents of North-West Florida and the southern portions of Alabama and Mississippi to-day renewed their efforts to improve communication facilities and make other repairs necessitated by the West Indian hurricane which roared inland Monday from the Gulf of Mexico. Three deaths and several million dollars worth of damage were attributed to the storm in that territory after it had spent its force many miles from the coast.

Pensacola and Mobile suffered greater losses to property than other cities in the Gulf section. Crops were laid low over a wide area. Three children were drowned in Baldwin County, Alabama.

More than $24,000,000 will be required to replace the property destroyed in Pensacola by winds which at times attained a velocity of 120 miles an hour. Several bridges were washed away, roofs were lifted from buildings and some of the ships anchored in the harbor were sunk.

The naval air station situated near Pensacola was hard hit. Many aeroplanes were placed out of commission and several structures within the reservation were partially demolished.

Damage in Mobile was expected to exceed $1,000,000. Many homes and some business buildings there were unroofed and several houses demolished.

Death List Lengthens.

MIAMI, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press). — As the search for additional victims and care for the injured and homeless went on to-day along Florida's storm devastated lower east coast, late reports from all sections of the hurricane area showed a death toll of more than 400, a missing list of 150, more than 5,000 injured and 50,000 homeless.

Varying estimates from the 60-mile coastal area in the path of the gale placed property damage between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000.

Rescue and relief workers believe a complete search of the mass of tangled wreckage in the score or more of stricken towns and cities will swell the death total to more than 700.

The death list at Miami alone was expected to reach 250 this morning as additional bodies were given up by the waters of Biscayne Bay. More than 3,000 injured have been given medical attention by hospitals and Red Cross workers. Twenty-two persons were reported dead at Miami Beach.

The missing list of 70 at Hollywood was expected to increase to forty known dead as the back country, where many are believed to have fled at the approach of the storm, is thoroughly searched for possible casualties.

The death list at Fort Lauderdale remains at eleven, and sixty-eight bodies have been located at Moorehaven.

Late reports from Pensacola, on the west coast, where the hurricane struck with waning force as it passed inland, said some lives were lost with property damage estimated at $2,000,000. Many boats are reported beached and the town was cut off from communication owing to severed telephone and telegraph lines.

Seventy-four persons were arrested in Miami for looting stores and other places of business destroyed by the storm.

Virtually the whole of the devastated area presents a scene of destruction beyond telling. Parts of automobiles, limbs and trunks of huge trees, roofs, telephone poles, glass and wreckage were strewn through the streets by the high winds, while the inrushing waters of the Gulf Stream cast scores of yachts, schooners, steamers and pleasure craft high on the beaches.

Looters Driven Off.

MIAMI BEACH, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—The home of Harvey S. Firestone, tire manufacturer, was the scene of a pitched battle here last night when looters attempted to carry away furnishings. Blue Jackets on guards opened fire, and after several shots had been exchanged, the looters fled.

Expects Heavy Claims.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Sept. 22 (United Press).—Indemnity of approximately $175,000,000 will probably be demanded as the result of the Florida hurricane, Cliff G. Jones of Kansas City, president of the National Association of Insurance Agents, announced here Tuesday. Jones is presiding at the annual convention of his organization.

Destitute Through Gale Walks 60 Miles To Marry

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 22 (United Press).—Out of the Miami storm came at least one romance, it was learned here yesterday. Julia Monroe Bobbst and Francis G. Garrison, both of Miami, lost all their possessions when the hurricane struck. They walked to West Palm Beach, about 60 miles, and were married at the home of the Rev A. G. Lyon. This was the first city they found far enough outside the storm area to have a marriage license bureau in operation.

Famous "Emperor's Carpet" To Be Sold For $500,000

LONDON, Sept. 22. — The famous "Emperor's carpet" which the Shah of Persia gave to Peter the great of Russia, who in turn gave is to Leopold I. of Austria, is now on its way to America, where it will be offered for sale for $500,000.

Accompanied by Victor Behar, a director of the London carpet firm which owns the rug, it left Glasgow Saturday on the steamship California, which is due to arrive in New York on September 26.

It is expected that Mr. Behar will offer the rug to the Metropolitan Museum for exhibition purposes.

While the carpet was in London it was taken to Buckingham Palace at the request of Queen Mary. She expressed the wish that it be kept in England.

Until it was acquired by the London dealers the rug had been in a palace of the Austrian emperors from the time of Leopold I.

CONGRESS VOTES DOWN BRUCE'S SALARY ATTACK

Members Oppose Plan To Cut President's Regular Yearly Salary.

LENGTHY DEBATE.

Proposal Called For $12 Day Rate and Expenses While Employed.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press).—An attempt on the part of John W. Bruce, organizer of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas and Steam Fitters, at yesterday's session of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, now assembled here, to do away with the regular yearly salary for the president of the Congress, ended after much debate in a wholesale endorsement of President Tom Moore.

Only Mr. Bruce himself voted for his motion. In the course of his speech, which also urged that there should be a part-time president at the rate of $12 a day and expenses employed, Mr. Bruce criticized President Moore. But delegate after delegate rose to eulogize the work of the president.

An effort on the part of Delegate Armand to have expunged from the records of Congress the entire matter raised by Delegate Bruce caused much discussion of technicalities, and was defeated, the convention holding that the resolution brought in by Mr. Bruce did not contain slanderous or scurrilous matter.

When the debate commenced President Moore resigned the chair to Vice-President Foster. Mr. Bruce declared that since it had been suggested that delegates speak their minds freely, he felt that the time had come to discuss the trade union movement, especially as it affects the international movement, and the reports submitted showed that in Canada the movement is in tragic circumstances, even though there be some optimists who believed in revival. Due to lack of money, organization work had to be curtailed, and he did not believe in paying a permanent president for work. The British Trades Congress did not have such a practice, he said. The American Federation of Labor had been obliged to economize in employment of paid organizers. Recently, he said, there has been a big organization campaign in Toronto, and the help of the president had not been obtained, yet Mr. Moore had found time to address a luncheon of the Empire Club of that city and "pan" the Canadian Labor Party instead of giving his help where needed.

Delegate J. W. Wilkinson, of Edmonton, Alta., said that never at any time in its history had the Congress a president who enjoyed the respect of the Labor movement, of the general public, and of the governing bodies of Canada more than at present. Mr. Moore had stepped into the position at a particularly troublous time in the history of the movement and also in the history of Canada. He felt that to vote down the resolution meant expressing confidence in the president, whereas to support Delegate Bruce meant disapproval of him.

President Moore said that he did not wish to make the matter a personal one, and felt that if the president had fallen short of his duties it was for the delegates to say so at the proper time during the convention, and that was by electing another president. He felt called upon to correct some misapprehensions which might have arisen due to facts which Delegate Bruce had forgotten. As regards the British Trades Congress and its president, Mr. Moore pointed out that the practice in Britain had been contrary to that on this continent, since in British Labor circles the chief executive was the secretary, whereas in America the president was almost universally the chief executive, and the secretary, when funds and conditions permitted, the second execu-

Northumberland Victor Present When Ballot Boxes Were Opened.

NO RECOUNT THERE.

Less Than 25 Rejected Ballots—Voters' List Longer.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 22. — M. E. Maybee was formally declared yesterday the victor in Northumberland by 391, the aggregate poll having been 8,159 to W. A. Fraser's 7,768.

The ballot boxes were opened Tuesday afternoon by Mr. R. J. Allan, returning officer for the riding, assisted by Mr. A. L. Linton, in the presence of Mr. Maybee and Mr. Fraser's representatives, T. F. Hall, K.C., and R. Maher, both of Cobourg.

"There won't be any demand for recount, at any rate," said Mr. Hall, as he totalled less than 25 rejected ballots. He remarked that the electoral details as laid out and supervised by Mr. Allan had ben exceptionally well executed.

The task of opening the boxes and transferring the envelopes containing the ballots to mail sacks, occupied four and a half tedious hours, and finaly the deputies' statements of the votes cast were tabulated and run through an adding machine. It was nearly 6.30 o'clock when the curtain was dropped on the last scene in the local constituency as the actors and agents in The Herald office gathered up their effects and received Mr. Allan's official statement.

The figures last October were 7,815 for Maybee and 6,665 for Slade, Maybee's majority having been 1,150. This year the voters' list contained 179 more names than in the election of 1925. The results show that the winner improved his count by 244 and Fraser increased the Liberal total by 1,103.

Polled Every Vote

One of the two polling places at Grafton in Haldimand Township recorded every available vote. Either partisanship bites deep in that community or the electors are animated by an unusually keen sense of citizenship and its responsibilities. Perhaps both motives obtain, and the Liberals would probably add that the people of Grafton manifested their intelligence by giving a large Liberal majority.

It was a double poll in the village, every one of the 154 voters on the one list turning in ballots, and at the other poll only one voter was delinquent.

"You mightn't find that duplicated in all Canada," commented Mr. Hall, but less than an hour later polling place No. 7 (Bethel Grove) in Hamilton Township lacked only one vote of the hundred per cent class. It gave Fraser 37 and Maybee 31, and only one voter of the total listed there prevented Bethel from equalling the perfection of the Grafton poll-inb subdivision.

Meyersburg 100 Per Cent.

Mr. Hall's prediction was utterly confuted by the second last ballot box, that from Meyersburg. No. 7 in Seymour Township, which is also entitled to the laurel for the modest brows of the hundred per centers. Meyersburg with 99 on its list, according to the deputy returning officer's attached information, gave 39 votes to Fraser and 60 to Maybee. There may have been here and there in the riding farmers who were too busy, lazy, negligent or indifferent to perform their public duty, but there were none in those categories around Meyersburg.

The Official Returns

The poll of the constituency was as follows:

MINERS HEAR BALDWIN PLAN

Condemn Proposal For District Bargaining, But Didn't Reject It.

LEAVE LOOPHOLE.

LONDON, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—The entire Executive Committee of the British Miners' Federation met Premier Stanley Baldwin and the Cabinet Coal Committee last night and declared that Mr. Baldwin's latest plan to end the coal strike was a complete change of front from the earlier promise to the miners made by Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Although condemning the Premier's proposal that the miners yield on the point of national bargaining with the mine owners, the strikers' representatives did not definitely reject the compromise, but left a loophole open to allow for further negotiations with the Government.

FIERY CROSS BURNED.

Toronto Residents Excited By Blaze on Lawn of House.

TORONTO, Sept. 22. — A fiery cross was burned at 10.30 o'clock last night on the lawn in front of the home of F. Ronald Graham, 88 Wells Hill Avenue. Members of the Ku Klux Klan are suspected of being responsible for the placing of the cross in front of the house, but at a late hour last night no person could be found who had seen any Klansmen in the vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham are at present out of the city.

The cross, about six feet in height and four inches wide, was erected on a pole made from gas piping. It was stuck in the lawn and lighted. The cross was found with cotton wool and other inflammable material which had been soaked in coal oil.

Once lighted the flames spread for many feet on all sides. The reflection was thrown through windows of houses, and caused quite a stir in the community.

Police were called from Markham and London Street Division, and when they arrived the cross had practically burned out. They tore it down, and it was not necessary to call firemen. What was left of the cross was taken to No. 11 Station.

Baby Kittens Frighten Lady From Verandah

That the feminine mind shrinks from felines as well as from their chief victims was demonstrated this morning when the Inspector of the Humane Society received a telephone call from an anxious resident in the north end. The lady appealed to the inspector to visit her house and remove a cat which had made a home for a new litter of kittens on her verandah chair during the night. The lady complained that she could not clean off the verandah on account of the cats.

Inspector Smith responded to the call and routed the invaders.

FRANCE PRODUCES MORE DYE STUFFS

Output of Factories Has Nearly Doubled—Imports Less.

The production of dye stuffs in France has been steadily increasing since 1920 and, according to advices received by the Bankers Trust Company of New York from its French Information Service, the annual report of the Union for promoting this industry (Union des Producteurs et des Consommateurs le developpement de l'industrie des matieres colorantes en France) shows that imports of dye stuffs, which in 1922 totalled 1,707 tons and in 1924, 2,444 tons, aggregated 1,451 tons in 1925. Imports from Germany accounted for 383 tons only; whereas before the war French industry was largely dependent on that country for such products.

The output of French factories has nearly doubled during the last five years, the exact figures being 14,549 tons in 1925 as against 7,365 tons in 1920.

The Concord grape, which succumbs to frost in Florida, is grown successfully in New England.

Minding Own Business His Recipe For Long Life

CAIRO (United Press).— Boulos Benalah, a Copt peasant of the Nile Valley, was born five years before the Battle of Tralfalgar.

His youngest child now is forty-seven, and his eldest daughter is eighty-two years of age. Of his fourteen children, twelve are still alive—a record in this land of high infantile mortality.

His living descendants number seventy, one of whom a youngster of nineteen was heard to say to his mother, "Please, please tell your grandmother to come and speak to her father!"

Boulos was still working in his fields a couple of years ago, but now he thinks he has earned a rest. His recipe for living to a ripe old age is based upon sound philosophy.

"My son," he said, "if you want to live long, take life as it comes, and do not bother about other people. Keep your eyes upon your own proper station in life. Remember God is the best doctor and His medicine is Time. When your mind is weary, exercise your body; when your body is weary, rest. Eat when you are hungry, but never touch alcohol. The best drink is the water of our river Nile."

HEAVY DAMAGE WHEN THE GALE TAKES FINAL TOLL AT PENSACOLA FURY SPENT IN LOWER MISSISSIPPI

Fragmentary Reports From Stricken District Say No Loss of Life.

GULF PORT ESCAPES.

Medical Aid and Food Supplies Being Rushed To Devastated Regions.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 22.—(Associated Press). —Some loss of life and property and crop damage estimated into the millions resulted along the Gulf Coast from the tropical hurricane which veered northwestward from Southern Florida and careened across the western tip of that State and lower Alabama before spending its full force late last night in Southern Mississippi.

Pensacola, which was cut off from communication with the outside world for more than 24 hours after the hurricane, blowing 100 miles an hour, had struck it, did not suffer any loss of life, but there was heavy property damage, according to brief direct communications established late yesterday.

People Escape to Mobile.

A telephone line was repaired to Mobile, and over this a report was sent out telling of the escape of the residents of the city. Previous reports from railway circles had said that there had been some loss of life in Pensacola, and that railway tracks had ben washed out for some distance north of the city. The message described destruction of the railway's depot and other property north of the city, and estimated that it would be two days before trains could get through.

Mobile, the largest of the Gulf cities visited by the hurricane, suffered property damage estimated at several hundred thousand dollars but despatches said there had been no loss of life and no reports of persons seriously injured. Property losses consisted chiefly of unrooted structures and consequent water damage to stocks of goods in business houses and to residences.

Storm Lasts All Day.

Mobile was in the grip of the storm from 5 o'clock Monday morning until midnight Monday night, with the greatest wind velocity at 94 miles an hour. The barometer reading was the lowest in the fifty years of the Weather Bureau Station there. Trees and telephone poles were blown down, making streets impassable and throwing some 3000 telephones in the city out of order. Communication with the outside world also was cut off until this afternoon, when despatches were sent through direct disclosing the extent of the damage.

Surveys are now under way to determine the extent of the damage to small villages along Mobile Bay and in the interior. There were unconfirmed reports of some loss of life at Jackson and Bay Minette, Alabama.

Pascagoula, Miss., suffered heavy damage, but there was no loss of life, Charles Farrar, special agent of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, reported. Property losses, he said, in Jackson County, Miss. would run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars, principally to the pecan crop.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—Having taken an almost unprecedented toll of life and property as it swept across South Florida and the eastern part of the Gulf Coast, the tropical hurricane which came out of the Bahamas last Friday night apparently had spent its fury in lower Mississippi last night before reaching New Orleans. Direct communication with the nearly score of cities and towns in the wake of the storm had been reestablished.

As relief and rescue work went forward in the Florida cities first hit, the list of dead steadily mounted and was expected to continue to do so as workers cleared away the wreckage of home where scores of families were trapped.

Identification of the dead was proceeding slowly and many of those who perished in the worst storm Florida probably ever has felt likely will go to the graves of the unknown.

Early last night the list of the known dead still stood at 388, but rescue workers believed the total would reach 700 in Southern Florida alone. More than 1,500 were more or less seriously injured and the property damage was estimated at anywhere from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000.

Government agencies, relief workers and railroad officials were bending their efforts to get into Pensacola for an assessment of the damage there and to carry relief to the stricken population. Reports coming through told of the wreckage of the station and property of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad and of other property damage.

Press despatches from Mobile early yesterday said that Gulfport had escaped with a property damage of only several hundred thousand dollars and no loss of life. Property loss was caused by the high wind unroofing buildings and the rising waters flooding. The barometer there set a new low record in the fifty years history of the weather bureau. Other Gulf towns escaped the full force of the blast, which veered off into Southern Alabama, where there were unconfirmed reports of loss of life and property, and into Southern Mississippi, where it was dissipated.

Although only forty-eight hours had passed since the hurricane had swept Miami, Hollywood-by-the-Sea, Coral Gables, Fort Lauderdale, Moore Haven and many other Florida towns, the work of rescue and relief was well in hand. Hotels and other buildings, although roofless and windowless were converted into temporary hospitals for the injured.

Many agencies—Federal, State and fraternal—were pooling their efforts in relief work. The American Red Cross alone had raised nearly $1,000,000 to succor the homeless and injured and other agencies were supplying funds for rehabilitation of the devastated regions.

Medical and food supplies were being rushed to the east coast from Chicago, Jacksonville and other cities. Food supplies were going in large quantities, but the West Palm Beach Chapter of the Red Cross sent out an urgent appeal for tents, cots with bedding, oil stoves, clothing, candles, drinking cups, lanterns, camp stools, baby foods, bottled water, blankets and other necessities.

Airplanes carrying anti-tetanus and anti-typhoid serums were rushing to the storm area in the hope that epidemics might be avoided. Through most of the district sanitary conditions were reported as bad, particularly in the inland towns.

FEAR NEW HURRICANE.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Sept. 22. —Fears are entertained here that another hurricane has hit the Bahamas. The local Government and business firms have been endeavoring to get in touch with Nassau, but without success.

Arrangements are being made to send a special steamer to ascertain the situation.

FOUR THOUSAND HOMELESS.

GRAND TURK, Turk's Island, Bahamas, Sept. 22. — (Canadian Press.) —The Government of the dependency of Turks and Caicos Islands yesterday faced the problem of feeding 4,000 persons who are practically homeless, their houses having been demolished by the recent hurricane, and their means of subsistence wiped out. Their crops are destroyed and their small craft used in "coaching" and "sponging" destroyed. This is outside the main settlements of Grand Turk, East Harbor and Salt Cay, where it will require months before the salt industry can again be started, all ponds being flooded with trnches and abutments wiped out.

SWEEPS BAHAMAS.

MIAMI, Florida, September 22. — Canadian Press. — Reports reaching here yesterday indicated that the Islands of Bimini, 135 miles from Nassau in the Bahamas, was devastated by the tropical hurricane of last week which ravished the east coast of Florida. Nassau was not hard hit but felt the effects of the hurricanes, the report said.

The reports that Bimini had suffered severely were confirmed by the crew members of tug boats which arrived here yesterday from that vicinity. They did not attempt to land or check for dead or injured.

Efforts have been made repeatedly to gain information by radio as to the effect of the storm in the Bahamas. Nassau was heard but not clearly. It was learned then, however, that only property damage had resulted there from the winds and the waves.

STATION DESTROYED.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 22.—Canadian Press. —Severe damage to the naval air station at Pensacola during the tropical hurricane, was reported to the navy department last night in a message filed there by passing northeastward over Lake Su the radio station at Algiers, near New Orleans.

AN ALGER TALE FROM REAL LIFE

Rise of Walter S. Dickey To Affluence Has Been Steady.

BORN IN CANADA.

TORONTO, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—From a fifty dollar a year clerk in Toronto to a millionaire in Kansas City, Mo., might easily be the title of a story by some such romancer as Horatio J. Alger, but in reality it describes in a sentence the story of Walter S. Dickey, recently in Toronto on a visit, renewing old acquaintanceships. Some idea of the magnitude of the transactions in which Mr. Dickey deals may be obtained from the fact as reported recently in a publishers' trade journal that he not long ago made a bid of over $11,500,000, of which $9,500,000 was cash, for the Kansas City Star. The offer was not accepted, however. Mr. Dickey's principal enterprises are as a manufacturer of clay products, and in that he has become wealthy.

The leader in the Republican party politics in his state of Missouri, although he has never held public office, Mr. Dickey comes of Liberal Irish-Canadian parentage. His father, Nathaniel Dickey, was a prominent manufacturer of Toronto in the middle years of the last century.

Walter Dickey was the eldest son of a family of eleven. He was born in Toronto in 1862 and went through the Provincial model school. At the age of 15 he started work in Toronto as a clerk, but with his parents moved to the then rapidly developing Western States about fifty years ago.

BUYING OF MOTOR LADDER

motions being made and withdrawn. The Mayor suggested that a long stretch of the street was being kept open for two houses and that the occupants of these could as easily go out at the other end. He said that the aldermen had somewhat lightly passed the task of having the bridge built over to Alderman Fife. Alderman MacDonald said that they had all been asked to go over and decide on the matter but very few had gone, so they had authorized the chairman to do the work.

Alderman Phelan spoke in favor of building the bridge as the people had always had one and its removal was an inconvenience. The Mayor suggested the extension of the culvert as being cheaper than the erection of a wooden bridge and requiring fewer railings. When Alderman MacDonald said that the City Engineer could have suggested that at the last meeting Mr. Parsons said that he had not been present and Alderman Hancock said that the matter might be left to the engineer.

Explaining the method of treating this condition, the City Engineer said that there were other places in the city where there were worse jogs and that if it hadn't been for the discussion in council the matter would have been fixed up before this. He said that extending the culvert would cost $200 and could give no estimate of the cost of the bridge. A suggestion of Alderman Fife that a walk be made along the abutments, with railings, met with favor, and it was finally decided to leave the matter to Alderman Fife as chairman of the Board of Works.

Traffic Regulation.

A whole new by-law, consolidating the rulings of previous traffic by-laws, was passed at last night's meeting. Most of the clauses, being those already in force, such as those regarding the obstruction of entrances and streets, and turning corners, etc., passed without comment. One clause of the suggested by-law, which was forwarded by the Department of Highways, called for all vehicles to carry lights. This was struck out, the aldermen believing that this was a matter for provincial legislation. Parking at corners caused some discussion. The by-law, as passed finally, calls for no parking within thirty feet of an intersection, within fifty feet of an intersection where there are street car tracks, or within eighty feet of a street car stop.

The Hydro buses came in for much of the comment regarding parking at the corners, although it was said that the commission might claim that they were not parking but merely halting long enough to let off passengers. Blocking of traffic when both bus and street car are at one corner was mentioned by several of the aldermen, and also by Fire Chief George Gimblett, who said that the brigade had been delayed by this practice.

Reg. H. Turner headed a deputation from the Peterborough Hockey Association asking for a grant from the city council and suggesting $300.00 as a suitable amount. He was supported by C. S. Cummer and Ed Wright, and they referred to the advertising given by the city by last years' championship team and their hope to bring another title to the city this year. Their request was referred to the finance committee.

Alderman Greene reported that it had been found advisable to leave out the small gate in the memorial entrance to Nichols Park, and that the contractors had been communicated with in regard to altering their prices. He also reported that a tablet for one of the pillars was being prepared.

The condition of the crossing at the corner of King and Park streets was brought up by Alderman Greene, and Alderman Fife assured him that the repair work was being undertaken.

Mayor Holloway reported that ex-Alderman Harry Gainey, chairman of the Suburban Roads Commission, had told him that the commission's solicitor, E. A. Peck, had said that the commission was liable for the ditch along Park street.

The other commissioners, however, had inclined to their engineer's viewpoint that the commission was not liable, so that the Mayor had written to the Highways department for a ruling.

Aldermen Ackerman and Denne were not present.

Fire, Water and Light.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee reported and recommended as follows:

That the Peterborough Utilities Commission be authorized and requested to set up a fund from the surplus they may have this year from the Waterworks Department and sufficient additional from the Waterworks Contingent Account to purchase a pumper to be used by the Fire Department and that if they will do so the pumper be purchased as soon as it can be done.

That the action of the chairman of this committee in having the light conduits on the Smith street bridge repaired, which were injured when work was being done by the Street Department on the bridge, be approved.

That an application from the employees of the Canadian General Electric Company that two or three lights be placed on Park street between their office and Townsend street be referred to the chairman of this committee with power to act.

That requests for light at No. 647 Aylmer street and No. 510 College street be referred to the chairman of this committee to report.

That the Peterborough Utilities Commission be requested to place a light on Benson street at a point designated by the chairman of this committee.

That a letter from the Peterborough Radial Railway asking for a light at Euclid avenue and Armour road be referred to the chairman of this committee to investigate.

That a reply be sent to the Colonial Weaving Company in answer to their request for a hydrant pointing out that there is a hydrant at the rear of their factory one one hundred feet in front of it and one half way down the block.

That the letter from James Ward complaining that he was forced to resign his position as Assistant Chief of the Fire Department be received. This recommendation is made after receiving the explanation of the Chief of the Department.

That a report received from the Northern Electric Company in regard to the fire alarm system be referred to the chairman of this committee, Ald. Cotton, and the Chief of the Fire Department for a report.

That a letter be sent to the companies whose factories have sprinkler systems suggesting the advisability of the companies combining to have an alarm bell and an annunciator connected with their factories installed in the fire hall.

That this committee be given authority to advertise for tenders for a triple combination pumper, hose waggon and chemical tank.

CONGRESS VOTES

tive. In Britain the position or president is honorary; in America, that of an active yearly executive.

As to the Toronto facts, President Moore declared that Delegate Bruce had written to him as to the organization campaign suggesting funds from the Congress, or, failing of this support, help by means of literature. No funds had been available, but some literature had been provided. He, personally, had gone to Toronto, met Delegate Bruce and had been ready to speak at public gatherings, but had not been asked to do so during the four days he had been there, and had not wished to interfere in the arrangements of the committee in charge. As to his address before the Empire Club, and the alleged attack on the Canadian Labor Party, Mr. Moore said that Vice-President Simpson, who is secretary of that body, could confirm what he said. It had happened that the president of the Labor Party had declared that there should be another Labor Congress formed, and that the present Dominion Trades Congress did not represent the workers.

"Who is the president?" came from the audience.

"Jim Macdonald, the Communist, who spoke for the Communist Party," answered Mr. Moore. "I stated at the Empire Club that the Labor Party was still in its infancy, but would get support later on, and then irresponsible statements such as Macdonald had made would not be made."

Vice-President Simpson confirmed the president's statement as to what he had said at the Empire Club.

Mr. Moore went on to say that if his record was not sufficient to warrant the approval of the delegates they could make that view known during the present convention.

P. M. Draper, secretary-treasurer, said he did not pay much attention to the whispers as to himself, and he intended to run as secretary-treasurer of the Congress, irrespective of salary, as long as he was sent there as a delegate, and if any other delegate wanted his job he would have to fight for it, and would not get it.

Tim Buck, of Toronto, Secretary of the Canadian Section of the Trade Union Education League, which has its headquarters in Russia, objected to the Bruce resolution, saying that it was negative, was a step backward. What he wanted was to see a change in the policies of Congress with a president of other views carrying out big work for the workers of Canada. He wanted the president's job built up, not lowered. Mr. Buck said he objected to the fact that Mr. Moore had referred to Jack Macdonald as holding the minor position of president of the Canadian Labor Party instead of mentioning him as the holder of the important position of Secretary of the Communist Party of Canada.

Miss Mary MacNab of Toronto, organizer for the Ladies' Garment Workers, regretted the Bruce resolution, and strongly endorsed President Moore.

Delegate Jos. Gibbons of Toronto, who is a member of the Board of Control of Toronto as well as a leader of the Street Railwaymen of that city, said he was glad that President Moore had gone to the Empire clubs. He had attended that lunshould make the aspirations and ideals of Labor known to such clubs. He had atetnded that luncheon, and believed the president had done more good by his address there than he could have done by talking to a Labor organization. Mr. Gibbons said Canadian Labor was not interested in what was done in British trade union circles as to payments of president. "We are in Canada, and are going to do what should be done in Canada, what is best for Canadians. There was a time when workmen from Britain came here and told us what was done there, but they quickly learned what was best for them here."

Mr. Gibbons added that the Congress was in a better position than it had been previous to the war, and he was proud of the fact that he had been the first man to approach Tom Moore to persuade him to run for president. He was glad of the resolution, since it enabled the delegates to express their views.

Vice-President Simpson said that Labor was fond of condemning the daily or capitalistic press, yet Labor men were always ready to believe inaccurate reports therein affecting their leaders.

LAKEFIELD COUNCIL MAKES FAIR GRANT

Agricultural Society Given $50—Road Raising Discussed.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 22.—The regular meeting of the Village Council was held in the Council Chamber on Monday evening last.

There were present: Councillors Clarke, Kennedy, Robinson and Tedford. On motion, Councillor Kennedy took the chair in the absence of the Reeve.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The following communications were read: Trent Waterways Development Association re advertising; Eastern Ontario Chamber of Commerce re membership; Lakefield Board of Trade re the T.W.D.A. advertising; N. A. Moore re taxes; Workmen's Compensation Board re liability of corporations for employees of contractors; Dr. MacPherson; Peterboro Rotary re proposal of Rotary Club to see that all crippled children in the county receive attention.

Applications were received from Gordon Scriver for building permit and W. W. Leonard to tap the Queen street drain.

Mr. Creasor addressed the Council asking leave for the Canada Cement Company to raise the level of Water street starting from zero at the foot of Queen street to a height of two and a half to three feet opposite the company's dam and then down to zero at Regent street. Mr. N. A. Moore objected to the proposal as it would put his store-house in a hole and make access from the road difficult. The Chairman, after discussion of the matter, requested the parties to get together and try to come to an agreement from which the Council could take action.

Messrs. A. Darling and S. W. Anderson requested a grant for the Agricultural Society. On motion of Councillors Robinson and Tedford, a grant of $50 was made to the society.

Moved by Councillor Robinson, seconded by Councillor Clark, that a permit be granted to Gordon Scriver for building purposes.

FORESTRY LECTURE IS GIVEN AT APSLEY

Films Shown Add To Interest of Audience—Man Injured.

APSLEY, Sept. 22.—A crowd numbering more than 150 attended at St. George's Institute on Saturday evening, the drawing card being a free display of moving pictures with lecture, under the auspices of the Canadian Forestry Association, the subject being "Saving the Forests by Fighting Forest Fires and Re-forestation." Mr. W. A. Higgins, who is in charge of this, one of the nine lecture units which are operating throughout the Dominion in an educational campaign, was introduced to the audience by Rev. C. A. G. Spence, who acted as chairman, and gave an interesting address on the work that is being carried out by the association in saving the forests which, coupled with the magnificent films depicting operations in re-foresting and fighting fires, kept the interest of the audience tuned to a high pitch for over two hours. Mr. Higgins in the present tour has covered over 6,500 miles, and has addressed in the agreegate nearly 20,000 people, in Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie districts.

Henry White, an aged farmer, met with a severe accident on Friday and is confined to his bed as the result. While travelling on horseback over a rough trail to his marsh for the purpose of cutting hay, he was thrown from his horse, his head striking a rock and rendering him unconscious. On recovering his senses, he managed to mount his horse and endeavored to return home, but was too weak to keep his seat. Fortunately, Elijah McKay, who was working on a marsh some distance away, heard his shout and succeeded in finding him and bringing him home, a distance of five miles. Mr. White is in a very weak condition and quite unable to move.

A PUBLICITY MEDIUM.

Civic assistance toward Peterboro's senior hockey team is justified if for no other reason than the amount of worth-while advertising given the city by the team in winning the senior championship of the Province last season, and the prospect that this winter's campaign will find the Peterboro team equally valuable as a medium of publicity.

No one agency has given Peterboro such a prominent place in the public eye during the past two years as has the Peterboro hockey club.

The team in winning the S.P.A. championship and reaching the finals in its first year in the senior ranks, and then capturing the honours in its second season made the name of its home city known wherever hockey is played.

And publicity of that kind is effective.

People like to live in a city that produces championship teams.

Manufacturers like to locate their plants in such cities where their employees will be encouraged to make their homes.

And all in all, a good sporting city is usually a good all-round city, so that the exploits of the Peterboro team have a commercial as well as a sentimental rating.

WILL IT BE MR. ROWELL?

There may not be anything in the report that Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., is to enter the King Ministry as Minister of Customs, but a lot of Canadians of all shades of politics are hoping that there is.

People who are not partizans and who have followed the political issues for themselves and have not accepted the party propaganda as wholly reliable, realize that the cleaning up of the Customs Department is not a job to be entrusted to a light-weight if the work is to be done properly.

The man who undertakes that task must have brains, driving force, determination and absolute honesty and fair-mindedness.

Mr. Rowell would qualify under all these heads, and the announcement that he had consented to accept the customs portfolio would be regarded by the majority of Canadians as proof that the new Government is zealous in carrying out its pledge to the electors that the customs mess would be completely cleaned up.

If Mr. King can secure the services of Mr. Rowell for this task he will have considerably strengthened his position and done much to give the country confidence in his administration.

BETTER EQUIPMENT.

Peterboro's Fire Department will be completely modernized and made much more efficient by reason of the additional apparatus that is being added.

The horse-drawn ladder truck, which could not possibly arrive at the scene of a fire within minutes of the arrival of the motorized equipment, is to be scrapped in favour of a motor ladder truck, making it possible for the department to have all its fire-fighting material promptly on the job when an alarm is sounded.

The probability that the co-operation of the Utilities Commission will provide the department with a triple pumper, long recommended by the Fire Chief, is another most important development.

The all-round value of a pumper is admitted.

It provides the Fire Department with a much better pressure at the hydrant and at the same time relieves the Waterworks Department of the expense and responsibility of increasing the pressure in the mains, saving the latter from the strain that under present conditions they are subject to every time an alarm is sent in—even though the call may be only a false alarm.

The addition of a motor ladder truck and a triple pumper would put Peterboro in the first flight so far as fire-fighting equipment is concerned.

A GOOD VOTE POLLED.

One of the most surprising features of the local election was that in spite of the apathy shown by the voters during the campaign, the total vote fell only 478 short of the vote polled in October, 1925, when the fight was apparently much more vigorous.

West Peterboro, in the face of a contest that was admittedly one of the most tranquil in local history, registered almost 75 per cent. of its total voting strength, a showing that was much more satisfactory than there was any reason for hoping it would be.

The official figures show Mr. Peck with a majority of 2,109, a gain of 146 over his margin in the previous campaign.

True, the victorious candidate polled 166 fewer votes than in 1925—8,934 as against 9,100—but his opponent, Mr. Duffus, failed by 812 votes to attain the total of 7,137 reached by Mr. Gordon in the previous campaign.

The difference is to be explained to some extent by the gain made by the successful candidate in the township of Smith, and by smaller gains elsewhere that more than balanced the bigger Liberal vote in the townships of Douro and Ennismore.

The people of West Peterboro, although they did not talk much about the election, proved their interest in a more important and useful way by turning out to mark their ballots.

LIQUOR ISSUE AGAIN IN ONTARIO?

With the Federal elections just over the people of Ontario are faced with another political campaign in the near future. There are now nine vacant seats in the Provincial Legislature, and unless a general election is held by-elections will be necessary to fill these vacancies. Although the statutory life of the Ontario Legislature will not expire until June, 1928, Premier Ferguson appears to have decided in favor of an appeal to the people.

The chief issue will be again the liquor question. In spite of two plebiscites this issue has never ceased to be of first importance in Provincial politics. In the last election Premier Ferguson kept it as much as possible out of the campaign issues and left the question to popular vote. Following that vote he declared that there would be no more popular vote on this issue and that any changes would be made by the Legislature.

In view of the failure of the 4.4 beer measure last year to placate the decidedly wet element among his party followers, the Conservative leader is faced with a dilemma. If he accedes to their demands, as expected, and comes out on a platform of Government liquor control or some other modification of prohibition, he will lose undoubtedly a great part of his following who are favorable to the continuation of prohibition. He will also stand to lose a great part of the popular support obtained in rural constituencies at the last election.

On the other hand, if Premier Ferguson decides to stand "pat" on the present laws there can be little doubt of open revolt by wet Conservatives, especially among city representatives. Hitherto, he has succeeded in keeping the "wet" group sufficiently under control to avoid impairment of party strength in the Legislature, but he can have little hope of doing so any longer without some concession to their demands.

With such an issue in sight there promises to be a certain amount of liveliness in the Ontario election in spite of the surfeit of politics through two Federal elections within a year.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

ACTION—NOT THEORIES!

Much has been said and written concerning that period between the date of the King Government's retirement and Mr. King's re-acceptance of office a day or so from now. In this interval Mr. Meighen has carried on as Prime Minister, aided by a skeleton Cabinet most of the members of which were busily campaigning up until last Tuesday. Mr. Meighen himself was absent from Ottawa practically all this time, Sir Henry Drayton figuring as Acting Prime Minister.

Liberals have contended from the outset that the Government headed by Mr. Meighen was not a Government at all, inasmuch as it had been defeated in the House and was not properly constituted in the first place. During the period of its life, however, this Government is said to have authorized the expenditure of approximately $60,000,000 for ordinary routine business, this money being secured through the medium of Governor-General's warrants. These warrants, Ottawa says, must now be legalized by Parliament, and there have been suggestions that a warm discussion will ensue when the House meets and the authorizing process is started. According to one source, the legality of all the acts of Mr. Meighen and his Government will be called into question and efforts put forward to make things as uncomfortable as possible for the late administration or near-administration.

If Mr. King and his friends have anything like this in mind they are very badly advised. It would be poor sportsmanship to start with. And secondly it would be a very bad political manoeuvre. Indeed, one finds it difficult to conceive that anything of the kind is contemplated, despite stories to that effect. There may be an important constitutional point involved—probably there is—but the people are not deeply interested in constitutional points and will not relish an expensive discussion in an expensive House of Commons along these lines. Rather they will be expecting the new Government to get down to serious business without further delay. There have been too many delays already. Practical action rather than theoretical discussion is wanted. The customs mess must be cleaned up and other really important questions dealt with. The time has passed for political by-plays.

There is nothing to indicate that Mr. Meighen's tentative Government spent money lavishly or unwisely. The business of the country had to go on. Civil servants' salaries and other necessary expenses had to be met while Conservatives and Liberals were fighting it out for power. Mr. King resigned office after the Governor-General had refused his advice to dissolve Parliament. Mr. Meighen was summoned to form an administration. A few hours later this Government—never acknowledged as such by Mr. King—met defeat in the House. An appeal to the people had to be taken, then, and dissolution was granted. In the meantime someone had to carry on the duties of government, and Mr. Meighen did so. No matter how one may feel on the constitutional issue, no matter how much one may think that the Governor-General erred in declining dissolution to Mr. King, the fact remains that the ordinary routine business of the nation had to be carried on until matters could be settled at the polls. For this reason Mr. King, fresh from victory, will be wise if he says as little as possible about what has happened. The past is interesting, but not nearly as important as the future. The time has come for more action and less words.

Canada is looking for leadership now. Mr. King's golden opportunity is beckoning to him. He has the best wishes of most of the people. The country's eyes are upon him. There is much to be done and he is the one to do it. If he fails to grasp the chance, Canada will look for another man.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The hockey club's application is an indication that winter is in the offing.

This is the period when Ottawa is filled with expectant politicians modestly hoping they will be taken into the Cabinet.

Whether or not Dempsey is beaten in the ring tomorrow night, the champion will at least shine in the box-office department.

There is one thing about it, no member of Mr. Meighen's Cabinet ever has time to get stale.

If old King Static keeps out of the picture more people will follow tomorrow night's heavyweight championship fight than ever before. The radio will bring the details into homes all over the Continent.

Ontario will do its part in the Florida relief fund. Many people from this Province are in the stricken area, and Ontario citizens have made very extensive investments in Florida real estate.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 22. — (Canadian Press). — With foreign bids still below a working basis the export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was again inactive. The only sale made was an add load of Canadian Western barley.

In sympathy with the strength that developed in oat futures in the Winnipeg market a stronger feeling prevailed in the local situation for cash oats and prices were marked up one cent per bushel.

Owing to the renewed strength in the cash wheat situation at Winnipeg, the tone of the local market for Spring wheat grades of flour was stronger and the decline in prices of ten cents per barrel recorded on Monday was recovered. The market was moderately active.

The Winter wheat flour market was without any new feature to note, prices being steady under a fair demand.

An active business was transacted in millfeed and prices were well maintained. A fair trade was done in standard grads of rolled oats and prices ruled firm.

The egg trade continued active and firm. Prices for fresh and storage grades were firmly maintained. The receipts were 3,578 cases.

The undertone to the potato market was firm at the recent advance noted with a fair demand. Sales of car lots of New Brunswick cobblers were made at $1.35 to $1.40 per bag, and Quebec white at $1.25 to $1.30 per bag of ninety pounds, ex-track.

Considerable business was done with English importers in Cheese and the tone of the market was strong. The receipts were 11,440 boxes.

Prices for all qualities of butter were well maintained with a moderate amount of business passing. The receipts were 1,208 packages.

Business in beans was rather quiet but as the offerings were not large prices were unchanged with car lots of choice white hand-picked quoted at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.40 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22. —(Canadian Press). — Wheat prices made a rapid advance yesterday in response to brisk general buying. Scarcity of supplies at Liverpool together with snowfalls delaying the Spring wheat movement both sides of the Canadian boundary did much to stimulate demand. Chicago closing quotations on wheat were strong 2 1-4 to 2 7-8 net higher, corn 1-8 to 5-8 up, oats at 1-4 to 7-8 advance and provisions unchanged to 25 down.

Apparent likelihood of a better outlet for export business in wheat by way of the Gulf of Mexico was talked of on account of high vessel rates being asked from Montreal. Export sales of 500,000 bushels from the Atlantic seaboard were announced and there were lake charters here for 80,000 bushels to Montreal as well as 60,000 bushels to Buffalo.

Corn and oats borrowed strength from wheat. Besides, a cool wave was expected to spread over the middle west to-morrow.

Provisions reflected a down turn in the hog market.

CHICAGO CATTLE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22. —(Canadian Press). — Cattle 16,000; choice weighty steers steady, choice yearlings strong; best yearling 12.00; show yearlings 12.40; best heavies 11.70; other classes steady.

Hogs 25,000; very uneven, most desirable hogs and packing sows steady to 25 lower; bulk 280 to 325 pound butchers 12.25 to 13.35; most strong weight slaughter pigs 11.85 to 12.25; bulk packing sows 10.50 to 11.50.

Sheep, 28,000; closing fairly active fat lambs mostly steady to 15 lower; most sales 25 down; sheep steady; bulk ewes 6.00 to 7.00; best lambs held late around 14.25.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

Sterling demand $4.84 1-8.
Sterling cables $4.84 5-8.

SHOWER IS HELD FOR MISS F. JOBE

People of Bridgenorth Gather in Foresters' Hall For Event.

On Monday evening a shower was held in the Foresters' Hall, Bridgenorth in honor of Miss Frieda Jobe, whose marriage is to take place shortly. It was attended by two hundred or more from the vicinity. The hall was decorated with flowers and streamers for the occasion.

A programme consisting of speeches, songs and recitations was given, Mr. Fred Jopling acting as chairman. An orchestra supplied music during the evening.

Miss Jobe was presented with numerous beautiful and useful gifts, including a remembrance from her Sunday school class. The following address was read by Miss Fern Telford:

To Miss Freda Jobe:

Dear Freda,—We who are gathered here to-night are very pleased to have you as our guest at a social evening which we have planned in your behalf. We feel you have become closely linked to us in our community life, having been intimately and continuously associated with you since your childhood until the present. In your Public school and community career in your church work and especially in your sphere as Sabbath school pupil, teacher, pianist and leader in our concert and pageant work, we have learned to appreciate very much your great worth, ability, willingness and dependability to help in every sphere of usefulness which presented itself to you.

"Fie on him who breaks this tie."

We ask you to kindly accept our little gifts, more from the motive prompting them than from their intrinsic worth.

We wish you God's blessing, unallowed happiness and prosperity, wherever your lot in future may be cast.

Signed on behalf of the community—

James Jopling,
G. D. Mann,
Clayton Telford,
Percy T. Udy,

Miss Jobe thanked her friends for their expression of good will and kind wishes.

Refreshments were served by the ladies and an enjoyable evening was spent by all.

And though he rocked himself to sleep,

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

TO "LET ON

(By The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

"I don't mind telling you this," said a man to his friend, "but don't let on that I told you."

Did he use poor English when he employed the expression, "let on"? The question was raised some years ago by the writer of a letter to a New York newspaper. He said he had been informed that while the words were generally understood, they were considered slang.

"Let on" affords one of those interesting cases of the acceptance of a word or phrase by the common people, while the grammarians and dictionary makers condemn it. If it is slang, it is of respectable age, it dates back at least as far as the year 1725, before some words and phrases now in good standing were born. It is fairly safe to say that if you want to use "let on" you may do so, and be understood generally although Webster's dictionary and other authorities call it slang.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

The political aspirant who blew hot and cold may be replaced by the one who talks wet and dry.

Perhaps the new "Black Bottom" dance originated in Mississippi and perhaps the Chinese eat chop suey.

This "Valencia" is a good song if you can sing through your nose.

While trouble may be only a bubble there are times when bubbles get soap in your eyes.

About the only thing on earth which hasn't changed in the last ten years is restaurant gravy.

Never play poker with a fellow you can't either whip or outrun.

These are the days when the head of the house has bobbed hair.

There are more gluttons than gluttons for punishment.

Our next big holiday is Thanksgiving. Save up a few nickles now so you can be thankful then.

The chances are you would be popular with more people if they were more popular with you.

The younger generation's great fault is it has learned things too readily from the older.

Happiness is easy to attain. All necessary is the ability to enjoy doing the things you dislike.

It's a nice world in which we all act silly at times.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

MEN WILL BE BOYS

Boys will be boys, I know it's true,
For men are boys their whole lives through.
Boys when a spaniel wags it's tail,
Boys when they hear a flapping sail,
Boys when the engine starts to miss,
Boys in a hundred ways like this.
We think them old, we call them men,
But poof! and they are boys again.

Boys will be boys, they ought to be,
And even wiser yet is he
Who loves a dog, who likes a game,
In spite of wealth, in spite of fame.
Oh, this would be a sad old place
If men grew up—but still they race
And romp and run and have their joys.
Thank God for this: men will be boys.

Boys will be boys. I hope that you
And I will never quite get through
Wanting to fool with wheels and rings,
Wanting to fix a thousand things,
Boys when our hearts are young and gay,
Boys when our heads are old and gray,
Boys through the troubles and the tears,
Boys though we live a hundred years!

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

THE MAILMAN

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Mailmen are too little appreciated.

Only when one retires and papers give out the fact that the distance he has walked from door to door would circle the globe several times, or his record is shown in some other spectacular way, is attention called to the faithful, everyday service they render.

A western court recently set a precedent when it handed down a decision in favor of a mailman who had been bitten by a vicious dog while delivering a letter.

Up to that time mailmen had apparently been considered fair game for bull-dogs with open season all the year around.

One reason for having the mail boxes on the porch seemed to be to tempt the mailman up where the dog could bite him.

Yet most mailmen I have met have been cheerful and courteous.

And one cheerful mailman has more opportunity to spread real joy than a hundred humorous columnists.

I remember a hearty welcome from a mailman who brought me my mail for the first time in a new city. His expression of a hope that I would like the city made me feel it must be a fine place to live. A city where even the mailmen are boosters can't be so bad.

A force of enthusiastic boosting mailmen can do more to make visitors feel at home and like a city than any group of a similar size.

Moreover the mailman is a romantic figure.

As he goes on his faithful, unassuming and unnoticed way he is the bearer of more romance than ever packed a stage.

Comedy and tragedy, tears and smiles, love and struggle, are all contained in the leather pouch he carries on his back.

He is the messenger of destiny, for the course of lives often hangs on the reception, or delay, of a single letter.

In bad weather and good, in rain and snow and sleet and blistering sun, mailmen keep up their regular invaluable distribution.

They are a thousand Rowans carrying messages to Garcia—unnoticed.

"His Love Lives On"

"He can't have left her much, you know, because he was only just getting nicely established"—said the friends of Frank's widow when he died, only 31 years of age.

But the family realized the true nobility of Frank's nature, when the solicitor announced that, just the year before, the young man had been foresighted enough to provide through insurance with The London Life, an income of $100 a month for his wife as long as she lives.

The cost, equal to $5.78 a week, was his sacrifice for the wife and children he loved.

The London Life agent has had experience in arranging such policies of protection and will be glad to advise. London Life rates mean lowest net cost.

CAMPBELLFORD FLAGS AT HALF MAST FOR LATE POSTMASTER

Public Tribute To Citizen Who Was Twice Elected To Parliament.

AN ACTIVE LIFE.

Liberals To Celebrate at Cobourg Thursday Night.

(Examiner Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 22.—Flags are flying at half-mast here saluting with the public's sincere affection and respect the memory and the life of the late C. L. Owen, Campbellford's postmaster.

His death Monday evening, after a rather long illness, has touched the citizens with a sense of almost personal loss, and emphasized once more the high place he had held in this community, his fidelity to the people's trust, and his long years of service in positions from the humblest to the highest. His life was rich with variety, so many-sided, that his interests and contacts brought him far more friends than the average man wins, and his fine character held them.

Mr. Owen's public career began on the lower rungs of the municipal ladder in Campbellford. As member of the Board of Education, its chairman, as Councillor, as Reeve, then as Mayor, he ascended in the scale of municipal honors and duties to its heighest place. As Warden of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham he added lustre to a reputation already splendid and spreading far. The gift of fluent speech was his and helped him materially in his upward way. Ripened in municipal experience, he was well equipped for the federal field that unmistakably invited him, and success attended him once more when in 1906 he defeated Major A. A. Mulholland in a bye-election. In the general election of 1908 he carried the riding for the Conservatives, vanquishing Frank L. Webb of Colborne. After his retirement from politics in 1911 he was appointed Post Master here performing his duties early and late, and meeting the public with the same genial spirit, the same kindly smile and the same unflagging willingness to serve the people, in other words to do his duty as of old. And as Post Mas-

INMATES PAID OUTSIDE RATE

New York State Reformatory First To Adopt This Scheme.

FOR WOMEN.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Sept. 22.—(Canadian Press).—The standards of outside industry and wage payments are combined for the first time in an institution for women in the salaries now being paid to women garment workers in the New York States Reformatory for Women at Bedford according to Mrs. Sara Conboy, secretary-treasurer of the United Textile Workers of America.

Speaking to the inmates at Bedford, Mrs. Conboy said: "The garment industry is interested in this experiment, which is operated on the state use basis, because it is a transfer of work formerly done in men's institutions to a woman's institutions where it rightly belongs. Girls trained in the garment industry can find employment upon release. Men cannot, for the industry outside the prison is operated almost entirely by women."

The Bedford's experiment is part of a survey of industries suitable for women prisoners undertaken by the committee on the care and training of delinquent women and girls of the National Committee on prisons and Prison Labor.

GERMAN WOMAN AGREES.

KARLSRUHE, Germany, Sept. 18. — (Associated Press). — Frau Klara Philipp, who succeeded the late Konstantin Fehrenbach, Centrist party leader and fourth Chancellor of the Republic, as the 33rd woman member of the Reichstag, has come to the defence of the much-abused modern girl in Germany, though she has no children of her own.

"Jazz, sports, bobbed hair and 'stream-line' body styles are not making men out of women," said Frau Philipp, who is 49. "Modern girls are more like boys. So are modern men. The spirit of youth rules and runs everything. Women no more than men want to be wall flowers."

FLORIDA GALE HITS PARAGUAY

Kills 150, Several Hundred Injured—Loss Estimated Over Million.

AID BEING RUSHED.

ENCARNACION, Paraguay, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—A hurricane struck this city yesterday, killing about 150 persons, injuring 500 others, and causing damage estimated at a million dollars. The lower part of the city was completely wiped out and a number of boats in the Parana River were capsized.

In the most seriously affected district virtually all the buildings were destroyed, including two banks, two hotels and the customs house. The streets are blocked with debris and trees uprooted by the gale. Much damage has been done to docks.

The power plant collapsed, plunging the city in darkness.

Relief work was hurriedly started notwithstanding the torrential rain and violent gale. Fourteen injured have thus far been removed from the debris. The authorities have taken measures to prevent looting. Medical supplies and foodstuffs have been rushed here from other cities.

Encarnacion, capital of the department of the same name, is situated on the Alta Parana River, 230 miles from Asunçion, capital of Paraguay. It has a population of about 35,000 and is the centre of a rich agricultural and graseing district It produces tobacco, hides and timber.

Encarnacion was established by the Jesuits in 1614.

FAVORABLE COMMENT.

Plays By Canadian Authors Praised By the Critics.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press). — The book of "One-Act Plays by Canadian Authors," published by the Montreal branch of the Canadian Authors' Association, is receiving favorable comment as a new venture. The critic of the Toronto Mail and Empire says he found it "exceedingly interesting, but one wonders why those writing romantic drama do not seek subjects in Canadian history, a rich and unworked mine. However, the Montrealers have done well something worth doing."

Bully Is Real Leader Says Vocational Expert

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 21st.— (United News).—A lying, stealing, bully boy is really a potential leader of men and should not be condemned, according to Charles W. Beaching of Philadelphia, a vocational expert who addressed the fiftieth district Rotary Club Executive here.

"The bully is a potential leader,' he said, "boys will not lie to their true friends. It is only necessary to convince a boy the world is friendly and he will forget the apparent necessity for lying.

As for the inclination to steal, the boy to be cured of it must be taught the principles of individual ownership."

Potato cheese, which comes from Thuringia, is the oddest of all cheeses, for it is flavored with caraway seeds.

RECONSTRUCTION VERY NECESSARY

Hon. Robert Rogers Issues Statement About Future of Party.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—In connection with an Ottawa report to the effect that a meeting is to be called to consider the question of the leadership of the Conservative party, Hon. Robert Rogers gave out a statement this afternoon:

It follows in part: "Consideration of that question and some related questions is imperative. That goes without saying.

"But the proposal to limit discussion and action to a caucus or coterie of individuals is altogether too narrow. Conservative voters selected on the broadest kind of representation should have a voice in such a vital matter.

"The Conservative party, in my judgment, is to-day perilously situated. If intelligent reconstruction is not speedily undertaken, it may, notwithstanding its splendid traditions, find itself in a position of impotence not unlike the Liberal party in England.

"The fundamentals of the Conservative party should be firmly reestablished and placed beyond the power of anyone to meddle with them. Having done that, let the party equip itself for public service, shaping its course to meet the problems we have with us and the problems that may arise."

DUNSFORD NEWS

DUNSFORD, Sept. 22.—This harvest season of 1926 has doubtless been a very discouraging one to the farmers at certain periods. The entire season has been late with numerous heavy downpours of rain to delay both cutting and drawing in, and also causing rust on most of the grain.

Acres of crops were flattened by the rains in early August and although they did straighten up a little the cutting had to be nearly all done one way.

Then when drawing-in time came along the clouds seemed in rather a jolly mood, all for playing a few jokes on the farmers. Everytime they would be ready for a big day's work a splash of rain would come tumbling down and hold them up for a few hours or perhaps days.

Despite all this most of the drawing-in is done now. Here and there one ses a few stooks still in the field but nothing worth mentioning. Quite a lot of the threshing is done and although the grain has yielded better than was expected the sample of grain is nothing compared with last years, being very light, and both rust and smut are to be found in it.

The corn is very good indeed. The next job wil lbe to get it into the silos. Roots are very good too so the stock will likely fare pretty well during the colder months. Potatoes and all other vegetables are quite plentiful, sufficiently so that every home will have enough for its own use.

The apples are a very poor crop especially the later ones, of which there are scarcely any on the trees. Owing to the season being so backward and no ploughing of any account being done. There is little fall wheat sown for next year.

Frieda Knies, who came in second, was clocked at 3:17. Elnore Wittman won the woman's 100 meter dash championship of Berlin, but was forced to run :12 to do it. Charlie Paddock's world's record time for the distance is :10.4.

SCHOOL FAIRS

SOUTH MANVERS

MILLBROOK, Sept. 21.— South Manvers held its fifteenth annual rural school fair at the Agricultural Park, on Saturday, September 18, at 1 p.m., between three and four hundred people being in attendance.

This was the first time for some years that Pontypool had been chosen for the school fair, and the success of the occasion was very gratifying. Ideal weather added much to the pleasure of the out-of-doors gathering, and to the atetndance.

Nine schools are included in the South Manvers section, the list, with the teachers, being: Ballyduff, S.S. No. 2, Miss Gladys Fierheller, teacher; Fallis', S.S. No. 3, Miss M. Fierheller, teacher; Galloway's, S.S. No. 4, Miss Cummings, teacher; Drum, S.S. No. 8, Miss Lillian Barwell, teacher; Pontypool, S.S. No. 9, Mr. T. A. Baggs, teacher; Lotus, S.S. No. 13, Miss Althea Long, teacher; Carscadden's, S.S. No. 14, Mr. Lorne Wannan, teacher, and Bethany, S.S. No. 15, Senior and Junior, Mrs. Ida Carscadden and Miss Nelson, teachers.

The school parade was, as usual, one of the most popular features of the fair, Major Hoare of Bowmanville and Colonel E. E. Snyder being the judges, and in rendering their decision the teachers were complimented on the initiative shown in preparing banners, costumes, etc., and in the drills, songs and school yells, while the physical culture exercises were all done with a precision that bespoke careful training.

The winners in the school parade were: 1, Ballyduff; 2, Fallis'; 3, Galloway's; 4. For physical culture: 1, Newpark, S.S. No. 20 (Union School); 2, Bethany; 3, Fallis'.

Miss Murphy of Port Hope judged the school chorus singing, announcing Bethany, Galloway's, winning first and second prizes, with Ballyduff and Fallis' tied for third place. The prizes were $3, $2 and $1 respectively.

There were only three entries in the public speaking contest, the winners being in the following order: 1, Margaret Jackson, subject, "Alfalfa Growing"; 2, Isabelle Sisson, subject, "Re-Forestration in Ontario"; 3, Ella Sisson, subject, "Alfalfa Growing." The Department sets the subjects in this contest.

The handsome silver shield awarded to the school winning the highest average number of points per pupil in all school fair work, went to School Section No. 4, Galloway's, for the third year in succession, and thus becomes the permanent property of this school.

A good programme of races was run off before the fair was finally brought to a close.

The school fairs in Durham County are under the supervision of F. C. Paterson, agricultural representative; other members of the staff this year including Misses B. Oke and G. Olver, secretaries; Messrs. R. Beatty, A. Wilson, and Clarence Allen. Miss Daley of Port Hope has attended most of the fairs as judge of the cooking, sewing, flowers, etc. The series will be completed this week; the final one being at Welcome on Friday.

Colonel Odell and Colonel Snyder attend the fairs in their respective inspectorates; the parades, drills, physical culture exercises, etc., being especially under their supervision.

YOUTH CLEARS UP SHOOTING MYSTERY

Admits That Accidental Discharge of His Gun Slew Friend.

BRANDON, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—The mystery surrounding the death of Ernest J. Adams, aged 18, of Stratford, Ont., formerly a reporter on The Stratford Beacon-Herald, has been cleared up. Adams was killed while buggy riding with a companion, Bertram Berry, 15-year-old nephew of P. Gray of Nesbitt, Man.

Young Berry has admitted that he accidentally shot Adams, according to a statement given out by the police.

While riding along a country road the youths saw a rabbit. Berry attempted to pull his gun out of the back of the buggy, and it was discharged, the shot entering Adams's right lung.

LONDON POLICE RECOVER CARS

Most of Them Restored To Owner Soon After Being Stolen.

SYSTEM GOOD.

LONDON (United Press).—Of every 100 cars stolen in London, 75 are promptly recovered by the police and restored to their owners, according to the report of the Chief Commissioner of Police for the Metropolitan area.

Within a few minutes of the time when the owner reports his loss, every police station in Greater London receives by telegraph a full description of the car. This is immediately mimeographed, and the constable leaves the station with copies, one of which he gives to every constable in the district. The constable, knowing that he may get a substantial reward for vigilance, commits the description to memory and straightway examines every car that passes.

In the meantime a similar description goes out through the provinces, either by telegraph or by mail, and in a very short time every constable in England, Wales and Scotland has a description of the missing car in his pocket.

Those cars which are not recovered are presumed to be those which are quickly run into the thieves' garages and thoroughly changed in appearance or "cached" for several months until they can be safely taken out and sold.

NEW MAIN ROAD FROM LIVERPOOL

Will Relieve Present Tortuous and Congested Roads.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—A great new highway to connect Liverpool with the main portion of industrial Yorkshire, is to be constructed at a cost of some three millions sterling. The Government Treasury is to provide 75 per cent. of the cost, the remainder being provided by Liverpool and the county authorities of Lancashire and Yorkshire. The case for a new highway between Liverpool and Yorkshire, running through east Lancashire, is a strong one. The present roads which converge on Liverpool from the east are all of them tortuous, and some of them that carry the heaviest traffic are definitely dangerous. They are a legacy of the days when a high road was the extension of the main street of a village, and today they carry the traveller from the heart of one congested little town to another, often through bottle necks where tram and motor cannot pass together. The scheme now sanctioned, indeed, may well be the first contribution to a highway across England from sea to sea that will in time be as valuable as her "Great North Road."

RADIO

Stability

The radio industry is following in the footsteps of the automotive industry; it is eliminating the unfit.

Within 25 years 350 concerns have entered the automotive manufacturing field; their intentions were good—their hopes high.

Of these about ten concerns now manufacture and sell 92% of all the cars and trucks built in America.

That is why it is imperative that you purchase radio sets from a manufacturer with unlimited resources, and whose stability has been supreme since the inception of the radio industry.

The name Westinghouse will ever remain a permanent guarantee of supreme excellence in everything pertaining to radio and radio equipment.

NO other car has ever attained such a brilliant sales record in so short a time. The reason is obvious. No other car has ever offered such modern engineering, such power, performance and appearance for so little money.

The "70" Willys-Knight Six is new all through—engineered as a unit. It is not merely a reconstructed chassis . . . It is Canada's most up-to-date car. . . .

Its new, European-type, small bore, long stroke engine develops, throughout its entire range, more power per cubic inch of piston displacement than any other automobile engine produced in this country. . . .

The liveliest car of its price ever built, the new "70" Willys-Knight Six accelerates from 5 to 40 miles in 14½ seconds —a new high-water mark of activity . . .

Embodying the most advanced engineering practices from both sides of the world, here is a car of tremendous power —a speed range between 60 and 70 miles an hour, more than you ever will need . . .

Its European-type, positive, mechanical four-wheel brakes give you a new conception of control and of quick-stopping —a dead stop within 52 feet from 45 miles an hour.

With its new European-type chassis, built for safety, this new car has a gravity center noticeably lower. It sets low —fairly hugs the ground . . . It is smart appearing with long, sweeping lines. Its deep, luxurious cushions, rich upholstery and many interior refinements will compliment your good taste.

Eight months ago, we told you the new "70" Willys-Knight Six, would out-perform anything that ever was built of its size, or type or class . . . and tens of thousands of enthusiastic owners today will tell you this is no idle claim. It is a fact abundantly established.

First to Offer these 7 Major principles of European design

Speed between 60 and 70 miles an hour. Extraordinary long-sustained high speed. Power on any hill to pass most cars in high. Accelerates 5 to 25 miles in 7½ seconds.

Powerful four-wheel mechanical brakes, the last word in safety. 54 horse-power, long stroke motor.

The only automobile engine that improves with use

The motor of the new "70" Willys-Knight Six is an exclusive feature—the Knight, sleeve-valve motor, patented, protected—which other manufacturers would pay millions to get.

Better and more powerful than any other motor of its size when new, the Knight sleeve-valve motor of the new "70" Willys-Knight Six grows smoother, more powerful, more efficient with every mile.

The motor of the new "70" Willys-Knight has no valves to grind . . . You never have to lay it up for carbon-cleaning . . . It has no springs to weaken . . . nothing to adjust . . . nothing to replace and repair . . . No Willys-Knight motor, so far as we know, has ever worn out.

Such tremendous advantages as these are creating a record-breaking army of friends for the new "70" Willys-Knight Six . . . So is the comforting assurance that, for years to come, this new car will hold top place in resale value . . . . Because owners will drive it far and away beyond the life of the average car.

* * * *

You owe it to yourself to see the remarkable new "70" Willys-Knight Six. With the introduction of these new engineering principles, it is not sound judgment to consider the purchase of a less modern car.

HARVEST FESTIVAL AT MADOC CHURCH

Ven. Archdeacon Dobbs Special Preacher on Sunday.

MADOC, Sept. 22.—The annual harvest thanksgiving services were held in the Church of St. John the Baptist on Sunday. The church was most beautifully decorated with grains, fruits, flowers and vegetables showing the abundance and beauty of the harvest season.

The speaker for this occasion was Ven. Archdeacon Dobbs of Kingston. In the morning the text was taken from Corinthians: "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gifts."—II Cor. IX-15.

Archdeacon Dobbs said that during his trips through the country he had been struck with the wonderful possibilities of this land, with the harvests and the magnificent scenery. He expressed his appreciation of the opportunity given him to visit Madoc and see the surrounding country.

The speaker then gave a brief resume of the circumstances which lead to the words of St. Paul in the text chosen; of St. Paul's mission in carrying help to a poverty-stricken church. The law of God's works both in nature and in grace. He that soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly and he that soweth bountifully shall reap bountifully. The earth will not give to the man who refuses to trust it. Similarly in spiritual matters the man who sows sparingly, thinking only of himself, will also reap sparingly. To the man who sows bountifully will come a bountiful harvest and so it is with spiritual sowing.

Money is nothing to God, but the way man gives shows his character. It is an index of the soul. When Jesus sat at the treasury watching those who came to give, He was reading souls, seeing the motives of those who cast in their contributions. God has given the unspeakable gift of His dear Son. What are all the gifts man can give compared to this great gift of His?

The speaker then went on to show how necessary it was to give to missions and to further God's work. "If God had not believed in missions He would not have sent His Son to die for us, and Christ would not have called upon Paul and other Apostles to go into far countries to preach the gospel. God is sending every one of us individually to conquer sin. There is much to be done yet to arouse the church to a sense of its responsibility. Wherever there is an unredeemed soul Jesus wants to see some love and to reach this soul. When we know Christ's spiritual life is ours. God trusts men and trusts them to use and not to abuse the things He has given."

The speaker mentioned the selfish purposes for which some of man's inventions were used, and spoke of how motor cars could be used to take the poor, the crippled, the blind, to the house of God instead of taking people away from church as was so often the case. It is more blessed to give than to receive, the Archdeacon reminded the congregation, and God, realizing that, gave His only beloved Son in sacrifice for the sins of the whole world. "He wants us to give even to the point of self-sacrifice not to give grudgingly, but in the consciousness of joy in giving to His honor and glory," he said in conclusion.

In the evening Archdeacon Dobbs gave an earnest and comprehensive sermon from the text found in Titus III 4-7: "But after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour forward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done but accordingly to His mercy He saved us by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost which He shed on use abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour, that being justified by His grace we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life."

Special music was rendered by the choir. In the morning the anthem was, "Praise Thy God, O Zion." In the evening the anthem, "O Clap Your Hands Together" was sung, and also a very fine setting of the Deus Misereatur. The solo parts were taken by Mrs. Strother, Mrs. J. Aylesworth and Mrs. W. Hawthorne.

Large congregations attended both services and it is a matter of congratulation that the objective of one hundred dollars was exceeded.

DON JUAN

SYNOPSIS

His father's warning—"Destroy women or they will destroy you; take their love scornfully—and forget!"—has mad. Don Juan the greatest lover of all time. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese. Loving her madly, he reforms. The lovers incur the enmity of infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves Juan, and Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana. To save her father, Adriana agrees to marry Donati, but when Varanese is dragged off to sign the agreement Donati breaks into Adriana's room, where Juan catches them under circumstances that destroy his faith.

"You are wasting an excellent piece of acting," he said to Adriana, as she sank to her knees before him, lifting her hands appealingly. "I know, now, that all women are cheats; that they are liars and traitors. You must have been greatly amused at my adoration—other women shall pay for that amusement of yours—and possibly, in the end, payment may be exacted of you also. I bid you farewell!"

And with a graceful gesture as mocking as the bow he had made Lucretia earlier in the evening, he turned from her, strode to the windows opening on the balcony and was gone.

Adriana half-rose, tried to follow him, then sank to the floor again. Bowing her head in her hands, she sobbed as if her grief would never be exhausted. And Donati, watching her, smiled. He had hardly dared to hope that matters would work out so well. He was glad now that he had restrained his passion of a little while before; better to wait, now, until he had married the girl.

Juan had gone straight to the palace where Lucretia Borgia sat awaiting him, forcing herself to remain quietly in the high backed chair facing the door of the room from which her sleeping apartments opened, forcing herself to think of nothing except that he must surely come to her.

She pictured what was in all probability happening at the Varanese palace. She could rely on Donati, and on Juan's feeling for the girl, she told herself. And yet—something might go awry. Juan might refuse to believe what would seem so apparent. He might fight with Donati—might be killed. That possibility made her draw in her breath sharply. She should have warned Donati to be careful. The girl might be able to persuade him that his suspicions were wrong.

Had Lucretia but known it, she had another enemy in her suit for Juan's love. Not a person, but his own bitterness and despair. At that moment he was stumbling through the streets, fighting with the temptation to throw himself into the Tiber's slow-flowing waters.

That would be such a simple way out, such an easy way to end the torment that was tearing at his heart. Life was not worth living, now, without his love for Adriana and his belief in her purity and loveliness. What could the world hold for him now? Half a dozen times he paused, to stare at the river and ask himself why he went on.

Life till now had been a gay adventure, in which women had but one place, the one to which he had assigned them because of his father's teachings. They had amused him. That was enough. His adoration of Adriana had made a different man of him; now the thought of sinking back into what he had been horrified him, yet there was no other way.

He came at last to the Borgia palace. Standing without the great gates, he looked up at it. From those to whom it belonged had come that night the orders that struck terror to the hearts of many in the city; tragedy had come, too, death and suffering worse than death.

And he, Don Juan, could enter it at will. There, in the windows opening on Lucretia's balcony, was a burning taper; she awaited him there, with pearls wound in her blond hair, with her body delicately scented and painted for him, with her heart crying out to him.

Should he go to her? Should he enter that great beautiful room in which she sat, and take what she offered him?

Or should he go on, out to the fields that stretched about the city, over the hills, perhaps to the great waterfall at Tivoli, to throw himself into its current, perhaps to ride north, to Florence, dreaming beside the Arno, to Venice, where one could drift in a gondola on moonlit canals, with a beautiful woman at one's side?

Why stay in Rome now?

Something held him, although he fought against it. He would not admit to himself that he still loved Adriana. Yet he could not force himself to leave the city in which she dwelt.

Impatient, angry, he stood there, looking up at Lucretia's window. He hated the love which held him, and the girl who had inspired it, who even now, he told himself, was in the arms of another man.

He told himself that he would kill that love, so that never again could it hold him by even the lightest leash. Once for all he would tear it from his heart.

And with that determination he strode into the courtyard of the Borgia palace, and swung himself up the vines to the balcony outside Lucretia's apartments.

She sat waiting, as he had pictured her, and as he entered the room she smiled triumphantly. Slowly she rose, and the lids of her eyes drooped, and her body relaxed, after its tension during those waiting moments.

Juan stood staring at her. His face was bestial, almost sodden; Adriana would have cried out in fear at the look in his eyes. But she had never seen him, never could see him, as he was then.

Almost savagely he took Lucretia in his arms; there was loathing in his eyes as he kissed her. Even then he would have drawn away from her, but she put one arm around him, and drew him close again.

The days that followed were days of triumph for Lucretia, such triumph as in all her wicked life she had never known. She flaunted Juan in the face of all Rome, made everyone realize what he meant to her.

She was less cruel, in her happiness, than she had ever been before. She disagreed with her brother's plans for the swift and secret removal of a valiant enemy whose estates would have been a valuable addition to those of the Borgias. And her serving maids, and Maia, marvelled at her kindness to them.

It caused them to fear as well. For they could see that Juan was restless, sullen, not the lover Lucretia so fondly believed him to be. He took small notice of her attempts to please him One evening when she had robed herself in palest green and wore the emeralds which she so loved, he took but little notice of her.

Finally, she said, almost pleadingly, "My robe—do you not like it?"

And he, refusing to pay the compliment for which she longed, retorted, "Oh, it suits you as well as any other!"

Yet no coldness on his part, no display of weariness, could turn her from him. After that first evening he avoided being alone with her, even paid court to Maia, but Lucretia blindly refused to see anything but the love in which she wanted to believe.

And even when he did not come to her, and did not trouble to make excuses, she believed that he loved her.

MOTORIST HELD UP.

Two Robbers Take $40 From Harrowsmith Man.

KINGSTON, Sept. 22.—While Stanley McNeil, a cheesemaker living at Harrowsmith, was driving home in his car on Sunday night, he was held up by two unknown men, and at the point of a revolver, was compelled to hand over $40.00. After securing the money, the men made good their escape. As it was very dark, Mr. McNeil could not get a good description of the men.

"Only One Thing — Kept that Business Going"

WHEN Jim Elliott suddenly passed away, some people said the firm of Elliott and Barclay would fail.

Barclay, the younger partner, handled the sales end, relying almost entirely upon Jim's judgment in financial matters. So it was predicted that since Barclay apparently lacked the capital to carry on while adjusting himself to his now greater responsibilities, the firm would be forced into liquidation.

But nothing like that happened—thanks to Jim Elliott's farsightedness.

Five years before his death he foresaw the dire possibilities of such an emergency and in the interests of his own family as well as Barclay's, he insisted that he and his partner invest in Business Insurance.

When Elliott died, that Business Insurance saved the firm; it firmly established Barclay's credit and eased his mind of financial worry during the critical period of readjustment. Thus not only the future of the Elliott family but also the success of the business was entirely safeguarded.

Today the firm of Elliott and Barclay is flourishing and stands as a monument to the former's sound business sense.

Business men owe it to themselves to investigate Business Insurance. It is all that its name implies.

The attached coupon will bring full particulars.

Please send me full information about Business Insurance as it affects me.

PASTOR INDUCTED IN UNITED CHURCH

Rev. T. M. Wesley Takes Charge at Lakefield—Impressive Service.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 22.—Rev. T. M. Wesley was formally inducted into the United (Presbyterian) church on Friday evening in the presence of a large number of members of his congregation and of the Regent street United congregation. Among the ministers who attended the service were: Rev. J. W. Gordon of St. Andrew's church, Peterboro; Rev. H. B. Herrington, of Warsaw; Rev. S. A. Kemp, of the Regent street church, Lakefield; Rev. J. V. McNeeley, of Bridgenorth; Rev. R. T. Richards, of Mark street church, Peterborough; Rev. R. F. Stillman, of Norwood, and Rev. William Spencer, pastor of the Lakefield Baptist church.

Rev. J. W. Gordon was in charge of the service as acting moderator and explained that the service had three parts, a gospel service first, then the induction, and lastly the charge. Rev. R. F. Stillman led in prayer and Rev. R. T. Richards read the Bible lesson, after which Mr. Richards preached a stirring sermon, taking his text from the 18th verse of the 29th chapter of the Book of Proverbs, "Where there is no vision, the people perish."

The man who has vision is the man who achieves, and one cannot say that modern science, which has made so many strides, has brought greater vision to the mass of the people. Our pioneer forefathers, many of them, were four months making the journey from the old world to the new and nowadays there are steamers which make the trip in five days, and can one look at the achievements made and say that the modern traveller has greater vision than those who hewed homes for themselves and their families from the wilderness.

We have changed the standards of living, making life more complex and also made it harder to lead a better life. The few do the thinking of the mass and there is the tendency to follow the crowd and join the chorus, setting up a demi-god to follow even when he is found to be lacking in the essential qualities. We have to go to the past to find the things best worth while in music, poetry, literature, sculpture, architecture and painting, and the reason is that the author has put his soul into his work and the result is a reflection of the soul.

They called the prophets of the past seers because of the breadth of their vision, for example Moses in his leadership of the Israelites, Isaiah in his vision of Jerusalem. Our Lord in his vision of the cross of Calvary as a means of redemption for mankind. St. Paul had a great vision of a Christian world and his writings and teaching are the creeds of Christendom.

To-day we are too apt to dwell in the world bounded by the almighty dollar and we need men and women who hear above the roar of the market place and the hum of the city the voice of God speaking to them. It is necessary to have eyes unstopped so we can see the glory and beauty of life as represented in kingly manhood and virtuous womanhood and our individual vision should be the eternal Christ, the centre of every worthwhile movement in the world.

Rev. J. W. Gordon inducted Rev. T. M. Wesley into the church as its minister.

Rev. S. A. Kemp gave the charge to the minister, stating that a warm, sympathetic, loving heart is one of the primary needs of the minister. Heart power is the greater dynamic force that men can have and comes only through close touch with God. The minister must love his people in spite of the faults and peculiarities they may have and help those who are are in sorrow or in trouble. A minister too, must have a clear-cut programme to avoid unnecessary waste of time and effort. Where is the minister's power of authority and from whence does it come, not in the power to absolve sin or to send heretics to their death, not in the made-up dignity or the choker collar, but it is found in the living message of God.

The minister hears two voices, the voice of God and the voice of the people. Moses heard the murmurings of the people in the wilderness, but went aside to listen to the voice of God. There is a peril in listening to the voice of the people and being too busy with God's own work to hear His voice. There is a mighty famine in the land and the minister's duty is to feed the hungry as our Lord commanded St. Peter to "Feed my lambs."

The minister who preaches Christ has nothing to fear and he should endeavor to live in the sunshine, he cannot afford to live in the valley of discouragement and only those who climb to the hilltop get a vision which ordinary men and women never get.

Rev. J. W. Gordon addressed the people on the subject of their responsibilities to their minister. He is pastor and minister, he is a student and a preacher, he is a leading citizen of the community and a member of Presbytery and all these make demands on his time quite apart from his duty as a husband and father. Don't pity your minister, he doesn't need it, but give him your sympathy and co-operation. Don't forget the incomparable value of worship and giving to church. You can help your minister by your prayers and by your earnestness and sympathy.

Mr. Gordon closed by paying a tribute to the value of Mr. Jull's ministry in the community and assuring the people of the excellence of Mr. Wesley, his successor.

The benediction was pronounced by Mr. Wesley, after which a social hour was spent in the schoolroom, where the ladies of the congregation served refreshments.

CAMPBELLFORD FLAGS

ter here he came into even closer contact with the people, old and young, and probably it is the C. L. Owen of those later days who is best remembered by his fellow townspeople.

On the industrial side of his life he was connected with the Trent Valley Woollen Mills in the early days, having come here in 1885 from Glen Tay. For fifteen years he was manager of the local mills.

He was a sportsman too, and especially liked good horses, the races of those days being something of a hobby of his. And as a churchman he was a Presbyterian. His life was a full one and an honored one, and his death has elicited such public and personal expressions of regret as only few men merit and receive from their fellows.

Grits Celebrate.

The Liberals of Northumberland are not through celebrating. They began on election night, haltingly and rather subdued, 'tis true, because of a "May Bee" in the King honey, but the morning after found them happier with their party in possesion of the political heights at the capital with a gap in the ranks where Northumberland might have been, if the Conservative protagonist, Milton E. Maybee, had not succeded in staving off the attacks of W. A. Fraser. Well the Grits stayed up late and noisy last Tuesday night and Bob Fry's roaring "Are we down-hearted?" was negatived all around the riding.

Friday night the Fraser clan disturbed the calm of the east end of the riding with a jubilee at Trenton that splashed over into the Tory precincts of Belleville with the reminder that while the Conservative offensive had succeeded in the Toronto-Bay of Quinte area it had been thrust back in many other sectors where gains had been pleasantly foretasted.

The third celebration is billed for Thursday evening at Cobourg with a parade headed by the Kilties Band and including Liberals from the more westerly section of the constituency. Mr. Fraser and Hon. Nelson Parliament will speak.

SEPTEMBER TAKING JUNE'S REPUTATION

Station Officials Find Fall Month Popular For Weddings.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press)—Fifty wedding parties in one day was the record established at Windsor Street Station on Labor Day for the month of September. In fact this is the second largest number in the memory of the station officials. Some years ago no less than 70 couples in one morning made their escape from the proverbial shower of rice and confetti at the Canadian Pacific depot in Montreal. On Labor Day, however, station attendants had a busy time looking after the crowds that came to wish the married couples a happy journey or to perhaps try another shot with the old boot which had missed its mark before.

Opinions from various of the station officials, who claim to be experts on domestic questions, are to the effect that June's reputation as the "Bridal Month" is at stake. From their observations they claim that September is becoming one of the most popular months for marriages. Houses, they maintain, are more plentiful in September and the blushing bride, coming from the honeymoon is beginning to realize that it is more advantageous to return in the Fall.

Shirrings Lend Charm to The New Frocks

Charmingly feminine is this graceful frock developed in a beautifully-printed flat crepe, and featuring an elongated bodice softly gathered at the sides, above the shirred side panels. A long tie collar is smartly tied at the left side of the V-neck opening, and shirrings are again introduced at the shoulders providing a soft fulness over the bust. The one-piece sleeves are gathered into narrow wrist-bands of dark contrasting crepe, matching the collar and deep band on the panels. As pictured in the accompanying diagram, the foundation of this frock is in one piece, the panels being shirred and sewn to the dress across the sides. HER OWN WAY by A GIRL of TODAY

JOAN'S REQUEST.

"My dear, you did not take my advice, in fact, I gave you none when I first met you. You will remember that you were at a place where you had to let someone into your secret. It was a time for action, not words. Consequently, I didn't tell you what to do, I just turned in and helped you out of your scrape."

"And what a wonderful friend you are, Judy! And to think that I should have picked you out from behind the handkerchief counter in my step-father's store! I don't know why I did it. I am sure I never would have told my story to one of the girls that I know only in my own set. But speaking about getting me out of my scrape, I am afraid I am not out yet. However, I am not going to talk about that. I want to talk to you a little about your own affairs."

"But my dear Joan, I have no affairs. I am just living along from day to day trying to help everybody who really needs my help. Just at present you seem to be the one—you, with your brother John."

"That's it, Judy, that's it. I need not tell you that my brother John is on the verge of falling in love with you and I also need not tell one who never lies to herself that you are not quite sure whether you want him to do so or not.

"I am going to ask you, Judy, to please make up your mind immediately if you think by any possibility you could be interested in John."

"But I am interested, I think he is most charming."

"Don't put me off that way, you know what I mean. I mean do you think that you could marry him? Forgive me, dear, but if you could not I am going to ask you to go away from here until after he has gone on that African expedition."

Again I tried to speak, but Joan said quietly, "Please, please Judy, let me finish. I know that as yet you have done nothing to encourage my brother except what has been dictated by your kind heart. The moment you saw him you saw he was unhappy; that we who loved him did not really understand him and instinctively, as you always do, you immediately gained not only his interest, but his confidence."

The Japanese woman is very proud of being physically "fit." She considers it quite a disgrace to be ill; she never tells of her pains; she conceals them as much as possible; she thinks health and therefore is usually well.

This Simply Cut White Chiffon Frock Is Trimmed with Crystals and Rhinestones.

The plainly cut white evening frock never fails to possess charm. It may be devoid of trimming, or it may choose some elaborate bead trimming, as does the model above.

In this case the dress is a straight slip, while the beading is done in crystals and rhinestones. Fine silver thread outlines the motifs on the skirt.

The same idea could be carried out effectively in a pastel or deeper tinted chiffon, with the same beading.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Th ncli

SHE DESCRIBES A LOVELY EVENING GOWN

Madame is a great believer in simple, telling treatments for dress decoration. She likes some cleverly executed trimming idea that takes ingenuity, rather than a decoration of the most costly variety.

Today she was watching the process of fitting an evening dress, with me as the model and we chatted as the fitter worked.

"Now this delightfully youthful frock, with only bows of the material for decoration, is my idea of the typical French design," Madame commented.

"The French do seem to excel at evolving dress ideas that are stunning because of their extreme simplicity," I agreed.

"Yes, it takes far more talent to make a really smart dress all of one material than it does to make a frock and trim it with a great deal of embroidery or braid," Madame replied.

"You will notice," she continued, "that most women who dress badly suffer from overdoing the trimming, rather than underdoing it. It seems to take a more or less sophisticated woman to understand the charm of utter simplicity."

"Do you think, as I've heard one designer say that a woman must really be past her youth before she understands the smartest way for her to dress?" I asked Madame.

"I do not," Madame replied promptly. "Any very young girl can learn the secret of simplicity and becoming colors and lines if she really puts her mind to it. And there are some who need not learn it, for it seems to be born in them."

"Well, any young girl who knows enough to choose this evening frock from your selection can't go far wrong on it," I assured Madame.

The dress, of strawberry colored georgette; was such a simply conceived affair that it really pleased me immensely. There was a straight underslip, and then the smartly shaped overdress that tied in two places at the front, and moulded in close to the figure below the long waistline.

"Just hold this new wrap a minute," Madame instructed, handing me a gorgeous evening coat of strawberry and gold lame with a brown fox collar.

"They are perfect together," she added. "Whoever orders that frock should be able to afford the wrap too."

Woman's search for original millinery inspiration has now led her to the forests, for the latest hats from Paris look exactly like gigantic fir cones. Appearing, at first glance, as if made of wood, the new fir cone hat is actually made from minute feathers arranged so cleverly that they look exactly like the scales of pine cones.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

PEARL

Pearl is undoubtedly a 'name of great price.' Not only is it musical in sound, but it honors the exquisite translucent gem which is the symbol of purity the world over.

The Persian term for the jewel in Murvarid, meaning "child of light." Their legend of the origin of the pearl, a charming and beautiful fancy, is in accordance with the ancient idea that the oysters, rising to the surface of the water at night and opening their shells in adoration, received into their mouths drops of dew congealed by the moonbeams into the lustrous gem which resembles the moon itself.

The pearl has always been associated with purity and sanctity. Pearls were chosen as the jewels to adorn the gates of the Celestial City and the gem has had countless uses as a symbol in the religions of all countries.

Pearl is enormously popular in England. Like Muriel and Molly and Vivian and Sibyl, it may almost be said to be one of the national feminine names. In this country it has likewise widespread vogue. We have even gone further and make a diminutive, Pearley, which, is popular in some sections, though a trifle provincial.

Pearl's talismanic stone is of course her own gem, the pearl. It promises her great charm and affability, and many friends. It will also guard her from dangers and evil and preserve her purity. Thursday is her lucky day and 2 her lucky number. The marguerite or daisy, is her flower.

The cult of the lucky elephant among modern women has spread from Europe to America, and shows itself in a large number of ways. Many women are now wearing rings and other ornaments made of elephant's hair. Women are also collecting ebony and ivory elephants of all sizes, and sometimes have regiments of these ornaments in their rooms.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

THOMAS OTWAY AND MISS BARRY

(By The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

Otway was one of the early fathers of the English stage and achieved a reputation as a playwright that was notable both in England and in Europe, where his plays were translated and performed. "Venice Preserved" is one of his famous works. Otway lived only thirty-three years and had an end as tragic as any one could have conceived for his plays. Towards the close of his life, he was in the most extreme poverty; so poor was he that hunger forced him out of the hovel in which he had secluded himself, to beg on the streets. A passerby whom he timidly accosted was astonished to learn that this wreck of a man was Thomas Otway and in his pity gave him a guinea. Overjoyed, Otway ran to the nearest bakery and bought a loaf of bread. But so ravenous was he that in his great eagerness to swallow down the food, he choked to death on the first mouthful.

The actress who portrayed Otway's most celebrated roles was Madam Barry, whom the playwright loved passionately. But the flighty actress did not know whether to accept or reject him, and fearing the loss of his services as a dramatist, she kept him dangling on a string. He writes her in 1682:

"Could I see you without passion or be absent from you without pain, I need not beg your pardon for thus renewing my vows that I love you more than health, or any happiness here or hereafter. Everything you do is a new charm to me and though I have languished for seven long tedious years of desire, jealously despairing, yet every minute I see you I still discover something new and more bewitching. Consider how I love you; what would I not renounce or enterprise for you? I must have you mine, or I am miserable, and nothing but knowing which shall be the happy hour can make the rest of my years that are to come more tolerable. Give me a word or two of comfort, or resolve never to look again with common goodness on me more, for I cannot bear a kind look and after it a cruel denial. This minute my heart aches for you; and, if I cannot have a right in yours, I wish it could ache until I could complain to you no longer.

"Remember poor Otway."

FOR THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 23 1926.

Neptune, Uranus and the Sun are in benefic aspect today, according to astrology, which finds much to encourage Earth inhabitants on the first day of autumn.

With the Sun's entrance into Libra, Saturn is posited in the midheaven, and this is read as foreshadowing much trouble for the government.

While Uncle Sam must face many problems he is assured of a better feeling on the part of the European powers regarding money and concessions.

Many deaths among high government officials again are prognosticated, but this is merely part of the process of bringing new ideas into the forefront with the introduction of new leaders of thought.

Saturn and Uranus are in an aspect favorable for progress in business, increase of municipal development and extension of all modern facilities for transportation.

The Moon in Aries indicates a great deal of travel including much touring of foreign lands.

Fires, earthquakes and mining disasters are foreshadowed for various parts of the country.

Unfortunately the aspects indicate an increase of crime, instead of a curbing of evil.

Underworld organization is to be extended so that it will be inextricably connected with government machinery, the seers warn.

Many women who have been prominent in political, artistic and professional life are to end their careers before the close of 1926, it is prophesied.

While the old leaders and long-admired celebrities are to pass out of this plane of life their places are to be taken by persons of splendid endowments and good training, it is foretold.

Advancement in matters of religion, philosophy and the law is presaged, but invention will center general attention.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year in which they will have many surprises through messages from distant places. Much profit appears to be indicated.

Children born on this day should have many gifts including that of oratory. Keen intellects and brilliant wit probably will distinguish them.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(United Press)—Small hats with high crushable crowns in felt, velvet or velours are considered the smartest headgear for the advancing season. Occasionally we see a wide-brimmed felt model but these do not seem consistent with call for the sleek boyish head which is decreed by some fashions.

Colors in millinery, like colors in costumes, run to black, browns, Chanel red, jungle greens, Valencia blue and orangish nasturtium shades. Trimming is the one thing which distinguishes the new bonnet from those we have been wearing. Where the simple ribbon crown band was formerly used we now find bands of leather and fur trimming most of the smart shapes.

The fur or leather crown band merely replaces the ribbon band. Bands of Pony and short-clipped calf-fur often finished with straps and buckles of leather are used, in single or narrow double band effect. The Russian inspiration is found on some turbans where fur forms a wide front bandeau which comes to a high peak in front.

Changeable velour is a new millinery idea which was recently brought out in Paris. The blending of two colors gives a two-tone effect that permits the hat to blend with different costumes. Many different color combinations are to be found in the millinery shops. The ribbon trimming these two-toned felts is also changeable.

Satin and felt is a millinery combination often used this year. Perforated felt posed over satin foundations is among the novelties.

Crowns of most hats drape higher at the rear than at the sides or front and when brims are worn they are narrow, short and flexible.

Rubber flowers are a new millinery idea that is carried out on the hat for rainy days. We also notice that many smart women choose these rubber flowers as buttonieres. One finds these flowers at the counters where bathing accessories are carried and they sell from 75 cents to $1.00. Dalias, daisies and gardenias in various sizes and in clusters are worn on the lapels and look extremely smart on rainy days.

Daily Short Story

FOUR HUNDRED CAKES

Sometimes one of the married men at his office asked Tom Bollinger home for dinner and the evening. He made an agreeable partner at bridge for an unmarried sister at the Brooks' and served as extra bachelor when the Drews gave a party. The very popular Mabel Gregory would sometimes telephone to him at four or five in the afternoon begging—or rather commanding—him to "come around" for the evening. But whatever happened Tom could while away an evening after dinner with Ruth Harrow. He never made arrangements to go to see Ruth until late afternoon—after there was no chance of anything else coming up. Ruth was apparently always glad to have him come.

Then one day when no plans had presented themselves for the evening Tom telephoned to Ruth and Ruth said, "I'm sorry, Tom, but it won't be quite convenient tonight. Can't you come tomorrow evening instead?"

But Tom had promised to go to the Brooks' that evening. Ruth suggested the following evening, but Tom hesitated. Something might turn up for that evening.

"Oh, well," he said, "never mind. I wanted to see you tonight. But if someone else is going to be calling—never mind. I'll call you up some time the first of the week."

"Now, Tom," Ruth said coaxingly. "If you are going to be cross about it, I'll tell you. I've promised to make cakes—two dozen of them—for a cake sale tomorrow afternoon. You know I don't get home from the office until after six and the only time I can make them is after dinner. It's a sale at the parish house."

Monday of the next week found Tom late in the afternoon with the prospect of a dull and lonely evening and so he telephoned to Ruth.

"I'm so sorry," said Ruth with emphasis on the "so," "but I'm going to be very busy. I just can't manage." And again Ruth suggested that they arrange for some night later that week but again Tom, unused to making plans ahead of time with Ruth, said he'd call up later.

Five or six times within the next week or two Tom telephoned to Ruth, but every time Ruth pleaded full plans for evening. And never did Tom arrange his plans ahead of time. Then one Friday afternoon at half-past four—when there was still a chance of something "breaking" for the evening—Tom telephoned Ruth at her office.

"I'm coming to see you this evening," he announced.

"Oh, Tom," Ruth began to excuse herself, "I'm so sorry. I'm very busy—I'm planning to make four dozen cakes. They are having a sale for the orphan asylum."

"I'm coming anyway," said Tom. "I can see you for five minutes, can't I?"

"Why—yes," faltered Ruth. "Come, if you like. Only I shall be very busy and I may make you beat eggs and cream, butter and sugar."

At nine that evening Tom Bollinger was meekly sitting in the kitchen of Ruth Harrow's old-fashioned suburban home. He had proved his inefficiency as an egg beater.

"I'll tell you what you might do," Ruth said, looking at him very sweetly as she opened the oven to get a peep at the golden morsels, "you might begin washing the dishes. Bridget insists on having everything washed up."

So for a half hour he labored washing mixing bowls, spoons, graters all stuck up with chocolate or cocoanut, tins and egg beaters, while Ruth who looked tantalizingly lovely as she iced the fragrant cakes praised him.

Finally the task was over and the kitchen left in perfect order. But it was almost eleven o'clock. Tom's mouth had watered for just one of the little cakes but Ruth had explained that she had promised four dozen, and the tins made just that number.

"Well, if I can't have a cake, I can at least have a kiss," said Tom.

Ruth protested and Tom did not insist. He said he could not stay later, but sat down with Ruth on an uninviting wooden seat in the hall for a minute or two before going.

"I'm jealous, Ruth," he told her. "You've put me off for two weeks. There's someone else."

Then Ruth told him that every night she had put him off she had really been busy making cakes for sales and bazaars. People seemed to impose on her because she was good natured about it. She had made four hundred in two weeks—some for practically every charity in the place.

"Next time I ask if I can come up and you have cakes to make let me order some at the Exchange. I know they have 'em there," Tom suggested. Ruth told him that they were very expensive—a dollar a dozen. But Tom laughed and said he'd pay five dollars a dozen for the sake of having Ruth to himself.

But I didn't know you cared about me," ventured Ruth.

"I didn't know I did either," said Tom in confusion. "At least not so much. But I've found out I do. What do you say to going to dinner and the theatre tomorrow night. The Drews may ask me out there but this will be a previous engagement, and let's plan something for Saturday afternoon and evening. Mabel Gregory wanted me to join a house party this week-end, but I haven't promised."

And there sitting uncomfortably on the hard old wooden settee in the old-fashioned Hall Tom Bollinger proposed to Ruth Harrow and was accepted.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Todays' Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S ACORN WAFFLES

Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

(By Howard R. Garis.)

Once upon a time, when Uncle Wiggily was hopping through the woods with Tumble and Bumble, two of his little rabbit boys, they came to a place where the ground was covered with small, brown things, some round like marbles and others shaped like mother's thimble.

"Oh, look at the chestnuts!" cried Bumble.

"Let's fill our pockets and take them to Johnnie and Billie Bushy tail, the squirrels!" shouted Tumble, falling down, which he did so often that he was given that queer name. But he never hurt himself when he fell; that's one comforting thought.

The two bunny boys began filling their pockets with the brown nuts, thinking to do their two little playmates a favor, but Uncle Wiggily, who was also father to Bumble and Tumble, laughed and said:

"Those aren't chestnuts, they are acorns, but they do look like chestnuts. However, chestnuts are different in shape, and they are sweeter and of better flavor. Though Johnnie and Billie may like these acorns, they would much rather have chestnuts. But Curly and Floppy Twistytail, the pigs, love acorns."

"Then we'll take all we can carry," said Bumble. He and his brother filled their pockets with the acorns. Uncle Wiggily, thinking some of the other little bunny boys and girls might like to play with the smooth, brown acorns, also filled his pockets. Then they started back to the hollow stump bungalow.

Uncle Wiggily was just feeling a bit sorry that he had not found an adventure this day when he saw Aunt Lettie, the lady goat, going into his bungalow.

"Perhaps Aunt Lettie will tell me where I can find an adventure," thought the rabbit gentleman as he went in the back way, through the kitchen, and put his acorns on the table. "I'll ask her."

As he entered the front room, where Aunt Lettie was sitting, he heard the goat lady bleat:

"Oh, I have heard so much about the beautiful waffles you make, Mrs. Longears! Mrs. Twistytail, the pig, was telling me about them. Of course I wouldn't for the world be so bold as to ask you to bake me some waffles now, but if you happened to be making any, for the children you know, while I am here, why I'd just love one with some butter and maple syrup on it."

"Oh, my wife makes lovely waffles!" chimed in Uncle Wiggily, who was proud of Mrs. Longears. "They are wonderful! I'm sure she is going to bake some now, Aunt Lettie! I'll start the fire and she will bake you some waffles!"

Uncle Wiggily was so excited that he did not see his wife trying to step on his foot under a chair. He did not see her trying to whisper "No! No!" and he paid not the least attention to her. He just laughed and said:

"Oh, my wife bakes the loveliest waffles! Come out to the kitchen, my dear, and you and I will bake Aunt Lettie some!" and when his wife, not to be impolite to company, followed him, she said quickly:

"Wig, why didn't you keep quiet! I can't bake any waffles for Aunt Lettie for there isn't a bit of flour in the bungalow. I didn't want to let her know that. But now you have put your foot in it!"

"Oh—I see!" sadly said the bunny gentleman. "I have put my foot in the waffles! Oh, dear! Too bad!" Then he saw the acorns on the table and said:

"Ha! We are saved! Quick! Get the pan ready! Put the waffle iron on the stove to heat! We'll make waffles for Aunt Lettie yet!"

"How can we, with no flour?" asked his wife.

"I'll grind some of these acorns up in the coffee grinder and make acorn flour and you shall bake acorn waffles!" cried the bunny gentleman, his pink nose twinkling.

So while Uncle Wiggily ground the acorns up into flour, his wife made ready and heated the waffle iron. And when the waffles were baked, and set before Aunt Lettie, swimming in melted butter and maple syrup, why that lady goat just shook her horns with delight.

"Oh, what lovely waffles!" she bleated. "You must tell me how you make them!"

"You had better ask my husband!" laughed the rabbit lady. So everything came out all right, you see. And if the hand organ monkey will play a tune for the raindrops to dance to, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Bobbie Ringtail.

REMARKABLE TRIBUTE PAID TO LATE DR. VOGT

Sorrowing Friends and Associates Pass Flower-Banked Casket—Sir R. Falconer Speaks.

Musical Toronto gave a remarkable tribute of esteem and affection for Dr. A. S. Vogt, Prinsipal of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, and founder of the Mendelssohn Choir, when the public funeral service took place in the Convocation Hall of the University of Toronto, yesterday afternoon.

The large hall was well filled when the service commenced at 2 p.m. For two hours the casket banked by beautiful floral tributes, had lain in state. Long lines of friends and sorrowing associates passed. Dr. F. A. Moure of the University of Toronto, was at the organ. Rev. Henry Roche and Rev. Henry Marsh of St. Paul's Anglican church, had charge of the service. Half the lower floor was occupied by members of the Mendelssohn choir, and the other half by executives, teachers and pupils of the Toronto Conservatory of Music and its various branches. Hymns which Dr. Vogt loved so well were sung and these included "Abide with Me," and "O God, our Help in Ages Past."

Sir Robert Falconer's Address.

The devotional exercises were followed by an address by Sir Robert Falconer, President of the University of Toronto.

"Dr. Vogt's life," said Sir Robert, "was as complete as any human life can be said to be complete. He leaves great things so successfully done that his name is held in honor throughout his native land and in musical circles of Great Britain and the United States. He elevated the taste of the city and proved to the outside world that Canadians possess great artistic ability, and that we are able to sing. Dr. Vogt had fine administrative powers and was never blinded to real merit.

"There remains to us his artistic spirit, not shaped in bronze or outlined in color, but harmoniously embodied in great institutions and in the fine taste of our people. We treasure the memory of a wise, patient, generous counsellor and friend."

Rev. Dr. Roche pronounced the Benediction and as the body was borne from the hall the organ pealed forth the Dead March in Saul. Entombment took place at Mount Pleasant Mausoleum.

Many Floral Tributes.

Among the many beautiful floral tributes were emblems sent by the Mendelssohn Choir, Eaton Choral Society, Canadian Bureau for the Advancement of Music, University of Toronto, Manitoba Musical Association, Toronto Musical Protective Association, Mr. and Mrs. R. Y. Eaton, Rev. T. Crawford Brown and Mrs. Brown, Frank Welsman, Dr. and Mrs. Moure, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Matthews, Heintzman and Co., Whaley, Royce and Co., and many others.

The Peterborough Conservatory of Music is associated with the Toronto Conservatory of Music, and Professor Gliddon and Mrs. Gliddon of Peterborough, were personal friends of the deceased, and state that the musical world has lost one of its finest leaders.

BABY GIRL FOUND.

Healthy Child About Four Weeks Old Left in Garage.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 22—A baby girl, apparently about four weeks old, was found in a garage late Monday night. The infant was clad in dirty ragged blankets, but appears to be well nourished and in healthy condition. There was nothing to indicate the parents, and the police have no clues in the case. The baby has been taken to the Children's Shelter. The baby has brown hair and blue eyes. The only mark on its body is a reddish mark over the eyes.

Seaman Left Millions Offered Royal Bride

TOULON, Sept. 22. (United Press). — A young French seaman has received word that his mother who deserted him soon after he was born had died in the Argentine, and left him the fortune of her second husband, more than $6,000,000. At the present exchange rates the estate represents one of the greatest fortunes in France. A Berlin matrimonial agency has notified him that it can provide him with a royal princess for a wife.

The Beauty Doctor

CONDITION—Characterless eyebrows.

TREATMENT — Eyebrows that are too light in color often ruin the expression of really lovely eyes. In such a case, one is not only justified but obligated to do something about the matter. The best help is an eyebrow pencil, carefully applied. The brows may be touched up ever so lightly, and the eyes rendered much more effective. Such subterfuge is quite unpardonable, however, unless expertly and carefully done.

LACK OF WOMEN BEING DEPLORED

Papers Regret Small Number of Lady Candidates in Elections.

SEEK REASON.

TORONTO, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—The Globe in an editorial on Women in the Canadian elections, said:

"The presence of only two women candidates in a total of 528, is disappointing. Women have had the franchise for almost a decade, and yet in a national contest with important issues, especially the issue of clean government, they have taken little part. Some of them took part in the campaign and many voted, but their practical relation to the election is slighter than the country expected. It is a new and perhaps not wholly agreeable form of combat, and it is made less attractive by reckless mud-slinging. Women could and should do something to improve our election standards."

"Cornelia" in The Telegram has this criticism: "In looking over election reports throughout Canada, some of our local women should do some thinking. Toronto has stood nobly by a staunch British connection and the development of a strong Canadian nation within the Empire.

"What happened to the rest of Canada? What were its so-called women leaders doing? Were they too immersed in women's organizations which put muzzles on political effort to sound their voices?"

DANCE IS TO-NIGHT AT BROCK ST. RINK

Budd Fox Orchestra Last Dance Programme of the Season.

It was inadvertently stated in an advertisement in The Examiner last night that the dance with the Budd Fox Radio Broadcasting Orchestra would be held at Brock Street Rink last evening.

This was an error, and the dance is to take place to-night.

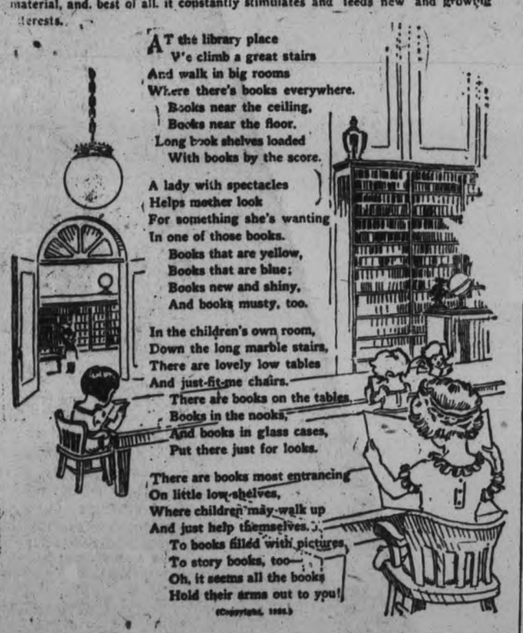
This will possibly be the last opportunity to dance with Budd Fox Orchestra officiating, and as the floor is one of the very best in the city, a most enjoyable time can be had. The music alone is worth while, whether dancing or not, but those who enjoy dancing will find it about the best music that they ever danced to.

The orchestra will play at the Regent Theatre tomorrow evening.

The Public Library

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THE majority of us fail to take advantage of the opportunities the library offers. The library habit has to be developed, but I know of no finer one to deliberately cultivate, for he who enjoys reading is constantly undergoing an educational process and acquiring a treasure which will dissipate possible boredom or loneliness. The library is an excellent place for children. Of the numerous benefits note a few with me. Library attendance teaches them respect and love for books, self control in personal conduct in accordance to the rules, responsibility in drawing out and returning books, training in looking up and correlating material, and, best of all, it constantly stimulates and feeds new and growing interests.



At the library place
We climb a great stairs
And walk in big rooms
Where there's books everywhere.
Books near the ceiling,
Books near the floor.
Long book shelves loaded
With books by the score.

A lady with spectacles
Helps mother look
For something she's wanting
In one of those books.
Books that are yellow,
Books that are blue;
Books new and shiny,
And books musty, too.

In the children's own room,
Down the long marble stairs,
There are lovely low tables
And just-fit-me chairs.
There are books on the tables,
Books in the nooks,
And books in glass cases,
Put there just for looks.

There are books most entrancing
On little low shelves,
Where children may walk up
And just help themselves.
To books filled with pictures,
To story books, too—
Oh, it seems all the books
Hold their arms out to you!

AGNES CONFIDENT.

Will Serve People Better Than Ever, She Says on Re-election.

DURHAM, Ont., Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—Agnes MacPhail, re-elected for Grey Southeast, after the cheers and horn-blowing were over, said to her admirers speaking from a balcony: "I have greater self-confidence, owing to the confidence you have reposed in me, and I am sure I will be able to serve you better in the parliament that is ahead than I did in the one just past." Pratically all of the day she had spent at her father's house in Ceylon. She received returns by telephone. In her home poll at Ceylon, No. 4, Artemesia, Miss MacPhail lost heavily. In this poll last year her majority was 93. Now there was a loss of 50. "I expected it," said Miss MacPhail. "The turnout of old people, some of whom had not been in a booth for 15 years, may have been responsible for this."

Two nuns were among the incorporators of a company recently chartered in London to build and carry on a school.

YOUNGEST M.P. HARD WORKER

Louis Auger, M.P., Wins Education By Work as Laborer.

BEATS VETERANS.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—The remarkable feat of the entire Federal election goes to the credit of Louis Auger, of Hawkesbury, Ont., a 23-year-old professor of Ottawa University, and a member of the Twentieth Century Society, an Ottawa Liberal organization for young men, says an article in The Ottawa Journal.

Elected to the House of Commons for Prescott in the sixteenth parliament of Canada, Mr. Auger will be undoubtedly the youngest member ever to sit in that House. His victory over the other two Liberal candidates, R. Labrosse and Gustave Evanturel, former member, and over Dr. H. H. Kirby, Conservative candidate ,is an achievement in itself.

Worked as Laborer.

But the chief feature of the Liberal member's election is his conquest of circumstances and of youth in attaining to the seat of government.

To obtain an education, Louis Auger, as a lad, studied hard at the lower schools and won an opportunity to attend Ottawa University. He worked as a laborer and in other humble capacities to make attendance at the University possible. Graduating with honors he commenced to teach at the University while he put himself through for law.

Mr. Auger first associated himself with politics after the election of October, 1925. He became an officer of the Twentieth Century Society, an organization for young men formed for political purposes by a number of prominent Ottawa women.

Those who launched the society include Mrs. Norman F. Wilson, Mrs. Charles H. Thorburn, Miss Belcourt, Mrs. H. J. Cloran, Miss Helen Doherty, and others.

Mr. Auger will be the first member of the Young Men's Liberal Association to be elected to Parliament. He is exceedingly popular in his home town, and with students at Ottawa University. He will probably continue his work at the University and later expects to be called to the bar.

Silver-Tongued Orator.

Louis Auger was the seventh of 16 children, having eight brothers and seven sisters. His parents are still alive and in the best of health. He was born at Contrecoeir, Vercheres County, in Quebec, but his family moved to Hawkesbury, Ont., sixteen years ago. Educated at the Grey Nuns' Separate School at Hawkesbury, he went to Ottawa University at the age of 15, and graduated in the class of '24 with honors. He is at present a professor in classics, languages and mathematics.

In an interview with the Journal over long distance telephone, Mr. Auger said his chief ambition was to "serve my country to the best of my ability." He makes little of the manner in which he won for himself an education, although he admits working as a laborer for the Hawkesbury Lumber Company, Riordon Lumber Company and other concerns and with doing odd jobs and other work "as long as it was honest."

WOMEN IN PULPITS.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—(Associated Press).—The Reverend Joyce Daplyn, the youngest and most recent of England's fully-qualified ministers of the gospel, told the Woman's Provisional Club of London that once the congregation has become accustomed to a woman in the pulpit it doesn't notice whether the minister is a man or a woman and concentrates its attention on the message which the speaker is giving.

Personal faith sufficiently strong to fill one's life, sympathy, understanding and tact are the essential qualifications for women who think of embarking upon a ministerial career, she said.

RULERS UNABLE TO SET STYLES

Mustapha Kemal and Pangoulas Beaten By Ladies.

MUSSOLINI TRIES.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(Associated Press). — Dictators and kings the world over are trying to reform woman's dress by various methods. But skirts continue to shrink, sleeves get no longer and the edicts of man have not covered up the bare necks which various high-placed officials pretend to find objectionable.

Kemal Flouted.

Mustapha Kemal's press agents would have one believe Turkish women have cast aside the veil at his suggestion and altered their costumes to harmonize with the women of the West.

Yet travellers who have been away from the great cities in Turkey say the Mohammedan women are clinging to their veils. Turkish men had to lay aside their fezzes, and some Turks were executed for clinging to them.

Pangoulos tried to lengthen women's skirts by law in Greece, but had to abandon the attempt. Greek women went to jail rather than comply with the orders of the Athenian dictator.

King George let it be known in Cowes that he thought very short skirts were unattractive, and many of the women who associate with royalty donned longer gowns. But he was too wise to attempt any general reform in woman's dress. Both he and Queen Mary have done much to prevent extreme fashions from prevailing among women who are received at Court.

Mussolini's Experiment.

Mussolini's effort to standardize the dress of Italian women and lessen the cost of dress by having a uniform for women is creating much amusement among British officials who had to do with the effort made in England during the Great War to provide a standard costume for women at a remarkably cheap price.

Even the humblest women showed themselves to be individualists and despised the cheap and unattractive costumes.

King Albert of Belgium may get the women of Belgium to help exchange by using only war bread. President Hindenburg may persuade German women to use only homegrown rye for bread, thus reducing the importation of wheat flour, and Mussolini may get Italy to eat more potatoes and less macaroni in the interest of national finances, but Englishmen who had a hand in trying to standardize female attire and reduce its cost to a minimum smile at the efforts of the Italian dictator to put Italy's artistic, color-loving women into drab uniforms.

WARNING GIVEN BY FIRE CHIEF

WOMEN LOSE HEADS.

EDMONTON, Alta., Sept. 22. — (Canadian Press).—"When it comes to a cry of 'Fire' women lose their heads more quickly than men," is the assertion, after much experience ,of Chief Dutton of the city fire department. Of course the cigarette smoker, male or female, has much to do with the cause of fires, and he gives this tip to both: In the matter of causing trouble, the "tailor-made" cigarette is the worst. It keeps on smouldering until the last particle is consumed. Not so with the "home-rolled" cigarettes. It is difficult to keep these "home fires" burning at best, and when the butt is thrown aside, it goes out almost instantaneously.

The electric iron, which causes many small fires when left attached, is not overlooked. In places of business where these irons are used extensively, the fire marshal insists upon the installation of the red pilot light which sends forth a crimson glow when the iron reaches a certain temperature, thus warning the worker that danger is at hand.

Some few homes have the pilot light attachment, but not many, and probably those who have it do not really need it. Persons who are sufficiently thoughtful of this precaution, probably would always remember to disconnect the iron before using it.

The innocent coal-oil stove is abhorred by the chief, because of the opportunities it gives to careless workers, with a greasy kettle boiling over, etc. Using gasoline for cleaning, where there is a fire or a lamp, is of course known to most women as a dangerous course but some forget; and some put gloves on their hands and wash them, when they invite disaster by ignition by friction.

SCOTTISH TRAMPS PICTURESQUE FOLK

Tinkers Speak Gaelic and Travel in Clans—Observe Sunday.

RANNOCH MOOR, Scotland, Sept. 21.—(Associated Press). — The most picturesque tramps of the United Kingdom are Scotsmen who ply the broad high road which runs along Loch Lomond and across the wild and desolate Rannoch Moor to Inverness.

Probably the best known is "Long Jock." For half a century this totally blind mendicant has fiddled his way along the Perthshire roads, accompanied by two dogs. He shares all his meals with the dogs and at night wraps his sixteen-foot tartan plaid about them and himself and sleeps out under a tree.

Eighty-Year Veteran.

"Old Johnson" is another. He's a genial fellow in a Balmoral bonnet and tattered frock coat. He has a wealth of humor and is known to be a master of repartee. He has been on the road for eighty years.

Highland tramps, or "tinkers" as they are called around Rannoch Moor, speak the Gaelic language. They move in clans and are known by the family names which often go back for centuries. The oldest member of the clan is the chief and his word is law. They are strict Sabbatarians and will not even blow their bagpipes for alms on Sunday.

Special Privileges.

One old woman who has been on the tramp in the Western Highlands for seventy-five years boasts that she has never slept in a bed. She has brought up a family on the king's Highway and wears a wedding ring that has been handed down from mother to daughter in her clan for 300 years.

They have a jolly life. Every five or six miles along the road is a "tramp's hotel"—a barn or hut where they can rest for the night or find shelter from the storms. The Highland farmers and shepherds know them by name and exchange greetings whenever they meet.

Taxes and bank failures never worry them and at the end there is a tramps cemetery in Stirlingshire called "No Man's Land."

WARSAW NEWS

WARSAW, Sept. 22.— In the northern part of the township, near Stoney Lake, many of the crops are reported very good. Mr. Hull is said to have as fine a field of corn as can be seen anywhere. Grain crops already threshed have turned out well.

Near Warsaw perhaps Mr. Gordon Payne has as fine looking a field of corn as is to be seen. It is grown on the southern slope.

Mr. James Blakeley threshed about six hundred bushels of good fall wheat from about twenty acres. Bert Cuffe also has threshed good wheat, and has sold quite a lot for this fall's seeding. Ther are a lot of really good oats, and Bert Hendren is reported as having had a good a field of corn as seen.

Mrs. Arthur Carveth and Mrs. John Tucker had tomatoes ripe before any others.

Mrs. Albert McQuag had about the largest local crop of strawberries. She had two acres, which bore well.

There was some very good hay, especially alfalfa, in the district.

When one of the large stores in London decreed that its employees must wear their hair long, the bobbed-hair girls adopted a novel and ingenious subterfuge to retain their jobs and their "bobs" at the same time. They all bought themselves the most sedate of artificial chignons, which they attach to the backs of their heads on arriving at business every morning, but which they carefully remove before they emerge into the street at closing-time.

CONTRACTOR FOUND WAY TO HEALTH

After Suffering Tortures From Indigestion and Run-Down Condition, He Quickly Regains Health and Strength—Takes Tanlac.

Edison Bradshaw, a successful Toronto contractor, 413 Wellesley street, says: "I hope my story will be the means of helping others who suffered as I did. I feel like a new man, thanks to Tanlac.

"Before taking Tanlac, I doctored for nervous prostration, but seemed to be getting worse. I had no appetite, and when I forced myself to eat the pains from Indigestion were torture. My heart bothered me after the slightest exertion. I was nervous and irritable and could scarcely sleep. At times I would doze off, then suddenly my muscles would twitch and I would awake with a start. I was almost in despair.

"Nothing seemed to help me, until I started to take Tanlac. The first two bottles made me feel so much better that I kept on taking it. Now my appetite is very good, stomach normal, nerves in good shape. I can sleep well at night, in fact have entirely recovered.

"I heartily recommend Tanlac because I feel sure it will do for others what it has done for me in restoring my health."

Tanlac has helped thousands of men and women. It is nature's own remedy made from roots and herbs according to the famous Tanlac formula. The first bottle, as a rule, brings wonderful relief. Keep up the treatment and see how quickly you will grow stronger and healthier.

CHILDREN'S AID HOLDS TAG DAY

Second Saturday in October Chosen For Annual Effort.

BOARD MEETING.

The first Fall meeting of the Board of Management of the Children's Aid Society, was held yesterday afternoon in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, the president, B. F. Ackerman, in the chair, and the following being present: Messrs. J. Edgar, G. W. Powell, F. H. Dobbin, J. Abraham, W. Stocker, W. J. Hopwood, Rev. P. Costello, and Mesdames Gibbs, Fanning, Welsh, Devey and Hodgson.

The minutes of the last regular meeting of the Board were read by the secretary, J. Edgar, the report of the purchasing committee by Mrs. W. H. Gibbs, and the agent's report by G. W. Powell.

A resolution was passed, deciding that the matron of the Shelter be given two weeks' holiday annually at the expense of the Board, the matron to be requested to take her holiday in June, and to provide a substitute satisfactory to the Board, who will pay the salary of the same.

A letter of resignation was received from one of the Board members, Mrs. L. M. Brooks, Sherbrooke street, and acknowledgment was made of the receipt of five dollars from a quintette of young ladies who had an afternoon tea and donated the proceeds to the society: Shirley Deyell, Helen Rogers, Jennie Butcher, Alma Powers and Virginia Deyell.

Use of Fall Fairs.

Mr. Edgar read a letter from J. J. Kelso in Toronto, urging the use of Fall fairs as advertising media for the Children's Aid Societies, and Mr. Edgar reported a gratifying response from the advertisement of the local branch at the recent Peterborough fair, when a tent was supplied free of charge by J. J. Turner and Sons, free space donated by the Exhibition Board, and many visitors came to enquire about the work of the organization. Seven applications for children resulted from this effort. A vote of thanks was passed by the Board to Messrs. Turner and Sons, the Exhibition Board, and the Knights of Columbus, who entertained the children of the Shelter during the Fair week.

Owing to an intimation from the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Frank G. Stinson, that the work of the Chamber in issuing automobile licenses would be facilitated by the Board commencing its regular monthly meetings at five instead of four o'clock, and on account of the members finding this hour inconvenient, it was decided to interview the city clerk with regard to securing use of the council chamber or other civic office for holding meetings. The matter was left in the hands of the secretary.

Annual Tag Day.

The question of tag day brought up the old discussion with regard to the advisability of scrapping this annual effort altogether, and applying directly to the City and County Councils for the assessment allowed the Society under the Act.

"The sooner you abandon tag day altogether and requisition the councils for your needs, the better," was the expressed opinion of one member, and one of the ladies asserted that "the members of the Board of Education don't go out begging on the streets for money when they need it."

It was finally decided, on account of what was referred to as "a gentleman's agreement," made earlier in the year with the councils, that the Society should hold a tag day this year, which will possibly be the last effort of the sort. The second Saturday in October was chosen and Mr. Edgar was placed in charge with power to form a committee of helpers.

Mr. Edgar read a letter from the matron, Mrs. D. Rogers, thanking the Board for the holidays recently granted her.

Mr. Powell reported six applications for children made during the past month, and one child returned to parents (not a ward.)

The following donations were acknowledged: A friend, clothing; Mrs. Foster, apples; Mr. Oke, peaches; Mrs. E. F. Mason, suit and coats; Miss Peck, clothing; St. James' booth weiners and bread.

The following accounts were passed: Fitzpatrick and Geraghty, $21.66; Peterboro Utilities, $8.45; Stock's Bread, $10.26; Peterborough Milk Products, $18.36; T. L. Edwards, $13.37; Peterboro Examiner, Ltd., $1.80; Grant and Thorpe, 50c; Canadian Packing Company, $15.75; Kingan Hardware Company, $2.50; Sanitary Ice Supply, $8.00; J. C. Turnbull Co., $1.66; R. Neill, $8.09; Peterboro Lumber Co., $7.00; R. Hall & Son, $4.34; R. Denne, $2.75, Mrs. Rogers (plums) $1.60; Mr. Powell, $5.90, J. J. Turner and Son, $5.00 (sign for tent.) Mr. Edgar, $6.69; telephones, $6.40; Thomas Miller, $9.45; total $159.59.

Care of Diocese of Algoma Given Up By Archbishop.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Sept. 22. —(Canadian Press.) — It was announced here to-day that Archbishop Thorneloe, owing to age and ill health, had tendered his resignation as Bishop of Algoma. In the event of his resignation being accepted, Dr. R. R. Smith, who yesterday became Bishop coadjutor, would take the post of Bishop.

CAT'S MEAT MAN IS REAL CATERER

Social Degree Among Felines in England—Very Discriminating.

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 22. —(Canadian Press). — In order of precedence the cat's meat man comes last in the ranks of caterers, says a correspondent of the "Times." He deserves no such fate, for the provides for millions of real personalities. Like many deserving people he is not thriving; yet will meet him still in streets which were once respectable—streets which resounded in their day to the stately bustle of carriages and pairs. In these streets the houses are of the Georgian period and they are full of social memories. They have great basements and hall doors now wear a forbidding look, as if they were the portals to cenotaphs of departed greatness.

Outside them on a cold and foggy morning you may hear the nasal cry of "Me', Me', Me" and the dismal thoroughfare becomes populated with cats. Out comes the regular customers; and out come the paupers. Of course, your aristocratic cat does not dwell here. He has no need of the cat's meat man.

There are social degrees among cats. There is the high-class cat who is a colleague of the butler and the footman—the cat with the slow, unctuous walk who is under no necessity to whine for his food. There is the cat who abides with the middle classes and accomodates himself to moderate means. There is the cat of the poor who really has to work for his living and who often dwells in the suburbs of starvation. Last of all, there is the cat with no abode at all, the cat who doesn't know why he was ever born or why his existenec should be merely a famished sleep as a trespasser behind someone's railings.

Now all these cats, with the exception of the aristocratic cat—the Persian or the Maltese and such like purr with delight and expectation at the sound of "Me', Me', Me'." They erect their tails and hunch their backs and stride after the barrow. Some know—you can see it on their faces—that their meal has been paid for in advance; some implore credit in a weak voice; others, obviously destitute, crave a lick of the skewer which pins the horse-steaks together.

The cat's meat man is human. He knows that "Me,' Me', Me' " has summoned not only solvent cats but impoverished and hungry cats from subterranean places; and in the fulness so his heart he steals a bit from the paying guest to help the guest who could never pay. The richer cats take their meals as a matter of right. The poor cats show their gratitude by rubbing their sides against the trousers of the cat's meat man. Then down the street goes the barrow with a "Me', Me', Me'." and the cat's meat man vanishes.

All verdure has been stripped from a seven-acre wood in England by an invasion of starlings. Millions of the birds killed all the small trees.

Prince Leopold shown above, heir to the Belgian throne, officially betrothed to Princess Astrid of Sweden, niece of King Gustav. It is said that the affair is a love match, as both had been offered other royal matches repeatedly.

DEATH LIST GROWS AT ENCARNACION

Estimated That Hurricane Has Caused 200 Fatalities.

ASUNCION, PARAGUAY, Sept. 22. — Canadian Press. — The death list in the hurricane which struck the city of Encarnacion on Monday night continues to grow. With exact figures still lacking official reports estimate the dead at 200 while other sources say it will reach 500.

One hundred bodies were buried yesterday and the work of extricating the victims from the debris is still going on.

The property damage will exceed $1,000,000.

CONVICT TO HANG FOR KILLING GUARD

Sentenced To-day After Being Found Guilty of Murder.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 22. — Thomas McCoskey, a Russian of Toronto, was this afternoon found guilty by a jury in the Assize Court of Murdering Earl Jenkins, guard at the Portsmouth Penitentiary, on August 21st and was sentenced by Justice Logie to be hanged on November 26th.

While at work on the prison farm McCoskey struck guard Jenkins over the head several times with a crow bar. Jenkins died from the injuries a few minutes after he had been removed to the Hotel Dieu.

PRINCESS DECRIES ROYAL EASE IDEAS

Sister of King Boris Would Prefer Home Life.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—(Associated Press).—Princess Eudoxie of Bulgaria, the 28-year-old sister of King Boris and daughter of the former Czar Ferdinand, in her memoirs published in the "National Zeitung" shows that a princess does not always have such a "soft snap."

She describes the training she and her brother received for their royal station, but confesses to having a decided predilection for a home life which, she says, "may seem anomalous in our present era of excitement, but is perhaps to be explained by the absence of woman-suffrage in our country." As in Bulgaria women are rather inclined to adapt themselves to the reasoning of men, the Princess considers such an innovation uncalled for.

Likes Simplicity.

The royal writer refutes the frequent opinion that princesses only wear gorgeous gowns and bedeck themselves with rare jewels.

"On the stage and the screen," she declares, "we are even portrayed with diamond crowns and robes of ermine. But as a matter of fact I prefer the simplest of clothes and during the last two years have only had two new gowns made, all-Bulgarian in style, material and workmanship.

Expenses entailed by a more costly wardrobe the Princess insists she can use to a better purpose in alleviating the distress of the many impoverished Bulgarians. But, unfortunately, there are never sufficient funds available to supply the wants of all.

She declares herself convinced that a woman serves her country and humanity best as a good housewife.

No Intimate Friends.

Upon rising, Princess Eudoxie immediately helps her brother with his fairly bulky correspondence. She and the King then have an early lunch and frequently dine together at 2 o'clock. The hour before dinner is set aside for official visits. She depolres the lack of intimates, most of her friends having moved to other countries when they married. After dinner there is a respite during which she either plays tennis or rides horseback. At times she and the King also take a motor ride or mount a motorcycle.

Princess Eudoxie excels as a linguist, speaking, reading and writing fluently English, German, French, Italian and Russian, and being thoroughly conversant with the literature of these languages.

Stock Prices Go Down In Professional Attack

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—Stock prices displayed a complete reversal of form in today's market, opening strong in response to aggressive buying operations by professional traders, but turning weak in the early afternoon when the bears gained the upper hand and started to hammer stocks in all sections of the list.

Re-action started in such favorites as Allied Chemical, American Smelting, and United States Steel. International Combustion and Electric Refrigeration were driven down to new low level for the year. Low and medium - priced motors were thrown on to the market in large volume on reports that quarterly earnings of several companies would not come up to earlier expectations, although General Motors continued to receive strong buying support.

Trading showed a marked falling off in volume and was essentially of a professional character.

Wheat Price Advances On Report Of Snowfall

CHICAGO, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—With reports at hand telling of heavy snow and rain in Canada, wheat scored an advance to-day after weakness at the start. Opening unchanged to 1¼c down, Chicago wheat values later showed material gains all around. Corn, oats and provisions were firmer, corn starting unchanged to ¼c higher, and subsequently showing a general upturn.

NEW MODERN CITY OF DAIREN BUILT TO ORDER BY JAPANESE ALREADY SECOND PORT OF CHINA

Handles More Trade Than Any City Except Shanghai.

PLANNED BY RUSSIA.

Southern Manchuria Railway, Subsidized By Japan, Owns Much of City.

By RANDALL GOULD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

DAIREN, Manchuria (United Press)—When the steamship traveler touches the southern tip of the South Manchuria peninsula at the port of Dairen, he gazes upon an array of modern wharves, thoroughly Occidental buildings, electric and steam railways.

Dairen to a certain extent is "made in America" but it is owned and operated by Japanese. The outstanding element of Dairen which is constantly brought out is its trade importance—that it is the port for a hinterland of some 150,000 square miles of South Manchuria, that its 250,000 inhabitants handle a trade greater than Canton, than Tientsin, than any China port (excluding Hongkong as British) save Shanghai.

Dairen is a city made to order. It was planned by the Russians, with park-like circles and streets spider-webbing out in all directions in a most interesting and inconvenient manner. The Russo-Japanese war cooked the goose of Russian aspirations at Dairen, and Japan took over as a result of the Portsmouth Treaty.

Japan developed along the lines the Russians had laid down. She did the job on a big scale, organizing the South Manchuria Railway Company—now a semi-Government semi-private affair—and bringing up the youthful city of Dairen in the way it should go.

To-day Dairen has a mixed population of Japanese, Chinese and Russians. It is of course the Japanese who are on top of the pile in every respect. But Japanese in Dairen are not Japanese in the old sense, and they are not Japanese in even the present-day Japan sense; they are a couple who to-day live in an atmosphere of future times.

When one lands in Dairen he goes first to the excellent Yamato hotel, owned by the South Manchurian Railway. Later he sallies forth to view the sights of the town which include such excellent institutions as the Public Library, under management of the South Manchurian Railway, the Dairen Hospital, operated by the South Manchurian Railway, the Electric Works (of the S. M. R.), the interesting Central Laboratory (of the S. M. R.), and divers other well-organized and well-operated things of interest.

Viewing the residential sections in their turn, one learns that the uniform high quality of the homes is accounted for by a most convenient financing plan operated by the railway for its employees, who receive a housing allowance and are encouraged to build.

Not everything in Dairen is owned by the railway. But almost everything got its start through the railway. Dairen is the carefully molded child of a picked parentage, so to speak. Some of the best brains of Japan have been working to make the city what it is. Everything runs properly, harbor and other development is going ahead rapidly, and the booster spirit is reminiscent of America.

It is not to be thought that nothing Oriental is to be seen. Feminine kimonos flutter everywhere, a cheerful reminder of Japan. One suddenly discovers a sacred torii, with a vista toward another torii, and is told that this is the official Dairen shrine. Street signs are in Japanese, though Roman characters are used for the official signs such as those giving names of streets.

Ricshas are everywhere—the high Japanese style of ricsha, but drawn by Chinese coolies. Labor is still cheap in Dairen because of the presence of the Chinese, though it is less cheap than in China proper. Oriental tile roofs are frequent, but they are apt to be on top of foreign-style brick buildings. In general Dairen is in a transition stage just as is Japan, but it is a new town and it started from scratch with no Oriental factors to weed out.

Dairen stands to-day as a city of contrasts a highly profitable laboratory for Japan's social and economic experiments. The world as a whole should know more of Dairen. Dairen knows a good deal of the world. Its World War memorial is a futuristic affair of cubist tendency which would be interesting in any city. The clamor of its electric street cars blends with the deep note of distant temple gongs. Dairen is tasting of everything, old and new. It is an efficient city but it is a human city.

New York Goes on Batting Rampage Against Chicago Pitchers.

TWO HOME RUNS.

Uhle Pitches 26th Victory For Cleveland Against Boston.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—New York retained its three-game margin over the Cleveland Indians by swamping the White Sox, 14 to 0, while Cleveland defeated Boston. The League leaders went on a batting rampage against three Chicago pitchers. Babe Ruth knocked out his 44th home run with a man on base, and Lazzerri collecting his 18th blow with a man on the sack. Lazzerri featured the attack. Waite Hoyt held Chicago to two hits, one of which came in the seventh when Sheely singled, and the other in the ninth when Collins hit safely. Aside from the first inning, when a base on balls and an error put two men on base, Hoyt pitched a perfect game.

Cleveland had no difficulty winning from Boston yesterday, 6 to 1. Uhle, pitching his 26th victory, held Boston to four hits, the Red Sox being saved a shutout by Rosenthal's home run over the right field wall.

Ruffing's wildness in the first inning allowed Cleveland to score twice, while his ineffectiveness and poor support permitted three more in the third. Both Welzer and Harriss, who followed Ruffing, were effective.

The Washington Senators pounded Falk, Vangilder and Ballou for seventeen hits and made it three straight over the St. Louis Browns, 11 to 6. The game was loosely played, the Browns making three errors, and the pitchers for both sides allowing a total of fourteen walks.

The Athletics made it two out of three from the Tigers in their present series, winning three to two, behind Ehmke's good pitching. Rudolph Kneisch purchased from the Shamokin Club of the New York-Pennsylvania League, went the entire distance in his major league debut. An error by Blue in the first inning gave the Athletics two of their scores.

FOUR RUN RALLY IN EIGHTH HANDS ROBINS VICTORY

Cardinals Held To Six Hits in Opening Game of Series.

SAME STANDING.

Reds Defeated in Last Tilt of Cincinnati-Boston Series.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—Jess Petty held the League leading Cardinals to six hits yesterday, while the Robins staged a four-run rally in the eighth to beat their old time foe, Bill Sherdel, and won the opener of a two-game series by 4 to 3. As the Reds bowed to the Braves yesterday, St. Louis retained its two-game margin in first place.

The Robins wasted their earlier opportunities but went to work in earnest in the eighth. Singles by Deberry and Cox, coupled with Sherdel's wild throw on Petty's grounder, filled the bases with one out. Grover Alexander was called to the rescue, but Carey's single, a pass to Herman and Butler's single drove in all the Brooklyn runs.

Bottomley's triple, followed by Lester Bell's sacrifice fly, gave St. Louis a run in the second inning. In the ninth Douthit led off with a single and Holm, pinch-hitting for Southworth, flied out to Cox. Hornsby came through with a double to centre, scoring Douthit. Carey fumbled the ball and Hornsby took third. Bottomley lined to Herman, who threw over Marriott's head in attempting to catch Hornsby off third and Hornsby registered at the plate. Lester Bell popped out to end the contest.

Boston once more proved had medicine for Cincinnati, winning the last game of the Boston series, 4 to 0, and making it three straight against the second place Reds. Pete Donohue met the same fate that Eppa Rixey and Luque, other Cincinnati pitching stars, encountered in previous games. He was knocked out of the box in the fifth inning. Genewich kept the eight Cincinnati hits scattered and received brilliant support. Three double plays helped him considerably.

The Phillies bunched their hits on Lee Meadows yesterday and defeated the visiting Pirates by a score of 7 to 2. Cy Williams hit the bespectacled pitcher for two doubles and his eighteenth home run of the year in four times at bat.

Fred Fitzsimmons turned in his 13th victory of the year yesterday for the Giants by defeating Chicago Cubs in the third game of the series 5-2. New York grouped four hits, with an error, in the sixth to score four runs. Jack Cummings, Wheeler rookie catcher with the Giants, drove in two runs with a double.

LOW SCORING IN GOLF TOURNEY

Easy Victories in First Round of Professional Golf Championship.

JIM BARNES OUT.

GARDEN CITY, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—A wave of low scoring swept over the Salisbury Links yesterday, carrying Walter Hagen, Leo Diegel, Johnny Farrell and Gene Sarazen on its crest to easy victories in the first round of the Professional Golf Association championship.

Joe Turnesa, of Elmsford, N.Y., offered less vigorous opposition to Hagen than a score of 3 and 2 might indicate. The defending champion, steering carefully through Salisbury's maze of traps, cut loose at the start with a commanding lead against the youth who finished second in the recent national open and was unextended to win on the 34th green.

Yesterday saw the passing from the fight of Jim Barnes, former open and professional title holder, who succumbed to a brilliant spurt by Sarazen 5 and 4. Others who kissed the turf during the day were Al Watrous, Bobbie Cruickshank, former open champion, and Harry Cooper, of Kansas City.

DEMPSEY IN TRAINING

Jack Dempsey is now rehearsing in private for his coming bout with Gene Tunney, but that does not prevent the camera man from catching him going through a few stunts with one of his trainers.

TUNNEY PUTS IN FINAL TOUCHES TO HIS TRAINING

Challenger Practices Blocking For Eight Minutes With Trainers Yesterday.

RESTS TO-DAY.

Weight Before Last Workout Measures About 191 Pounds.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—Although Gene Tunney formally closed his training season Monday, he made a last-minute change in his schedule yesterday and added finishing touches to his defensive programme. Without warning the challenger appeared in the ring late yesterday afternoon, and after a brief period of bag-punching, spent eight minutes practicing blocking.

Billy Vidabeck and Harold Mays were summoned and instructed to fling punches at the challenger with a bandon. Right well did they carry out their orders. Tunney, however, parred on cleverly added most of the hard-driven blows. Showing impressive fleetness of floor he ducked out of range almost at will or brushed the blows aside.

To-day will be a day of complete rest, it was announced. No work is anticipated for the challenger. His weight yesterday before the workout was about 191 pounds, attired in an approximation of the ring togs he will wear against Dempsey.

In a conversation with newspaper men and women after his informal training period, Tunney indicated that the boxer with a thousand epigrams has been shelved until after the bout in favor of hard-boiled battler trying to win fame and much money.

DEMPSEY BARS OUTSIDERS FROM FINAL WORKOUT

Guards Stationed at Gates of Greyhound Racing Track Yesterday.

SET FOR FIGHT.

Official Report Says He Shadowed, Boxed and Practised Footwork.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Sept. 22 (Canadian Press). — With guards stationed at the gates barring admittance to all outsiders, Jack Dempsey yesterday pulled the veil of secrecy around his final workout in preparation for the defence of his world's heavyweight championship against Gene Tunney in Philadelphia to-morrow night.

The champion, attended by four detectives as bodyguards, drove up to the gates of the Greyhound Racing Track shortly after 3 o'clock. The gates swung open for Dempsey and his party to roll through, then they were banged shut, with the newspaper correspondents on the outside.

The official report of the champion's activities was that he shadow boxed two rounds, drummed the light bag for two rounds and drove punches into the heavy swinging bag for a round. Then he called his sparring partners into his dressing-room and bade them all a fond farewell, giving each a warm handshake. They filed into the dressing-room, one at a time, to greet the champion and wish him luck.

"I am ready," Dempsey said, after the workout. "I felt great today. I hope I feel as well when I go into the ring. I am about on edge now. To-morrow I will just get up out at my bungalow and probably take a morning walk. I am confident that I will defeat Tunney. I intend to win as quickly as possible,—in the first round if I can."

CHANNEL SWIMMER.

This is Norman Derehart of South End, England, who won a newspaper prize of $5000 by swimming the channel last week in better time than Gertrude Ederle's record.

REPUTATIONS NOT CORRECT

Tunney Not as "Sissified" as Reported, Nor Dempsey as Rough.

MANY STORIES.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22 (United Press).—Since Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney opened the camps in which they trained for the fight here Thursday night that will decide the world's heavyweight champion, a new world's record has been established for the bunk that was sent out to the public.

Tunney was made a victim of more misinformation than Dempsey because Dempsey had been through enough training camp ordeals to know that it is essential to have some privacy.

When Dempsey goes into his cottage after a day's work, only intimate friends that the champion wants to see are permitted to pass the shock troops outside. Mike Trant, Chicago detective sergeant, has been around Dempsey's camps for so many years that he knows without asking the few that wouldn't annoy the champion.

It isn't that Dempsey is clannish or that he wouldn't like to have himself surrounded with friends but he knows that it isn't conducive to rest or peace to listen to a flock of "yes men." The result is that hundreds misinformed stories about what Dempsey does in his private quarters are sent out, what he eats, how he sleeps, what kind of night clothes he wears, etc.

It will be recalled that stories were printed that Firpo, when he was training for Dempsey, wouldn't sleep on a mattress and that he preferred a bed of rocks. That, of course, was silly but a lot of readers believed it.

Instead of making a cave-man out of Tunney, the other extreme was taken up. From some stories you would pick Tunney as an intellectual sissy. Tunney is a very intelligent young man and he reads some very good books and is not defeated when he opens a book of verse.

But he does not quote poetry in his conversation beyond popular expressions that are used in every-day language. He does not use "two dollar" words and his conversation is no more high-browed than Dempsey's. Dempsey uses more slang than Tunney but it is parlor slang and not bar-room wise cracks. Tunney is quoted more often than Dempsey because he talks a lot more than the champion. Dempsey is one of the world's champion listeners and he has picked up a lot by it.

The mistaken idea was broadcast that Tunney was braggard and it went so far that Dempsey told one of his friends — "Let him do the talking. But this thing isn't a debate."

Tunney was amused by the stories of his intellectual leaners and being a pronounced practical joker he would cut loose around a stranger with a lot of words that would cause a dash for a dictionary. It is his way of having a good time and carrying out an act that was forced on him.

"You know Gene don't recite all those poems and when I can understand him it's a cinch he isn't using high brow language. It's good publicity and it's not harming any one," Billy Gibson, his manager, said.

Dempsey and Tunney are just two natural, likeable fellows and for one, the writer, hates to see either one of them lose. Tunney is easier for a stranger to approach because he is naturally affable and Dempsey is naturally retiring and at times almost shy. As far as the writer knows, Dempsey never has been discourteous to a newspaperman, and Tunney makes you feel at the first meeting as if he has known you for years. Both of them are sharks on remembering names and faces and the faculty was not cultivated for commercial purposes.

Dempsey is sensitive about allusions to his "hobo days" and Tunney resents too much of a suggestion that he is lady like. Dempsey certainly isn't a hobo and it's quite a cinch that there's nothing effeminate about Tunney.

Catcher in throwing to second in an effort to get a runner stealing comes into contact with the umpire. The throw is wild the ball going to right field. Runner continues on his way and is retired at the plate trying to score from first. What about it?

* * *

This is one of the few plays where the ball becomes dead because of an act of the umpire in interfering with the play.

The moment the catcher came into contact with the umpire as he started the throw to second, play should have immediately been suspended.

No consideration should be given the wild throw that resulted or the fact that the runner was ultimately retired at the plate on the play.

The runner should merely have been sent back to first, his original base.

ORMISTON DENIAL CAUSE OF ACTION

Attorney Exhibits Telegrams To Prove His Good Faith.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 22.—Immediate action yesterday followed the statement issued in behalf of Kenneth Ormiston in Chicago that the former radio operator of Angelus Temple had not offered to surrender in return for immunity in the McPherson case, and that S. S. Hahn, the Los Angeles attorney who negotiated with District Attorney Keyes for immunity, was not authorized by Ormiston to appear for him.

Hahn issued a vitriolic statement and exhibited telegrams to support his assertions that he had acted in good faith and with proper authority. Hahn alleges a conspiracy existed whereby $500,000 was to be exacted from Angelus Temple followers for the return of Mrs. McPherson from a fake kidnapping.

Federal authorities may also take action in the McPherson case, it was indicated, when Bernice Morris was summoned by post office ispectors to be questioned. Miss Morris was secretary of the late R. A. McKinley, blind attorney. She has asserted she was to take part in a plot to produce fake kidnappers.

The preliminary hearing of the evangelist and those accused with her will open next Monday.

LEGAL TROUBLE NOT OVER YET

None of Many Actions Likely To Interrupt Title Bout.

FIGHTERS READY.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—The day before the battle found Dempsey and Tunney still behind the smoke screen of legal entanglements, and the city of Philadelphia swamped by an advance influx of one of the greatest crowds ever gathered for a sporting spectacle anywhere.

None of the dozen or more court cases started either by Jack Kearns, Dempsey's former manager, or B. C. Clements, Chicago promoter, appeared likely to upset the plans for the bout, but rival squads of lawyers were prepared for any and all eleventh-hour manoeuvres.

No champion since the days of the Boston "Strong Boy," John L. Sullivan, has been made as overwhelming a favorite as Jack Dempsey has been established. In spite of the somewhat belated trend of sentiment among observers of Gene Tunney, during the last few days, the majority opinion has remained strongly in Dempsey's favor.

Both champion and challenger have tapered off their training and consider themselves in the best condition possible.

ANOTHER INJUNCTION.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—(Canadian Press.) — Another injunction suit was filed in the Common Pleas Court to stop the Dempsey-Tunney bout here to-morrow night. This time the Sesqui-Centennial Exhibition Company and the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission are defendants in an action brought by B. C. Clements, of the Chicago Coliseum Club.

RECORD PURSE FOR BIG MATCH

Gate of Two Million Expected By Rickard and Officials.

OTHER BIG GATES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (Associated Press).—All boxing records for attendance and gate receipts appear certain to be shattered when Jack Dempsey crawls through the ropes in the Sesqui-Centennial Stadium at Philadelphia to-morrow to defend his title against the ex-Marine, Gene Tunney.

The expectations of Tex Rickard and Sesqui officials are that more than 130,000 spectators will pay approximately $2,000,000 to see the first heavyweight championship match in over three years, with the gigantic concrete structure, centered in the historic Exposition grounds, witnessing an unprecedented spectacle in sports.

Set Previous Record.

Rickard reached astonishing promotion heights in 1921 when he attracted a throng of 90,000 fans who paid $1,600,000 to see Dempsey knock out the spetcacular Frenchman, Georges Carpentier, in four rounds in the wooden saucer at Boyle's Thirty Acres, Jersey City. These records are the high marks for boxing now but they promise to be substantially bettered at Philadelphia.

It has been only in recent years that boxing, especially in the heavyweight class, has reached such planes of frenzied finance. The era of big bowls and stadiums, plus greater popular interest, has made million-dollar affairs of these big title bouts, with Dempsey the central drawing card.

The present champion has fought only six times in seven years, including the bout in which he took the title away from Jess Willard in 1919, but these half dozen appearances have attracted gate receipts approximating $4,000,000, with Dempsey's share running around $1,000,000.

Previous Totals.

Here are the figures on the "big money" bouts (the winner coming first in each case):

1921—J. Dempsey vs. Georges Carpentier—90,000; reecipts $1,626,580.

1923—J. Dempsey vs. Luis Angel Firpo—85,000; reecipts, $1,188,822.

1920—Jack Dempsey vs. Bill Brennan—15,000; receipts, $162,000.

THEATRE

AT THE REGENT

MANY SCENES OF MIAMI IN "THE CRACKER JACK."

Entire Johnny Hines Cast Spent Six Weeks Filming Production in Famed Winter Resort.

When "The Cracker Jack" with Johnny Hines in the stellar role comes to the Regent Theatre, patrons will be able to obtain a good idea of what the famed winter resort, Miami, Florida, looks like.

Johnny and his complete cast, which included Henry West, J. Barney Sherry, Bradley Barker and Horace Haines, spent over a month and a half in this locale to secure the exterior sequences of this much-heralded production. Included in the scenes the theatre-goer will be able to view the famed Silver Slipper Cafe with its equally well-known Vincent Lopez orchestra supplying the music for the throngs of tourists who flocked there. The Coral Gables Country Club is also prominently shown, as is the gorgeous Deering Estate and the Local Masonic Temple, the architecture of which is completely Egyptian. Each of these well-known places were used in "The Cracker Jack" as back ground for the rollicking action of the story, in which Hines, cast as Tommy Perkins, a live-wire college boy, brings fame and fortune to his uncle's pickle products.

AT THE GRAND

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS.

The appearance here at the Grand Opera House, yesterday, of George White's famous Scandals gave Peterboro play-goers their first opportunity of seeing an up to the minute American revue and the laughter and applause indicated that they enjoyed it.

It would indeed have been difficult not to have found many things in Mr. White's lavish production to enjoy.

The famous producer does not do things by halves and thus the Scandals in the parlance of baseball "everything".

Wonderful settings, bewilderingly beautiful costumes, pretty girls —a whole lot of them—delightful dancing, captivating music and a liberal sprinkling of comedy features the whole served at high tempo and with no dull intervals made the production memorable.

The Scandals showed Peterboro more girls—and incidently more girl—than any other presentation seen here but while the scantiness of some costumes even more than the gorgeousness of others caused more than one gasp in the audience the numbers were done so gracefully and with such a total absence of vulgarity and suggestiveness that the net defect was pleasing rather than shocking.

Mr. White has given the production seen here yesterday, the advantage of a company of principals dancers and chorus, that is thoroughly adequate. The clever work of Jean White, the effective comedy methods of Fred Lightner, the fine singing of Ethel Raye and Ace Brown, the toe dancing of Jenny Lind, the wonderful acrobatic dance numbers of the D Torego's and the equally clever stepping of Al Kimm and Ross were standards in a performance that was brimful of sparkling specialties. The skits which included a burlesque on the last act ofAbie's Irish Rose were for the most part clever tooling and even several old stories were given a new effectivenes. Some of the ensemble numbers provided as striking stage pictures as the Grand has witnessed, notably, the Garden, Wedding and Araby numbers in the first act and the Mah Jonng, Congo and Madrid scenes, in the second part of the programme. The rich colours and the most striking use of lighting effects gave these scenes a spectacular beauty that will long be remembered.

The musical hits included "Araby" splendidly sung by Ace Brown. "Want a Lovable Baby," by Jean White, "Red Red Robin" and "Everything's Going To Be All Right" by Fred Lightner and the "Garden" song by Ethel Raye. The Harmony Trio was of much assistance and the Royal Sheik Filipino Orchestra added colour to some of the musical numbers.

George White's "Scandals" all in all was a feast, both for eye and ear and the magnitude and charm of the performance showed effectively why Mr. White's productions have such a vogue.

Last night's presentation was a fitting opening to a theatrical season that promises to be unusually replete with worth while attractions among which "The Student Prince" which is coming next month.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS HOLD CONVENTION

Stirling, Rawdon and Marmora Association Meets.

MARMORA, Sept. 22.—The annual convention of the Stirling, Rawdon and Marmora Sunday School Association was held in Carmel United Church, a short distance west of Stirling yesterday. The weather was ideal and both afternoon and evening sessions were well attended, delegates being present from nearly all of the fifteen Sunday schools in the Association. Inspiring addresses were delivered by Rev. E. O. Seymour, provincial representative, and Rev. C. W. Barrett, of Stirling. In checking up the various schools with the International standard, it was found that three schools have reached 105 per cent., one school 100 per cent., and nearly all other schools show improvement during the past year. The provincial representative explained that the township standing, according to the standard, is ninety-five per cent., the five points being lost on account of so few Sunday schools having sent delegates to the provincial convention in Hamilton. All schools are urged to send one or more delegates to the coming provincial convention this fall, as well as to the county county convention at Stirling in October. An invitation was received from F. S. Pearce, superintendent of Marmora United Sunday school to hold the next township convention in that church, which was accepted.

The banner Sunday school was found to be Stirling United and the banner was presented to C. W. Thompson, the superintendent, who thanked the Association and expressed the hope that their school would still go onward during the coming years.

The following officers were elected and installed, in a very impressive manner by Rev. F. G. Joblin; President, Fred Hulin; 1st Vice-President, Sanford Meiklejohn; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. W. L. Anderson; Secretary-Treasurer, J. F. Baker; Department Superintendents: Children's work, Miss Hazel Bateman; Boys' work, William Warren; Girls' work, Mrs. F. Hutchinson; Young People's, Thomas McMullen; Adult Division, A. Brown; Home Department, Miss A. Hume; Teacher Training, Mrs. A. P. Williams; Missionary, Miss Gena Sprv; Temperance, F. S. Pearce.

THE PROVINCIAL ELECTION

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—The latest "authentic" information is that Premier Ferguson will go to the country on Prohibition as it is. In other words, he has swung over to the Drys. It is said that he feels that he can rely upon party men to stand by him no matter what he does, just as they stood by Meighen in his effort to sell out to the Nationalistes, although I do not for one moment compare prohibitionists with Nationalists. In connection with this statement I must admit, in passing, that an unexpectedly large number of our best citizens have told me that they are not in favor of the British Empire idea and favored Meighen's proposition.

Formerly prohibitionists demanded that alcohol be abolished because it was a curse, but when it was found that alcohol exists by the order of Nature and of God in every living thing from first to last, it was found impossible to extinguish it.

The New Case

Hence modern prohibition confines itself to the prohibition of the manufacture of alcohol for beverage purposes, and manifestly if it is not manufactured (publicly or privately) it cannot be drunk.

The First Question

The first question that arises is "What right has anybody else to interfere in my private life, so long as I obey the unwritten law of common decency and self-respect?"

The present-day answer to that question is that whatever injures the people as a whole must cease so far as it can be made to cease. Thus the whole matter reduces itself to the question of the Public Weal against Private Weal. Formerly the public weal as expressed in public laws, dealt with the transfer of property, the protection of property and the protection of the person.

Now it goes farther and compels people to practise virtues such as giving to the poor, helping the sick and so forth, which formerly were voluntary and had no public endowment. People soon began to say that their governments ought to look after these matters, also, and hence public hospitals, refuges, health officers, children's societies, etc., sprang up under a government (not private) control and management.

What About Liquor?

Then the question arose, "What is to be done with alcoholic liquors?"

The answer came "Put them under the ban for drinking purposes. Prohibit their manufacture and then all disorders arising from them will cease or almost so."

The great question of private right and of the privileges formerly attaching to private property and the home having been settled against all privacy and in favor of public or governmental control, the next question arose, was "Now that we have got it, do we want it? Is prohibition even if not total, a success? Is it an improvement?"

The Answers

Prohibitionists say "Yes." Antis say that the manufacture of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes has been transferred from public places to secret places and that the total quantity of home brew far exceeds the former consumption. In fact, the Ontario Prohibition Union itself says "Home brew has become a great evil and as yet we have not found any solution of it."

Is life more secure than formerly?"

The problem, therefore, is no longer one of rights. It has long since become one of desirability. Is the consumption of alcoholic liquor less? Is disorder due to it less? etc.

Upon the answers to these questions the people will decide whether prohibition as we have it is to "go" or to stay.

At the instance of the Rev. T. Albert Moore the Social Service Council meeting at Hamilton Sept. 17th gave praise to the Ferguson Government for its enforcement of the O.T.A. (Ontario Temperance Act), but stated that this enforcement could be improved. The only way in which it can be further enforced is by granting the right to officers of the law to enter all houses at any time they think proper. A prompt inspection of all houses will show up what is now admitted about home brew, and if home brew and distillery-brew are both eliminated, it ought to be an easy matter to suppress the bootlegging of liquor got from outside the province.

The questions to be answered at this election therefore really are, "Do we want our houses entered and searched? Do we want to give up all domestic use of alcohol?

Are the lying and hypocrisy now rampant on account of the secret making and use of liquor likely to be suppressed with further prohibition? Can the disorder, etc., due to liquor not be suppressed in some other way leaving what people find at times to be a necessity, free to be used when the occasion requires?

Is the manufacture of liquor in a private way too easy or is it to be suppressed, and if not wholly than at least partly?

Is the general moral tone of people under compulsion, where compulsion is not confined to the punishment of crime, improved as a consequence or is the moral idea ceasing to exist and giving way to the expediency idea which if further developed will lead to the abolition of the whole idea of moral right and wrong, and therefore of the Moral Law and of al religion and morals and the power of resistance!

Should the wages of sin after all be death as formerly, instead of as prohibitionists would have it and even where the desire is to protect and not merely to reform is that desire possible where people have lost the knowledge of right and wrong when they put mutual help and protection (known as social service), above the "responsibility of the individual" as signified in "The wages of sin is death?"

Or have we ceased to believe that the fiat of the Creator settles the matter and that it is not open to improvement even though that idea involves loss of faith in God?

Crime

The suppression of crime is not only wise. It is necessary. Is the suppression of personal self-control and the personal virtues of private life either wise or necessary?

Is it a good thing to couple virtue with crime and to suppress both in order to secure the suppression of one?

Is the basis of life by which humanity is allowed by its Creator to run wild if it chooses to put up with the consequences, a wise basis? In fact, do we believe in God or have we found out He is an illusion and that "we" not "He" are the last word in our salvation?

PLANETS APPEAR IN SOUTHERN SKY

Those Interested in Astronomy Can See Mars and Jupiter.

Those who take any interest in astronomy will find themselves well repaid for the trouble if, during the next few nights, they spend some time in viewing the Southern sky. If the nights are cloudless—and we have such nights now and again—they will see the planet Jupiter well above the horizon in the west; Mars still further above it in the east; and Luna (the moon) between the two. To-day she appears about equally distant from the planets, but each day she appears nearer to Mars and further from Jupiter.

The present positions of the planets respectively give a fine opportunity to note the beautiful contrast between the scintillating "white" light of Jupiter and the slightly reddish tinge that gives Mars a duller but not less beautiful appearance. Both planets are millions of miles distant from the planet we call "The Earth," and both are further than it from the sun round which they all revolve.

Our Earth is so large, and the other planets appear so small, that many people, even well educated, trust the evidence of their senses and maintain that the Earth is the centre of the system. This theory was elaborately expounded by the astronomer Ptolemy, who lived in Alexandria (Egypt) about the middle of the second century after the birth of Christ. It was superseded some fourteen centuries later by the theory propounded by Copernicus of Poland, who argued that the Sun, not the Earth, was the centre of the planetary system.

Up the beanstalk

When Jack climbed the beanstalk, he got a new conception of his needs. No longer would just a hen do, but a golden-egg hen. No longer just a harp, but one that stood by itself and played. He didn't know what he wanted till he saw something better than what he had . . . though he labored hand over hand to get hold of that point of view.

Advertisements give you a high point of view without any climbing at all. They spread world products before you—servants to serve you, conveniences to please—prices low because so many thousands are using the same. They give you a new conception of what you'd like to own. No longer will a watch or food chopper do—but the highest improved watch or food chopper. No longer just a radio—but one of purest transmission. They make you change your mind about what you started to choose, and choose something more pleasing at no higher price. They help you see the whole field of satisfying wares. They lift you to fresh joys.

WHERE HURRICANE ROSE

Rising in the south-western corner of the Bahamas, and proceeding with ever-increasing force, the two hurricanes which devastated Florida early Saturday morning, swept, according to weather authorities, across the Atlantic in a direction slightly north of westerly over a path of sixty miles in width. The force of the storm, as it reached the coast of Florida, was greatest at Miami, but was also exerted with violence against points as far north as Palm Beach. Continuing on its way across the isthmus, the tempest relaxed somewhat by the time it reached the west coast, and important centres like Tampa and St. Petersburg suffered property damage, but no loss of life.

SIMPLE MESSAGE AT GOSPEL HALL

Evangelist Tells of Significance of Meal Offering.

In Gospel Hall last night, Mr. Innes brought before his hearers in a simple and practical way, Christ in the meal offering, Leviticus, Chap. 2; this subject followed in natural sequence the Burnt Offering.
The old saying "Christ lies hidden in the Old Testament and opened to our vision in the New" was clearly demonstrated.
Christ is seen, not as the slain one, but the bruised corn. The one who went into the ground, died, and became the Bread of Life.
The oil that was used is typical of the Holy Spirit, the indwelling power in service during His life on earth, and by the power of the Holy Spirit He offered Himself to God.
One felt during these quiet talks if only Christians got a hold of these foundation truths there would be no doubt as to virgin birth, incarnation, and atoning death of Christ.
Tomorrow, night it is Christ, the Peace Offering.
The subject handled by Mr. Innes on Monday evening was "Christ as seen in the Burnt Offering": Leviticus, Chap. 1. He certainly presented the foundations of the faith as delivered to the Saints. It is the first of five offerings.
Christ in His perfect life and obedience before His Father, God.
Christ as the ox, in all His Divine strength doing the will of God.
Christ as the sheep, in meekness and perfect humility, going on to the Cross.
Christ as the Dove, the mournful one.
Man of Sorrows. His life ending in His death, going up to God as a sweet Saviour.

MAN FALLS DEAD IN LUMBER CAMP

Collapses While Sawing Lumber at Jack's Lake.

Death came with startling suddenness yesterday evening to Harry Trickey, who collapsed and died within a few seconds in the stable of the camp of the Peterborough Lumber Company on Jack's Lake, several miles above Apsley. Mr. Trickey, who had completed a conversation with the camp foreman and had resumed the work of cutting some timber, fell over the wood and expired almost immediately. He was 68 years of age, and had previously attended a doctor for treatment for hardening of the arteries. The foreman of the lumber camp telephoned the news of the occurrence to the firm's headquarters in the city, and the body was removed to Comstock's Funeral Parlor. The dead man had no surviving relatives, his wife pre-deceasing him some years ago. The funeral will take place to-morrow, with interment at the cemetery in Apsley, where his wife is buried.

IN POLICE COURT.

Peter Pettis, alias J. D. Patery, who is being held on a technical charge of vagrancy pending the arrival of United States officers who hold warrants for his arrest on a serious charge said to have been committed in Florida, appeared on remand this morning. He was remanded for another week. J. A. O'Brien, who represented the accused on his first appearance, told His Worship that the accused had employed another counsel, and he was no longer appearing in the case.
The accused told the court that at the time the alleged offence was committed he had to be protected by two motor cycle policemen and the sheriff. He declared his intention of fighting extradition, as he did not consider the Florida jails were safe, on account of the activities of the Ku Klux Klan.

The police court presented an unusual appearance this morning due to eleven young men who had been arrested last night for participating in what is known as "shooting craps." They filed in and lined up side by side, taking up practically the whole frontage of the court. J. A. O'Brien appeared for all the accused and pleaded guilty on their behalf. His Worship on hearing the circumstances let them go with a $5 fine in each case, plus the costs.

A local man who was charged with fraudently obtaining board and lodging was released on his promising to pay the amount owing plus the court costs.

Andre, aged 50, was released from jail yesterday, and immediately left for his home town, Girgenti, where his 90-year-old father awaited him.

FIREMEN PLAY ON SATURDAY

Famous Players Will Be Here in Second Game of Series.

GOOD SOFTBALL.

On Saturday at 2.30 sharp at Riverside Park, the Firemen meet the Famous Players of Toronto, in the second game of the semi-finals for the Ontario Softball Championship. The Firemen of Hamilton and the Firemen of this City are still in the running and Chief Gimblett hopes that when the final games are to be played it will be between the two firemen teams. To bring this about the local boys are practicing daily as they do not consider that they did themselves justice on Saturday last, as they had been idle for two weeks and showed the lack of practice. The team are being thoroughly coached in batting and bunting, especially against the style of pitching that the Toronto boys use, and the fans are promised a real game on Saturday afternoon, for the local boys always play their best ball at home.

MUSIC CLUB PLANS GOOD PROGRAMME

Will Have Number of Concerts With Outside Musicians.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Executive of the Peterborough Women's Music Club was held yesterday afternoon at the home of the Misses Wood, on Belmont Avenue, the president, Mrs. J. Forbes Allan, in the chair. This organization, which is replacing the former Morning Musicale Society, which functioned in the city for some years, is aiming to bring together music-lovers of the city, and already has a membership of about one hundred and fifty ladies, with a number of men as honorary members. It is planning an ambitious programme for the coming season, and bids fair to have a very successful session, with a number of new developments forthcoming, including the bringing to the city of several outside artists and the inclusion in its work of a number of programmes aimed for the benefit of the youth in the city.
One of the first attractions to be presented to the society from outside will be a programme by the noted trio from the Toronto Conservatory of Music, composed of Signor Guerrero, pianist, Frank Blatchford, violinist, and Leo Smith, violoncellist.
The meetings will be held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon on the first and third Wednesdays of each month during the season, the first meeting, on October 6th, to take the form of a social gathering, for the purpose of bringing all the members together.

LEAGUE OF NATION ADOPTS PLAN FOR A GENERAL ECONOMIC PARLEY GERMANY STRONGEST SUPPORTER

Calls on Preparatory Conference To Speed Up Its Work.

TO DECIDE DATE.

German Delegate Lauds High Ideals Evoked By French Colleague.

GENEVA, Sept. 23.—The German delegation yesterday gave the strongest support to the French plans for a general economic conference when the commission draft of a resolution providing for speedy convocation of the conference was discussed on the floor of the League Assembly.

Baron von Rheinbaben said that last autumn when M. Loucheur had made the proposal, Germany, not being a member of the League, was unable to participate in the discussion. To-day Germany was in the League and perfectly able to appreciate the great principles and lofty ideals which had been evoked by M. Loucheur.

After drawing a picture of the spectre of the currency stabilization crisis and the resultant social consequences as well as of the national misfortunes of exchange fluctuations unemployment, import and export prohibitions and increase of Customs barriers which were born of the war, he said:

"There is no way in which to eliminate these evil consequences of the war except that of seeking to create public opinion with regard to the methods which lead to consolidation."

He said the progress of communications and modern technical science could not obtain full development except on the assumption that it was possible to dispose of merchandise in large quantities. The result was a demand for the formation of vast territories which should be unified from the economic point of view and no longer be divided by Customs barriers.

The aims of the proposed conference, in the German view, could be achieved by the conclusion of international agreements in different fields of international economics with regard to output and the sale of products. These agreements might prepare the way and inaugurate a sort of international division of labor.

Regarding the signing of metallurgical agreements by France, Germany and Luxembourg, in which he had reason to hope Belgium would soon participate, he said:

"If these agreements have been concluded without detriment to the general interest it is due to the fact that they were not concluded until there had been certain contact with the mechanical industries."

The Swedish delegate, Baron Adel Sward, objected because an exhaustive programme was not given to the conference and declared that the real remedy for the present economic situation was the elimination of Customs barriers between countries.

M Loucheur, in speaking for his resolution, said:

"Peace is what we want, but peace itself is built on a fragile basis when the economic situation is insecure and unsafe. The ultimate cause of most wars can be traced to economic causes."

Therefore, he urged the conference should be called at the earliest date possible.

The resolution, which calls on the preparatory conference to complete its work in order to permit convocation of the conference at an early date, was adopted.

Trustee Calls Canadians Worst Cooks in World

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 23.—Are the pies that Canadian housewives are making to-day less delectable to the palate than the pies of yesteryear?

Trustee Dr. Thornley Bowman appears to be of the opinion that they are. Yesterday he informed the Board of Education that the culinary art as practised in Canada is below the standard of any other civilized country.

"Indifferent cooking is responsible for any amount of sickness in the country to-day," he added, making a stand for the continuance of the teaching of manual training and domestic science in the colelgiates. The board divided 8 to 4, deciding to abolish immediately the teaching of the subjects.

REPAIR WORK IS COMMENCED

Men Engaged in Clearing Up Wreckage Along Coast.

DEATH LIST 400.

MIAMI, Sept. 23 (Canadian Press).—Recovered from the first shock of Saturday's devastating hurricane, dazed residents of Florida's storm stricken area, aided by Red Cross and other relief agencies, today stoically set about the work of rehabilitation.

As surgeons and hastily recruited forces of volunteer nurses bent their energy to relief of the injured and homeless, especially drafted forces of men began the task of clearing the sixty-mile wreckage strewn costal area between West Palm Beach and Miami.

At the same time graves fears were expressed regarding sanitary conditions, and officials of various health services were prepared for whatever measures are necessary to prevent epidemic.

Casualty reports from a score or more cities and towns levelled by wind and sea still varied widely, but rescuers placed the total loss of lives above 400. Miami's death list today stood at 100, with 900 in hospitals, 425 of them serious.

Graphic stories of heroism, terror, and conditions of suffering and destruction have come into Miami from the area laid waste. Newspaper men who surveyed the Lake Okeechobee section, where flood waters crashed through and deluged the city of Moore Haven, saw bodies floating about the flooded streets.

Add 2 Only hurricane

Sanitation, the movement of refugees out of the storm area, and efforts to locate and recover bodies of unaccounted dead occupied the attention of workers endeavoring to rehabilitate the south-eastern Florida coast section, hit on Saturday by a hurricane.

Every effort was being made to get into the district the medicines and serums needed to prevent a serious epidemic of disease and in an effort to prevent sickness. Davie and Moorehaven had been evacuated by all except the workers needed to clean up or search for bodies. Workers or persons remaining in the district are required to be vaccinated against typhoid.

The known death list from the hurricane stood to-day at more than 400 with many believing that it will reach 750.

During the first two months of 1926 more than 625 homesteads were taken up in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

Whiskey Drinking Declines In Britain

LONDON, Sept. 23. — Whiskey drinking in Great Britain has fallen off 12 per cent. in the last two years, with a corresponding rise in the consumption of imported French and German wines and beer. The largest increase is in Pilsener beer.

Figures given out by the Revenue authorities show the consumption of wines has increased since 1924, from 7,200,000 to 7,600,000 gallons. To maintain prices, the whiskey distillers are considering an agreement to reduce their output for the coming year.

NO STATEMENTS ON CONFERENCE KING DECLARES

New Premier Denies He Gave Interview To English Paper.

TO HELP EMPIRE.

Feels Cabinet Leader Should Attend Opening Session of Conference.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—(UP)— A cable to the London Daily News from Right Hon. Mackenzie King, denying that he has given or authorized any interviews with "respect to the general elections or the imperial conference," and adding "so long as the present ministry remains in office I prefer giving no statement whatever." has revived interest in the question of the Canadian representation at the Imperial conference.

Hugh Redwood, writing in the Daily News, urges Mackenzie King to attend, and says: "In authoritative quarters yesterday it was admitted that King faced special difficulties owing to the coming by-elections and change in the government, but it is strongly felt that he would be making a wise and states manlike gesture if he decided, in spite of all obstacles, to attend at any rate the opening sessions of the conference. To do this he need not absent himself from Canada for more than three weeks. The Canadian high commissioner might represent him at later meetings."

Tips for Liberals.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—"It will be regretable from every point of view if, as seems only too probable, Mackenzie King will be unable to attend the Imperial conference," says the Liberal weekly papet Truth. "The Liberal leaders in the Motherland will have particular sense to regret Mr. King's absence from London," Truth adds, "for who is more fitted than he to give useful tips on the way to sweep the country."

Continuing in a humorous vein, Truth proceeds to suggest that Mackenzie King should be invited to preside over a friendly and strictly private conference, at which Lord Oxford and Asquith, Lloyd George, Walter Runciman, M. P., and a few other choice spirits could consult with him freely on the best method of leading a party. Failing this, the next best thing would be for all of them to go to Canada for a winter course of instruction.

Cause Not Clear.

More seriously, Truth says the cause of the sudden landslide is not quite clear at this distance, but it presumes that it was largely due to the fact that the electors of the Dominion were bent on having no more deadlocks. Mackenzie King, playing his hand adroitly, to some extent eliminated triangular fights, the paper suggests, but probably he accomplished a good deal more by his popular financial program.

"Unfortunately, the first of these maneuvers seems to be beyond the compass of our own Liberals," Truth continues. "The second is the sort of thing that Lloyd George might engineer if left to himself. If it comes to auctioning votes, however who an bid successfully against the Labor party?"

ALL PERSONS HAVING ACCOUNTS AGAINST THE PETERBORO FAIR ARE REQUESTED TO SEND THEM TO THE SECRETARY AT ONCE, AS THE BOARD WISH TO WIND UP THE BUSINESS OF THE SEASON AS SOON AS POSSIBLE.

CITY OFFICIALS VIEW OPERATIONS OF SEWERAGE DISPOSAL PLANT

Local Branch of Engineering Institute of Canada Accompany Party.

PROCESS EXPLAINED.

Corn Roast Held on Bank of River After Inspection.

Peterborough's new $225,000 disposal plant was put into operation for the first time last evening, and a party, comprised of Mayor W. T. Holloway, Alderman R. S. Cotton and the members of the local branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada, were taken over the plant and the operations explained by R. H. Parsons, the City Engineer.

The new plant, which is of the type known as the activated sludge process, was built entirely under the direction of the City Engineer. No outside engineering assistance was sought, and no outside consultations were required.

The sewage, which is carried along the main pipe to the south end of Park Street, is raised to the tanks by the Wood trash pumps, of which there are three in the plant. The Wood pumps, the invention of a Southern States engineer, are specially adapted for use in sewage work, and are very rarely, if ever, clogged.

Passing into the tanks, the sewage is aerated by compressed air and becomes activated by the disintegrating bacteria. The passage through the first tank into the second settling tank lasts two hours. In the settling tank, the solids, broken into small sponge-like flakes, sink slowly downward and carry the bacteria with them, settling in the cone-shaped bottom and leaving a few inches of clear water on the top. Two pipes lead from this tank. One carries the activated sludge back to the entry point of the fresh sewage, which it seeds with the bacteria. The other deposits the surplus activated sludge into a lagoon, where it is expected to digest away. The effluent which is run into the river is 98 per cent. purified. The sludge deposited in the lagoon is specially rich in nitrogen, making excellent fertilizer, and it is possible that future developments of the science of disposal will find a solution in this way of a problem that confronts sewage experts in small cities.

After the inspection of the plant, the entire party adjourned to the cottage of George Perks, where wieners and coffee were served, followed by a corn roast. After the disposal problem had been entirely solved, in so far as the eats were concerned, the venue of the evening was shifted to the river bank, where a camp fire was kindled. Community songs and engineers' choruses were sung, jokes were told, and badinage was exchanged around the fire. After the flow of stories subsided, B. L. Barnes, chairman of the local branch, expressed the thanks of the company to Mr. Parsons for his kindness in explaining the process and to ex-Alderman Crowe for his good work in handing out the eats. Mr. Barnes outlined the activities planned for the winter by the Institute, and urged the younger members to avail themselves of the benefits offered by the meetings. Mayor Holloway and F. H. Dobbin also spoke, expressing good wishes for the future of the Peterborough branch of the E.I.C.

PICTURES TAKEN FROM HILLTOP

View From Armour Hill Photographed To Aid Monument Scheme.

WAR MEMORIAL.

With the object of giving a boost to the movement to erect a Soldiers' Memorial on the top of Armour Hill, Fred L. Roy has taken a panoramic view of the country-side as seen from the summit. The picture consists of five photographs, blending nicely into a whole and giving a splendid view of the country-side as seen looking towards all points of the compass. The first section, looking south, shows Little Lake and the Otonabee river, with the Westclox factory and King George school in the foreground and the hills bordering Rice Lake in the background. The second discloses the Quaker Oats building, the centre portion of the city, and in the distance the hills of Monaghan. In the third is seen Ashburnham, the Otonabee and the dam, Hunter street, the high spire of St. Peter's Cathedral and the country beyond.

The fourth directs the observer to the north-west and embraces Smith Township, the river banks, and part of Nicholls' Hospital. The fifth looks north over East City, up a gradual slope to Auburn and farther on to Douro.

The picture thus takes in the entire city and the greater part of the four townships—Otonabee, Douro, Monaghan and Smith. It also shows that Armour Hill is in full view of almost every highway and every railroad entering the city.

Armour Hill was secured by the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham as the site of the proposed memorial for the soldiers from Peterborough and district who fell in the Great War. The view fully bears out the contention of the sponsors of the proposal, that a monument on Armour Hill would be seen from all the districts from which the men went to fight the Empire's battles, and would be second only to the stately memorial to the memory of General Brock on Queenston Heights.

Perishes In Effort To Swim Channel

PARIS, Sept. 23. Canadian Press. — A young Spaniard has attempted to swim the English Channel without an escort, and is believed to have been lost. He started from the French coast on Monday morning and has not been seen since. He left his clothes on the shore with a letter to the hotel keeper for whom he had been working, stating he was going to try to swim the Channel without assistance. His passport showed he belonged to a well known Spanish family.

PENSION SCHEME A STEP FORWARD FOR CANADIANS

Heartily Endorsed By Dominion Trades and Labor Congress Convention.

UNION GROWTH.

Senate So Curtailed That There Would Be No Second Killing.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 23. — (Canadian Press). — Old Age Pensions was a matter which engrossed yesterday's session of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, now in 42nd annual convention here That a great step forward had been made by the fact that the King Government had enacted a law in the matter was stressed. As to the Senate killing the bill, Delegate Morin, of the Railway Carmen of Montreal, suggested that the Senate be abolished or its powers so curtailed that this could not happen again.

"The Senate will not dare kill the bill when it passes the Commons again," declared Alphonse Verville. Mr. Verville took his seat in the convention as a delegate of the local union of Plumbers. It is the first convention he has attended as delegate since 1912. He is a former President of the Congress, and the first Labor man elected as such to the House of Commons, where he sat from 1906 to 1921.

Delegate J. W. Wilkinson, of Edmonton, Alta., chairman o fthe committee on Executive committee report, in which is contained the matter relative to old age pensions, in stressing the forward advance which organized labor has made in the matter, urged that there be exercized eternal vigilance. In the report there is a sharp difference of opinion between the Congress and the actual bill which the King government put through the House, to be later killed by the Senate. The Congress wants the responsibility entirely on the Federal Government so as to ensure equality of treatment to all Canadian citizens, irrespective of the Province in which they reside; the pension age to be 65, and that only those assured of reasonable incomes be exempted from its provisions. The bill of session, the report shows, provided for partnership with the Provinces which wanted to enter into the plan on a fifty-fifty basis of cost, with the Provinces to administer, the age at which pension would commence to be 70.

"We are not concerned with the sincerity or insincerity which may have been behind the bill," said delegate Wilkinson. "There may be some cynics who say that the Government put forward the bill knowing full well the Senate would kill it. The point remains that it is the first time a Canadian Government has ever fathered such a bill. The committe in the course of its discussions heard the opinion expressed that the new Liberal government to be formed may have a sufficiently long life to enable it to adjust its membership in the Senate, and then we shall truly know that the party which first introduced the measure is really and truly going to carry out its promise. Until time shows otherwise, we should give them credit for the intention. We do not believe in any scheme which requires the voluntary co-operation of the Provinces. We believe it should be made clean, full and straight from the Federal Government, so that there may be no passing of the buck."

Delegate McGinnis, of Winnipeg, roused some ire when he said that the reason the bill had been introduced and put through the House of Commons was because the people of Winnipeg had had the good sense to elect two Labor members, and those had taken advantage of the conditions in the House of Commons last session to insist on the measure. Neither the Liberal party nor the Trades Congress deserved

WINNIPEG, Sept. 23. Canadian Press. — Robert Forke, leader of the Progressive party in the House of Commons at the last session of Parliament, and Liberal-Progressive member-elect for Brandon, will accept the portfolio of Minister of Immigration in the new Mackenzie King government in the process of formation at Ottawa.

This announcement was made last night following a meeting of Manitoba Liberal-Progressives attended by Mr. Forke.

Mr. Forke will leave for Ottawa to-day.

Mr. Forke declined to make any statement after the meeting saying that any announcement must come from Mr. King.

It was announced by others present however that Mr. Forke had informed the conference that he had been invited to enter the Liberal government that the office offered was that of Immigration and that his acceptance depended upon the attitude of those at the conference. THREE STUDENTS.

Ministers and Churches To Be Provided For Congregations.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARKWORTH, Sept. 23.— One of three candidates for the ministry of the Presbyterian Church in this district is Mr. S. M. Scott, a Lindsay lawyer, who is quitting the Bar for the pulpit. As a loyal layman, realizing the need of more workers in the old vineyard that called for new recruits, and confronted with an opportunity for service that required prompt action from willing hearts, Mr. Scott made his decision, and in his preliminary work at Omemee and Lakevale has acquitted himself so well that he was highly praised by the Peterborough Presbytery here on Tuesday.

The two other candidates are George Bennett of Norwood and Leslie McLean of Keene and Westwood who also received the warm approbation of the Presbytery for their fruitful efforts in the respective charges.

The Clerk of the Presbytery, Rev. D. A. Thomson of Hastings, was instructed to certify to these three young men as students to the college authorities.

Tuesday's meeting in St. Andrew's Church here reflected substantial progress, both spiritually and financially, as shown by the reports of various committees and of the treasurer. Calls for ministers, proposals for better and permanent places of worship, and other gratifying evidences of tangible growth indicated the expansion of the Continuing Presbyterian Church in this district.

The Attendance

The members present were the following Ministers: R. McCullough, Colborne, Moderator; D. A. Thomson, Hastings, Clerk; D. W. Goodwill, Cobourg; James Grier, Campbellford; H. D. Cameron, Port Hope; William Allan, Peterborough; J. A. Lougheed, Warkworth, and the following Elders: James Allan, Campbellford; John Roxburgh, Norwood; James Dutton, Peterborough; Henry Carlew, Warkworth, and R. Harrison, Peterborough, treasurer.

Rev. James Ross of Peterborough, Rev. D. A. McKenzie of Burnbrae, and George Bennett of Norwood were invited to sit and correspond with the Presbytery.

Mr. Dutton reported progress of the cause of Baltimore and Coldsprings, and recommended that the Synod be approached and urged to appoint a superintendent over such groups in the presbyteries within the bounds of the Synod.

A letter was received from the Bishop of Toronto assuring the Presbytery of his goodwill to its cause.

Bethany Church

The sale of the church property at Bethany in Cavan was considered, and finally the Presbytery decided not to sell the property in the meantime, and the committee in charge of it was authorized to rent it.

Sunday School Policy

Mr. Grier presented the report on the Y.P.S. and Sunday Schools. The committee submitted the following resolution, which was adopted:

That, whereas at the General Assembly of our church in Montreal last June, a definite policy and programme regarding the work to be done by our Sabbath Schools was adopted;

And whereas in the active work of our schools the programme, influence and financial needs of outside organizations conflict with that laid down by our church;

Therefore, be it resolved that this Presbytery affirms its adherence to the recommendations of the Assembly, and requests its Ministers to place the same before their Kirk sessions, and to urge upon all schools the desirability of giving effect to these recommendations and of looking with disfavor on all inroads made on our programme or resources by any person or group not in sympathy with our methods and aims."

The Harvey Field

Mr. Grier presented the report on home missions. He reported excellent work by Mr. Bray in the Harvey field, and recommended that he be appointed as catechist in that field for the next six months, and

Easy to Gain With Yeast and Iron

New Combination of Yeast with Vegetable Iron Quick Way to Build Up Weight

This new combination of yeast vitamines with vegetable iron, renews the action of sluggish blood cells, drives out dangerous body poisons, increases energy and endurance and supplies the system with vitamines that build up weight.

For years yeast has been known as a rich vitamine food; but not until we perfected "ironized yeast" — which comes in concentrated tablet form, was it possible to take yeast and iron in the right proportions to build up weight.

Vegetable "Iron" when combined with yeast is quite easy to digest, therefore better for the system. And "yeast" when ironized, becomes just twice as beneficial as ordinary fresh or cake yeast.

Ironized Yeast Tablets are composed of concentrated food elements, therefore, they are pleasant to take and free from drug-like effects. If you are under weight, do not enjoy good health, lacking in energy and force, "ironized yeast" tablets will pick you right up, and if they fail, you get your money back.

Sold by druggists at $1.00 for a large 60-tablet package or sent direct from laboratory on receipt of price. Ironized Yeast Co., Fort Erie, Ontario, Canada.

EX-SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: May I through your columns make another appeal to all former service men to join the Canadian Legion? This letter is directed to all who think like many with whom I have come in contact, and who have said to me: "I'm fed up with soldier organizations; this is just another of them." We who are rallying around the boys do not believe that to be true. Most of us were previously unattached. We have inherited none of the traits of which these men, rightly or wrongly, complain.

Personally I believe all the soldier organizations have done good work. Nothing can now stop the Canadian Legion from sweeping the Dominion, and we want every man on the inside working to eradicate the things with which he does not agree, rather than standing aside to criticize.

Do you know there is hardly a week passes but some boy is carried to the cemeteries. The names of our dead in France will live for ever more, cut in stone. Over the graves of boys in cemeteries there is nothing to show who it was that made the supreme sacrifice after years of pain and suffering—just unmarked graves.

Outside the military hospitals there are hundreds of men who are fighting a losing fight against ill-health, and fighting it alone, because they cannot prove their trouble originated on service. In Flanders the greatest possible strain was put on every man's physical and mental make-up. They can never make up the loss.

Kings and Princes pay homage to the idea of the "Unknown Soldier." He is safe with his God. His brother needs your help and mine. To me, the unknown soldier is the man who knocks at the door of the hospital seeking relief from want and sickness, through no fault of his own.

Unity among returned men and comradeship will wipt out all these ills. No Government will refuse their co-operation. Comradeship finds its highest expression in the giving of a helping hand to a friend in time of need. It is greater than death and survives it; of that I am convinced. My experience must have been duplicated by hundreds of men in France who were near the point of death. Nothing will ever shake my faith that during my weakest hours a companion was with me; a helping hand over a rough place. I shall never be able to describe my sense of loss nor poignancy of the heartache I suffered to find I was alone again when I began to mend. That is why I appeal to the comradeship within all men. It is the greatest force in the universe.

Help the other fellow. Join up in your branch. The dues are nominal and of little moment. Your presence in the ranks of the Legion will be of the utmost value. Do it now.

Attend the meeting at the G. W. V. A. Room, Monday, September 27, 8 p. m. and join the Legion as a charter member of No. 52.

Ex-Soldier.

OBITUARY.

LAURA ELIZABETH RAPER

MILLBROOK, Sept. 23. — The funeral of the late Laura Elizabeth Raper, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Raper, who passed away at the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto, aged 7 years and 1 month, on Tuesday, September 14, took place from the family residence, King Street, on Friday, at 2.30 p.m., the large number of citizens who gathered for the service testifying to the sincere sympathy extended by the entire community to the bereaved parents and other relatives.

The little girl had been subject to recurring attacks of illness for several months past, and had reached a critical stage when removal to the hospital in Toronto for special treatment was advised. Her parents had visited her the previous Sunday and found that improvement had taken place and a return home within the next few days was promised. Hope had to be abandoned, however, when septic pneumonia developed and the end came with startling suddenness.

Rev. Canon Allen and Rev. F. H. Howard had charge of the service at the house, the former speaking on the text, "Suffer the little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for such is the Kingdom of Heaven," and delivering a comforting message to the hearts that were torn by sorrow. Rev. Mr. Howard also spoke briefly and after prayer, the service was appropriately closed with the hymn "Now the Day is Over."

Rev. Mr. Allen conducted the service at the graveside and the pallbearers were four little boys: George Sayles, Cameron Vance, Garnett Russell, and Eddie Nattrass. The little casket was surrounded with flowers, and among the many beautiful floral tributes was a sheaf from the classmates of the deceased in the primary room of the public school.

The surviving members of the family are two brothers, Gerald and John, and two sisters, Maudie, and the baby, Mary Eleanor.

Some 600,000 children leave British elementary schools every year to enter the labor market. Of these about 65,000 live in London.

Belts which contain compressed air, which is allowed to escape around the body of the wearer, have been designed by an English scientist to keep miners cool during their work.

RASH COVERED FACE AND NECK

Caused a Lot of Pain. Itched Badly. Healed by Cuticura.

"My trouble began with a rash of pimples that covered my face and neck. The pimples grew larger and started to fester, causing a lot of pain. They itched badly and I was very restless at night. The trouble lasted four months.

"A friend advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I purchased some, and after using three cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Martha Martens, R. R. 2, Crediton, Ont., Nov. 3, 1925.

that a grant be asked according to the requirements of a catechist.

Rev. James Ross was appointed for Lakefield and Warsaw for the next six months, and it was recommended that the field be visited by the committee appointed to find out what each congregation was prepared to do to maintain regular services.

Norwood to Call

Mr. Thompson reported that Norwood congregation was ready to hear ministers with a view to a call. Mr. Roxburgh stated that a canvass of the congregation showed that, with some help from the augmentation fund, they could support a minister. A grant of $300 was applied for. The good work done by Mr. Bennett at Norwood was much appreciated.

The report on Keene and Westwood indicated sound progress. The Keene congregation is desirous of having a proper place of worship and will either buy or build. The Presbytery appointed Messrs. Dutton, Goodwill and Thomson a committee to aid such groups, and advised a visit to Keene in the near future.

Omemee Ready

It was announced that Omemee and Lakevale are ready to call. Permission was given them to do so, and application was made for $300, if required, to augment the salary.

Delegates to Synod

Mr. Grier and Mr. Dutton were appointed to represent the Presbytery on the business commitee of the Synod.

D. T. Thomson was nominated as Moderator of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston, and Mr. Dutton and Mr. Grier were authorized to support the nomination on the floor of the Synod next month.

British Settlers

R. J. Morrison of Winnipeg, western representative of the British Settlement Society of Canada, addressed the Presbytery on the work and aims of the society which has placed fifty British families on farms this summer. They have been located near their respective places of worship. The society is maintained by voluntary contributions. Mr. Morrison praised the railways and steamship companies for their assistance by reducing fares. He was thanked for his interesting address, and a committee was appointed to keep in touch with and forward this good work.

Messrs. Cameron, Goodwill, and their Elders were appointed to consider remits and matters to which the attention of the Presbytery is directed by the General Assembly, and were asked to report at the next meeting.

Letter of Condolence

The Clerk was instructed to forward a letter of sympathy from the Presbytery to Mrs. C. L. Owen and family of Campbellford in their bereavement by the death of Mr. Owen, a highly respected Elder for 39 years in St. Andrew's Church at Campbellford. Mr. Thompson said he had known Mr. Owen for more than forty years, and had found him a man of strict integrity, and of genial disposition, and possessed of a talent for leadership. Similar tribute was paid by Mr. Grier.

Sympathy was also extended to Mr. Archie Thompson in his long illness.

Henry Carlaw thanked the Presbytery for the honor conferred on Warkworth in meeting here. The Presbytery then adjourned to meet in St. Paul's Church, Port Hope, on the second Tuesday of December.

The meeting closed with Benediction. Dinner and tea were served to the members of the Presbytery by the ladies of the Warkworth congregation.

RALLY SUNDAY IS OBSERVED

Good Attendance at Service at Millbrook Church.

Y.P.L. OPENING.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 23.—The annual Rally Day service in connection with the Sunday School of the United Church was held on Sunday at 10.30 a.m., the regular morning worship and the school session being united for the occasion.

The programme, "Rallying for Service" was used, the C.S.E.T. and C.G.I.T. groups taking a special part in the responsive readings, the Superintendent, W. Fred Fallis, being in charge. Miss Hazel McMahon recited the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, and the choir rendered the anthem, "The Lord is my Strength."

A. C. Denike, Phm.B., of Havelock, was the special speaker for the day his address dealing with the modern viewpoint of religious education.

Beginning with a story for the children of the Primary Department, Mr. Denike went on to speak of three kinds of boys and girls—the "No, I won't", kind, next the "I don't want to" kind, and lastly the "Of course I will" class.

Some of the foundation principles of religious education were dealt with, the subject being defined as "learning the meaning of God and how to serve Him, so that you and I may do well whatever is worth doing, and live well the life that is worth living."

Referring to the high calling of a Sunday school teacher, the speaker said, "Our job is the building up of ideals connecting our part of religious education with the home training of those born in the image of God."

Quoting from the Master's words, "Whosoever shall offend one of these little ones that believe in Me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and that he were drowned in the midst of the sea," the inference was drawn, "Disregard the rights of the child and you incur the indignation of Jesus."

"The child has unlimited powers for good, or for bad, and nine out of ten of all the men we meet, whether living evil or good lives, were made so by their early religious education. The one who pays off debts he did not contract plunges into a boiling torrent to rescue someone he has never seen before—while these actions are human they are inevitably the result of education at some time in life.

"If the world, as some would have us believe, is growing worse all the time—if great numbers of our young people are going wrong—whose fault is it? Someone, sometime, had the opportunity of directing these lives aright.

"One's religion is the total response of his whole life to God, and failing this the title of Christian is hardly rightly applied since Christ said: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. Jesus talked about the children playing, but what about our teaching them to play, and providing proper playgrounds for them?

"You may be startled by the statement, but the Sunday teacher must not identify the study of the Bible as the sole item in religious education. The scholars may be able to rhyme off whole passages of Scripture, but do they know anything of putting it into actual practice? It is not the sacredness of the material, or the faithfulness of the teaching but its effect on the life.

"The home and the church, with the pupil, the childr in the midst, have the big job of religious education. Not creeds, but religious convictions, are of character-forming value. To think one can live a full, rich life, with religion as something merely added to it, is a mistaken conception.

"Make your appeal with a human touch, and with an understanding of service to both God and our brothers and sisters of His great family. Nothing can be lost that is done for God.

The report, read by the secretary, Mr. W. G. Rowland, showed an attendance of 250, with an offering of $13.69—the later to go to the religious Education work of the United Church of Canada. The quarters' report gave a total attendance of 1,469, an average of 122 a Sunday; verses learned 10,123, an average of 93; and offerings $67.98, an average of $5.66 a Sunday.

The floral decorations of the church for Rally Sunday were particularly beautiful, Miss A. Hampton, for whom this service is truly a "labor of love," making this her special charge.

The church treasurer, G. E. Burnham, distributed the annual financial reports as the congregation was leaving at the conclusion of the service.

The reopening meeting of the Young Peoples' League for the fall and winter months took place on Monday evening, and there was an encouraging attendance and an active interest manifest.

The opening worship period was followed by "Talks on Vacation Days", those present being arranged in four groups, with four leaders, three of whom gave much interesting information about holiday experiences, illustrated with pictures, while Rev. Joseph Wilks delighted his listeners with a practical talk on stamp collecting, using sheets of his own wonderful collection to make clear his meaning. Miss S. Muir, who had attended the Ottawa Centennial had some fine views of the Royal Mint and told of her tour through that building; Misses Hazel McMahon and Wilma Fallis gave interesting sidelights on their ten days' outing at Beausoliel Island, Georgian Bay, when delegates to the C.G.I.T. Training Camp.

A "Tree Contest", for which partners were appropriately found by matching leaves from various well known trees, was much enjoyed, the winners being Miss S. Hetherington and Mrs. Powell; Misses Elsie Spence and Wilma Fallis holding second place.

Ice cream and cake were served at the close, and the leaders hope that the work for another season has been opened and that attendance and interest will increase as the weekly meetings are held each Monday night, a group from four of the church organizations being responsible for the programme, in turn, one each month.

the credit. Half a dozen delegates reminded delegate McGinnis of the many years of Labor done by the Congress for the measure, though giving full credit to the two Labor member of Winnipeg.

Delegate McGinnis modified his statement to say that he recognized the work of the Congress, but meant that such work would not have got the measure through the Commons had it not been for the two Labor men's peculiar strength at the time.

The committee on constitutional law reported unfavorably on a motion by Delegate John W. Bruce to increase the number of Vice-Presidents from three to five.

Appreciation of the aid given by the Congress in helping the striking Postal Workers to get back the deductions from their salaries was expressed by representatives of that organization. Delegate Browning, of Toronto, stated that the Postal authorities felt they were entitled to a Board of Conciliation when they failed to get satisfaction from the Civil Service Commission and the award of such a board would be accepted.

W. D. Mahon, President of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Employees, who was present as a visitor, in speaking of the growth of Trade Union movement referred to the Mexican situation, declaring that in 1918 when he had been there only 7,000 members of the Mexican Federation of Labor existed. He had attended the convention last February and found that the membership had grown to 1 1-2 millions. In 1918, the people lived in the turmoil of revolutions; to-day no revolutions existed because organized labor stood solidly behind the Government to prevent revolution.

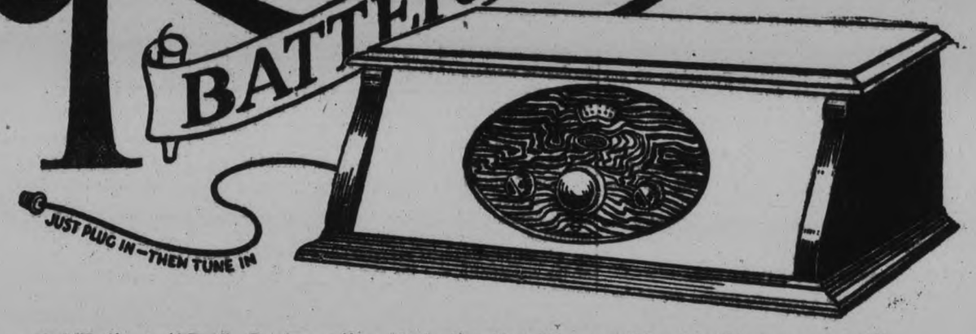
Here's The Radio You've Waited For

ROGERS BATTERYLESS A/C



ONE thousand Radio Dealers, when asked what the public wanted in radio this year, answered: (1) Elimination of batteries; (2) Simplicity of installation and operation, and (3) Tone quality and volume. The new 1927 Rogers Batteryless Radio is the only Radio that embodies all of these features. They combine total elimination of batteries with extreme simplicity, exquisite tone quality and volume that can be regulated from a whisper to a roar. There are fourteen distinctive points in the 1927 Rogers, many of which can be found in a few high-priced radios, a few of which can be found in many radios, but all of which can be found in no other radio in the world. Yet the prices are very modest. To buy any radio without first seeing and hearing the new Rogers is but to cheat yourself and purchase regrets.

No Batteries The Rogers operates direct from any light socket on any alternating current. No chemicals; no charger; no attachments. You "Just Plug In—Then Tune In." The Rogers uses the raw current through its super-power unit that automatically regulates all voltages for A, B and C Circuits and takes care of all variations of line voltage after once installed. Not the slightest hum nor power noise can pass into the speaker. It costs about 4c a week to operate daily, and you get uniform, everlasting power from the day you plug in--forever more.

No Aerial In most homes the Rogers will function without any aerial whatever, either outside or built in loop—and with less disturbance than when an aerial is used. Except for occasional houses so constructed that an aerial is needed (as with ordinary radio sets), the Rogers can be installed and tuned in in 2 minutes 21 seconds.

Single Dial Control Combined with simplicity of installation is ease of operation. A single tuning dial, vernier control, with wave lengths indicated on the face of the dial, enables you to tune in station after station easily and quickly or locate any desired station at will. On August 26, 1926, in a Parkdale home in Toronto, 31 stations were tuned in and logged with one turning of the dial (never turning backwards) and without touching any other control on the set.

Exquisite Tone Quality Exceptional Volume By the addition of an A/C Power Tube the possible volume has been greatly increased and the quality of tone infinitely improved. The volume can be adjusted from a whisper to a roar by a turn of one knob, without cutting out or in any of the tubes. When you once hear the new Rogers you will marvel at its fidelity of tone reproduction on all instruments and voices.

Free Demonstration

Added to the above are a dozen other points of advantage that combine to make the Rogers the one set that can give you all you hoped for in a Radio. If you are prepared to purchase a Rogers, providing it meets your expectations in every respect, we will instal one in your home free of charge. You will be the judge. If it is all we say—and you are entirely satisfied—payment can be made in cash or spread over three to twelve months for a slight charge.

The single-dial, batteryless sets are $275.00 for table model complete except for loud speaker (loud speakers $25 to $40).

Other Rogers A and B Batteryless Sets:

Three tube table models $140.00 and $150.00. (2-dial control).

Five tube table models $210.00 and $220.00. (3-dial control).

...DEFENDER OF CIVIL LIBERTY... STRENGTHENER OF LOYALTY ... PILLAR AND STAY OF DEMOCRATIC GOVERNMENT.

NO APATHY THERE.

The details of the election in Northumberland, as published by the Examiner, gave a measure of encouragement to those citizens who have been lamenting the indifference of a large percentage of the electorate to public issues, whether Federal, Provincial or municipal.

The names of Grafton, Bethel Grove and Meyersburg should be placed on a special scroll of honour at the headquarters of the Citizens' Research Institute, which organization has devoted much time and energy and expended considerable money in endeavouring to arouse public opinion to the need of greater interest in public affairs.

One of the two Grafton polls, with 154 names on the list, registered a total vote of 154; at the other Grafton poll only one voter failed to exercise his franchise.

At Bethel Grove, in Hamilton Township, 68 out of 69 on the list voted, and Meyersburg, in Seymour Township, beat this record with a perfect score of 99 ballots used by the 99 voters on the list.

With two polls voting 100 per cent. and two others showing but one absentee each, Northumberland furnishes an example to the rest of the constituencies.

If any other riding can surpass that showing the Examiner would be glad to hear the details.

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS.

The farmers of the Peterboro section are advised to pay close attention to the instruction of the Ontario Agricultural College as to the proper method of treatment in regard to smut in wheat.

It is a well-known fact, of course, that the increasing deterioration of Ontario wheat from this cause is proving more costly year by year to the farmers of the Province.

To such an extent has this deterioration developed that the Grain Standards Board, Toronto district, Eastern inspection division, passed a resolution in October last urging upon the Minister of Agriculture that the farmers of Ontario be impressed with the great importance of treating their seed grain for smut.

Hon. J. S. Martin, the Provincial Minister of Agriculture, acted upon the suggestion, with the result that considerable research work has been done by the Ontario Agricultural College, and a sound method of treatment has been recommended.

With the arrival of seeding time, it is of considerable importance that farmers generally should co-operate in this campaign for better wheat.

A COMMUNITY LOSS.

Campbellford—in fact, this whole district—is the loser in the death of Charles Lewis Owen, former member of Parliament and a citizen who had served his community faithfully in various capacities.

Mr. Owen had been a resident of Campbellford for many years, in his earlier days taking a very keen interest in municipal affairs. He served the town as Councillor, Deputy-Reeve and Reeve, and in 1898 was Warden of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham. Afterwards he continued to contribute his ability to Campbellford's service by continuing as a member of the Town Council, and also as Chairman of the Board of Education.

In 1906 he entered upon a broader field of service, being elected as a member of Parliament for East Northumberland at a bye-election, and at the general election two years later being returned. Mr. Owen retired from political life at the end of that term, and dropped out of public life altogether soon after when he had finished a year as Mayor of Campbellford.

For many years he was Postmaster at Campbellford, and few citizens were better known or more highly respected than this public-spirited citizen, who as Councillor, Deputy-Reeve, Mayor, Warden, Chairman of the Board of Education and member of Parliament had given the greater part of his life to the public service.

THE DIAMOND JUBILEE.

The celebration of the diamond jubilee of Confederation is gathering momentum.

The National Association of Canadian Clubs is throwing its weight behind the movement, and will ask the Dominion Government to organize the celebration.

The new Federal administration will be asked to set up a committee, presided over by the Prime Minister or some other member of the Cabinet, and composed of representatives from all parts of Canada.

The lighting of beacon fires across Canada, the holding of pageants in each city, and the distribution of pictures of the Fathers of Confederation are some of the features suggested to the Canadian Club executive.

This Dominion-wide celebration of next Dominion Day is a matter of which the local authorities should not be tardy in taking cognizance.

The thing should be well done, and to be well done the details should be in the hands of local committees in ample time to plan and execute a celebration worthy of the occasion.

Once the Dominion committee is formed and the main programme arranged each community should be ready for action.

HEALTH IN GREAT BRITAIN.

In speaking of the greatness of the British Empire it is natural to refer to its vast area of 13,424,519 square miles, its population of 450,315,046, its commerce, its financial strength, its navy and its mercantile shipping. These are important, but it must not be forgotten that there is another element—the physical, intellectual and moral qualities of its men, women and children, the comfort and refinement of its homes, the conditions under which its people work and live. The greatest of all the resources of a nation, it has been said, are its men, women and children. For this reason, there is instruction in the report of Sir George Newman, Chief Medical Officer of the Ministry of Public Health in Great Britain, on the nation's health. He takes a broad view of the matter, as the following passage shows:

Mortality and the death rate is but one form of measurement of the public health. The science and art of preventive medicine are concerned with much larger issues than the mere postponement of the event of death. Less definite though more important is an estimation of the life and physical well-being of the people. What we need as a nation is fuller production and an enlarged and healthier life.

Since 1875, says the Medical Officer, there has been a remarkable reduction in, and in some cases a disappearance of, devastating epidemics such as cholera and typhoid fever, which disturbed the whole nation; similarly a fall in fatality has occurred in scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping-cough, tuberculosis, smallpox and bronchitis, and thus certain types of disease have become milder; a prolongation of the length of days has taken place, and, therefore, increased opportunity; there has been an immense advance in general education, and knowledge is power; infancy and childhood are unquestionably healthier than 50 years ago, and twice the number of children survive to grow up. There is less invalidity; insurance has developed by leaps and bounds and now comprises the sick, the unemployed, the injured, the aged, the widow and the orphan, and thus the anxieties which interfere with capacity and labor are greatly reduced. "The facilities for saving and thrift have been extended, wages have risen and purchasing power (though in smaller degree) has extended, and this fact in conjunction with insurance has placed the people as a whole in a more favorable position to practice a way of life conducive to health, and become in larger degree masters of their own fate; lastly, there has been improvement in the social and personal habits of the people in regard to health, which has, directly or indirectly, enhanced their potential power, e.g., personal cleanliness, living more in the sunlight and fresh air, increased sobriety, and improved nutrition."

Sir George Newman drives home the point that health is not merely a medical matter. The rearing and maintaining of a healthy race depends upon social conditions such as inter-communication, political power, education, financial resources and economic state of the community, and the social habits, customs and aspirations of the time. Housing is not mentioned, but must have been in the Medical Officer's mind. This and other social problems are, of course, more difficult in a small and overcrowded country than in our own.

Canadians are interested first of all because these are human problems. Then these people are our fellow-citizens in the British Empire. Some talk of the Governor-General and the appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council as links of Empire. But the strongest link is human affection; and the condition of the people of the British Islands, the millions unknown to fame, is of more importance to us than the symbols of Empire. Then we must bear in mind that it is from these islands that we expect the greater part of our immigration; and the better the social conditions existing there, the better for us.—London Advertiser.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 23 (Canadian Press). — English importers were not disposed to pay the higher prices asked by Montreal exporters for Manitoba wheat yesterday and as a result the export trade was extremely dull. The trade in cash grain on the domestic market was also of a limited character but prices ruled steady.

A moderate amount of business was done in Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour and prices were well maintained.

The millfeed market was moderately active and prices were unchanged. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was steady at firm rates.

The undertone to the market for fresh and storage eggs was again firm with a good trade passing. The receipts were 677 cases.

A fairly active trade was done in potatoes and sales of New Brunswick Cobblers were made at $1.35 to $1.40 per bag, and in Quebec Whites at $1.25 to $1.30 per bag of 90 lbs.

Owing to the continued somewhat limited demand for butter, an easier feeling developed in the local market and prices were reduced 1-2c per pound. The receipts were 2,228 packages.

The feature of the cheese trade was the easier feeling that prevailed and prices declined 1-4c to 3-8c per pound. The receipts were 4,410 boxes.

The tone of the market for beans was steady, but the demand was again rather quiet for car lots of choice white hand-picked at $2.25 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23 (Canadian Press).—Indications of prompt settlement of the British coal strike did much yesterday to make wheat prices average lower. After frequent irregular changes, the wheat market here closed unsettled, 1-2 off to 3-8 up; corn at 1-8 to 1-2 gain, oats unchanged to 3-8 higher, and provisions unchanged to 42 cents advance.

It was pointed out that although the coal strike settlement would release for grain traffic many ocean vessels which have been occupied carrying coal, the urgency of need of short hauls for ocean shipments of grain would also be abated. Southern Hemisphere wheat would therefore have a readier outlet in competing with North American exporters. On the other hand, advices telling of heavy snow and rain in Canada likely to hamper the crop movement and to injure the quality of wheat did a good deal at times to bring about price rallies here.

Unsettled weather tended to strengthen prices both of corn and oats. The official forecast, however, failed to indicate any frost.

Shorts buying provisions found offerings rather light.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 23 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 13,000. Choice yearlings, strong, top 12.25; weighty steers, on specialty basis, few loads 1,400 pound averages steady, heavies or less desirable finished kind closing 25 to 40 lower; best heavies 11.60, fairly dependable market on she stock bulls and calves, latter class 25 to 50 higher at 14.00 to 15.00.

Hogs 12,000. Top 13.55, paid for choice 220 to 240 pound weights, most 200 to 250 pounds, butchers, 13.15 to 13.40; bulk 260 to 325 pound averages, 12.50 to 13.25, desirable packing sows, largely 11.00 to 11.75, most strong weight slaughter pigs, 11.50 to 12.25.

Sheep 25,000. Fat lambs, strong to 25 cents higher than Tuesday, top westerns 14.25, bulk 13.50 to 13.85.

WEATHER HINDERS WORK OF FARMERS

Wind and Rain Damage Grain in Lakefield District.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 23.— The weather of the past month has been very trying to the farmers and combined with the late spring and summer it has made them very anxious. The heavy rains and heavy gales of wind toward the end of August were disastrous to cut grain which had not been drawn in and much was lost. The corn was flattened and presented a sorry spectacle for a couple of days but in the main it rose and will yield at least a fair crop. The root crop will probably be average if the weather is not too wet for the next few weeks.

Threshings are the order of the day and practically every working day sees at least one. Fall ploughing has begun and allowing for favorable weather conditions will be finished in good time.

The farmer is not pessimistic although the torrential rains have done more harm to his line of business probably than any other and the general opinion is that a period of dry warm weather would save the late crops.

The apple crop this year is light, a contrast to last year's bumper yield.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

WHEN YOU CAN T SLEEP

Are you the kind that cannot sleep
A lot of times? Well, so am I;
And I suppose that people keep
On telling you the reason why.
The preacher sternly will suggest
Your conscience will not let you rest,
While other persons are inclined
To say it's all a state of mind.

If you and I would just compose
Our minds the way they tell us to,
We'd slumber just as well as those
Phlegmatic folk who always do—
Or so they say. Or if, perhaps,
We lived a life like other chaps
Who never sin, we'd gently snore
Eight hours, or nine or ten or more.

It all sounds very well, of course,
And yet its truth I greatly doubt;
They have the cart before the horse,
It's just the other way about.
We do not lie awake because
We're busy thinking over laws
Or other things that make us weep—
We think because we cannot sleep.

I know the need of righteousness,
The quiet slumber that it brings,
But good digestion counts, I guess,
For righteousness means many things.
If you will only slowly eat,
And less of pastry and of meat,
Refreshing sleep you'll likely find
A state of stomach, not of mind.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"SEEING AS HOW."

Don't use "seeing as how," as in the following extract from a newspaper article:

"Seeing as how Ruth will not be permitted to appear in a game for thirty days, we imagine that both he and his companion Yankees will spend the first month of the season praying for rain."

"Seeing as how" is not good English. It is, however, correct to use the word "seeing" in the sense of "considering; in view of the fact, taking into account; inasmuch as; since; because," followed by "that" or without "that." In the Bible (Genesis XXVI., 27), we find: "Wherefore come ye to me, seeing ye hate me?"

This shows that the use of "seeing" in this sense was common and good English as far back as the time of the translation of the Bible into the King James or Authorized Version, in the early part of the seventeenth century.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

TOURIST THIRD CLASS

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Hundreds of Americans this season have taken advantage of the new Tourist Third Class arrangement.

"It is hard to get away from the old idea of steerage class," recently said one of the Cunard officials, "but the present third class accommodations are quite different."

Formerly the third class used to be taken advantage of mostly by immigrants. As there were no immigrants to speak of going from America to Europe the steamship companies hit upon the device of making this kind of travel popular among people who went abroad for educational purposes, but had little money.

The Tuscania, which some time ago discharged some one hundred and fifty Tourist Third Class passengers at Havre showed such professions represented as lawyers, teachers, brokers, engineers, musicians, and so forth.

Several thousand students came over on the giant Leviathan some time ago.

Dozens of college officers and many jazz bands have crossed this summer to fill European engagements.

The Holland American line recently brought six young women from the Young Women's Christian Association in New York to Rotterdam. The amount of money each of the young women had for the trip was $300.

This method of travel is designed to be justly popular. The young people who take advantage of it are willing to put up with certain inconveniences provided the company is select and the food is passable.

The recent budget of some students showed the following items:

$181.00 for steamship ticket;
30.00 for passport and visas;
7.00 for railroad fare to Paris;
4.00 for hotel expenses for four days in Paris;
10.00 for lunches and bus fares in Paris;
25.00 for airplane to London.
13.00 to spend for a good time.

It is no hardship for a young person to live in a small upper room simply because a millionaire has a palace across the street, and he does not find it irksome to travel third class because in another part of the ship there are enormously expensive, luxurious suites.

CANADA LACKS SHIPS FOR GRAIN

Steamers Are Busy Carrying Coal From States To Britain.

RATES RISEN.

MONTREAL, Sept. 23.—Due to the continued demand for ships to carry coal rom the United States to Great Britain, made by British firms on account of the coal strike in England, a scarcity of shipping for the transportation of Canadian grain across the Atlantic is becoming manifest in Montreal, according to the Montreal Gazette yesterday.

Transportation rates for grain have now risen so high, the paper says, that it is now unattractive for European buyers to take grain from this continent

High Rate Quoted.

As high a rate as 30s ($7.50) a ton, has been quoted for an early steamer to carry American coal to England, and it is figured that the equivalent of this rate in grain transportation to the continent is around 34 cents per cwt.

Practically no vessels have been out-booked from Montreal for grain for the last ten days, although several have been offering at figures in the vicinity of 25 cents. These have been refused as too high.

Ruins Of Bible Village Dug Up Near Palestine

LONDON, Sept. 23. — (Associated Press.) — Ruins of the first Hebrew settlement in Palestine after the parting of Abraham and Lot, have been discovered near Nablus—the Schechem of the Old Testament — by the international archeological expedition headed by Prof. Ernest Sellin of Berlin University, says a despatch to the Daily Express from Jerusalem.

The excavation revealed among other things, the walls, gates and towers of the city where Abraham built the altar to sacrifice Isaac and where Jacob buried his idols, and where according to tradition, Joseph was buried.

There also were found the remains of a Canaanitish temple and Baal images.

TASK TO LEAGUE.

GENEVA, Sept. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— Germany and France are envisaging complete evacuation of the Rhineland and not a mere reduction of the forces of occupation, Dr. Stresemann, the German foreign secretary, told the newspaper men prior to his departure for Berlin last night.

The task of the German delegation to the League of Nations, he added, was not to secure a reduction of the allied forces in the Rhineland by some thousands, but to make it clear that after Germany's entry into the league, the occupation of German territory was incompatible with the principle of equality among league members.

FARM SIDE LINES MAKE PROFITS

Produce Extra Income and Offset Failures of Grain.

VARIOUS BRANCHES.

COBOURG, Sept. 23.—The value of a side line for the farmer has been abundantly testified to this season, owing to the loss which has overtaken a number of farmers in the district, by failure in harvesting their entire grain crop, because of the frequent rains of the last month. The loss must necessarily be quite a heavy one, and where a bumper crop was expected, the exigencies which the former met with, have resulted in only a fair crop of grain if not one below the average. Accordingly the farmer who has some side line to bring up his revenue for the year's operations is a fortunate one.

How About Poultry?

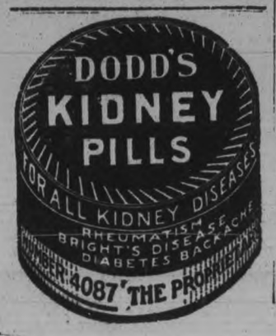
A Hamilton township farmer, who with the help of his two young boys, farms a two hundred acre holding, believes that poultry is the right thing to do this. He keeps one hundred hens, and the other day when the youngest boy gathered the eggs, they numbered just six dozen and ten. This was no outstanding number either. "I shut up several 'cluckers'", the boy announced, "and they will shortly be laying again.' This farmer gave it as his opinion that each "Biddy" if well fed, would produce as many eggs as she is capable of without any artificial lights, turning day into night, or other devices to make her lay more eggs. If you get more eggs from a hen earlier in the season you won't get them in autumn was his verdict, and it is then that they are the most profitable.

How About Cherries?

On the other hand another local farmer goes in for cherry culture. He set out a cherry orchard a few years ago, and after marketing 200 or more baskets of cherries in July, he is not quite as worried as some others because the last field of oats or other grain is still in sheaf or stook and left in field, ungarnered. It is true that spraying and cultivation caused him many a weary hour but he met with results, and good ones.

The Market Garden.

With a number of farmers it is the market garden, and the returns received from corn, tomatoes, potatoes, peas and vegetables of different kinds, is considerable from this profitable industry also. Others have taken up berry culture with excellent results. But whaevere it may be the side line is an excellent one to round out the year's income. It is an exemplification of the old adage, Do not put all your eggs in the one basket.



CLOSE GUESSING ON ATTENDANCE

Winner of Ladies' Prize Estimated Exact Total.

OTHERS CLOSE.

Among the numerous contests at the exhibition, the one put on by Brass at their exhibit in the main building was a popular one, and there were 98,000 tickets filled in and dropped in the box. Very close guessing resulted, the winners being on the exact number, or one figure from it. Mrs. Adam Reid hit on the correct figure, and wins the ladies prize, while F. E. Latimer estimated just one higher and wins the gentleman's prize. Miss Isabelle Armstrong came just as close with only one below the mark, and was awarded an added special prize that had not been offered. The official announcement is given on front page.

FILM INTERPRETERS.

The population of Nottingham, England, contains four times as many women as men.

RAIN SPOILED BUMPER CROP

Farmers at Keene Have Still Good Yields on Average.

POTATOES GOOD.

KEENE, Sept. 23.—The general outlook in Keene district this year is very good, although owing to the continued rains, the volume of grain has been a little less than it would have been if fine weather had prevailed.

The oat crop especially was extremely heavy, but the heavy winds and rain of a few weeks ago spoiled what would have been nearly a record crop on numerous farms.

Quite a number of fields had the heads of the grain broken so low down that the binder could not collect them, and consequently a lot of grain was left wasted on the fields.

Barley was also a heavy crop, but at the time of writing there is quite a lot out in the fields yet, and it depends on the prevailing weather from now on whether it will be worth anything or not. Some is already sprouted, but a lot of it could be used for feed if it could be threshed at all.

The fall wheat crop was good in some localities and very poor in others. The cold, backward spring, of course, was the cause of a lot of poor fields of fall wheat.

About the only crop that did not suffer was the alsike. One farmer had an average of eight bushels to the acre, but most had from four to six bushels per acre. Alsike will be grown in larger quantities next year owing to the good price at the present time. Prices are ranging from ten to fifteen dollars a bushel, which is an exceptionally good price.

Taking everything into consideration, the grain yield will be fairly good, only the fact that the continued wet weather spoiling a lot of grain and keeping it from being a bumper crop.

Alfalfa was good this year where it didn't get killed out. The old seeding was the hardest hit the new seeding seeming to stand the backward spring better.

Potatoes are turning out good, one local man having thirty bags from one-sixth of an acre.

It is impossible to get a line on the average yield of grain as only a few have threshed, and then only enough for seed wheat, and a few have to thresh, of course, to get all their crop in.

AVERAGE YIELD AT PONTYPOOL

Farmers Find the Quality of the Grain Very Good.

RUST PREVALENT.

PONTYPOOL, Sept. 23.—According to reports received from those who have threshed in this community the grain yield will be average. The fall wheat yield is not as large as last year, but is a fairly good sample. Spring wheat is very small with considerable rust. Anyone who has threshed barley reports a good yield. The oat crop was considerably damaged by the storms and was a hard crop to harvest. The early sown oats were the best and will be better with fewer light oats. The straw is of poor quality and will make poor feed, being affected with both rust and smut.

Fall rye is not as good as last year partially caused by the cold wet fall last year. Spring rye was a good crop and several good yields have been reported. A small acreage of peas was sown in this community and an average yield is expected.

The hay crop proved to be good and most farmers have well filled mows of good hay whih will take the palce of the poor straw. Little or none of the potato crop has been dug but indications point to about the same yield as last year. Some have complained of scale and some claim that there is a grub eating the potato. The acreage in potatoes is about 70 per cent of last year's acreage.

There is a good demand for young cattle for winter feeding and good stuff is bringing large figures Young pigs are worth $12 a pair and are more plentiful now than early in the season.

There was a good crop of small fruits this year, in fact the largest for many years. The early apples were fairly plentiful but the late variety is in the minority. The turnip crop was a total failure in this loality. Several good fields of corn, one ready to be cut, and some has suffered from recent frosts.

RECOUNT GRANTED.

District Court Grants Request of W. A. MacFarlane, lane, Liberal Candidtae.

REGINA, Sask., Sept. 23. — (Canadian Press.)— A recount in the Last Mountain constituency has been demanded by the unsuccessful Liberal candidate, M. A. MacFarlane. Judge Hannon yesterday in the District Court, granted the request and ordered the court to take place on Monday night next. The usual irregularities were cited in the application. According to the official count yesterday, W. R. Fansher, Progressive, had a majority of 214 over MacFarlane.

GRAIN YIELDED AS EXPECTED

Farmers Did Not Expect Large Crop After Backward Season.

QUALITY GOOD.

OMEMEE, Sept. 23.—Harvesting in this vicinity has been retarded by the continual heavy rains, and on many farms fields of grain are yet in the stock. A very few farmers were fortunate in completing the harvest before the showery season arrived.

The growers anticipated that the wheat crop would not be heavy, and their expectations have been realized. The quality of the grain is good, but the yield is not large to the acre. Owing to the cold weather in the spring, the snow stayed on late, the atmosphere did not warm up, and as a result many fields were scalded in spots. The average yield per acre is between 20 and 30 bushels.

The barley crop is only fair, and with grain threshing only commenced, it is difficult to estimate the yield.

Oats are light on many farms, although some good fields are reported. These, too, have suffered from the wet weather and consequently the grain, as well as the straw, will be lowered in value.

The acreage in alsike is not large. Many pieces were winter-killed and were ploughed up in the spring, but those who were fortunate in having a good catch, report the seed yield from fair to splendid. The best seed report is a little over seven bushels to the acre. At present the price is $15 per bushel for the highest quality, but very few farmers have any great amount, and the price is soaring.

The corn crop has taken on a new aspect within the last three weeks, and fields, which at that time looked discouraging, have made wonderful progress, and on an average the crop will be much better than was anticipated.

The digging of potatoes has just commenced, and the early crop is far from good. In some hills only two or three potatoes of medium size are found, and rot is also reported.

Vegetables have been a wonderful crop, but the dull weather has been very hard on tomatoes and ripening is slow. Snails are very plentiful on low-lying ground and have been the cause of much destruction on the potato stalk and later in the tomatoes and beans.

Early apples have been plentiful, but a scarcity is reported of the winter varieties.

The honey yield this season is below normal. This is also attributed to the late cold spring, when the bees had no plants or flowers from which to gather the nectar to commence work.

On the whole, producers are well satisfied with the season's output in general, and already a large acreage of fall wheat has been sowed, and the growth has been greatly aided by the recent showers.

CROPS ARE GOOD AROUND MADOC

Farmers Are Optimistic In Spite of Delays in Harvest.

BUSY THRESHING.

MADOC, Sept. 23.—Generally speaking, crops in this vicinity are good, though not as heavy as last year. The wheat suffered a good deal, being badly winter-killed. Rust is prevalent. Some farmers report but a half crop of wheat, and oats, too, seem to be somewhat lighter than last year.

On some farms there is a good crop of corn, and on others it is eared up well but there is a small crop. One farmer, in speaking of the corn, said poor seed was being blamed for the smallness of the crop in some cases. George Burnside has remarkably good corn this year with stalks measuring about twelve feet in height. Travellers through this section told Mr. Burnside it was the best corn they had seen on this side of Peterborough.

The hay crop was good, equal in some farmers' estimation to last year's crop, but seed clover had to be cut for feed and seed is likely to be scarce and high in price. The alfalfa crop was particularly fine, but the sweet clover was poor. On account of the lightness of this crop honey is likely to be scarce. Also a number of bees had to be destroyed this year by order of the Inspector.

Threshing is just about half done, being delayed by the wet weather. Most of the grain is in, although there is still some in the fields. Excessive rain did a good deal of damage. The potato crop shows promises of being very good. Root crops on some farms are good, on others only fair. John Smith, who had a remarkable harvest of turnips last year, says his are poor this year, though showing lots of tops.

On the whole, however, crops seem to be good, and the farmers optimistic. While some report only 20 bushels of wheat to the acre and 30 to 35 bushels of oats, others seem to have a somewhat heavier yield. Wesley Huffman expects to average about 40 bushels of wheat to the acre.

BOY ROUTS BEES.

GRASS RANGE, Mont., Sept. 23.—A small boy, with a firecracker left over from last Fourth of July, is the hero of this town. The boy and the cracker routed a swarm of bees that had taken headquarters under a board walk on one of the main streets.

Constipation

Don't let it spoil your work!

You know very well how completely the quality of your work depends on the state of your health.

If you don't already know the results of neglecting your inside, you'll soon find out. Constipation is the immediate consequence, and in the train of constipation may follow a whole host of ills great and small. Your whole internal system is slowly poisoned. Headaches, depression, "Nerves," insomnia and debility are the immediate consequences; rheumatism, sciatica, or lumbago may follow.

"But I can't alter the conditions in which I work," you may say. "I've simply got to put up with them and the results."

But you haven't. Nobody need put up with constipation. Although you are forced to lead an unnatural life, Nature's most powerful aid to well-being is still available — in the form of Kruschen Salts.

Every day your system demands a full day's supply of six vital mineral salts. Your sedentary mode of life lowers your physical tone, so that your inside fails to extract these from your food in the normal way. The surest way to make good the loss is with the "little daily dimeful" of Kruschen Salts.

As much as will lie on a 10-cent piece every morning, tasteless in your breakfast cup of tea or coffee, gives just the gentle stimulus that your organs of elimination require to restore them to perfect condition. Every particle of poisonous waste matter is expelled from your inside. Clear refreshed blood is sent coursing through your veins. You are all a-tingle with "that Kruschen feeling!"

Start with the little daily dose at once and cheerfully tackle two men's work to-morrow, forever freed from the tyranny of constipation.

Tasteless in Coffee or Tea

Put as much in your breakfast cup as will lie on a 10 cent piece. It's the little daily dimeful that does it.

Kruschen Salts

Good Health for Half a Cent a Day

The ingredients of Kruschen Salts are necessary for healthy life. Your body must of necessity extract these ingredients from somewhere, or you could not live. If you led an ideally healthy life in the open air, with plenty of exercise and no worries, your body would extract these six vital salts from your food. But the artificial life you lead prevents this. Hence the need for the "little daily dimeful" of Kruschen, which, unlike any other saline preparation, is a scientific combination of the six salts your body needs for its proper health to expel all clogging waste matter, purify and invigorate your blood, and set you all a-tingle with "that Kruschen feeling." Every druggist sells Kruschen — 75c a bottle. Get a bottle to-day and begin a new life to-morrow. It's the little daily dimeful that does it!

SYNOPSIS

His father's warning—"Destroy women or they will destroy you!"—has made Don Juan the greatest lover of all time. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese. Loving her madly, he reforms. The lovers incur the enmity of infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves Juan, and Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana. The Borgias contrive to have Juan catch Donati in Adriana's room under circumstances that destroy his faith in her virtue. Cynically convinced that Adriana is a cheat like all other women, he becomes the lover of Lucretia Borgia.

Her vanity would not let her think anything else. She refused to remember the trap she had made for him, preparing to think that it was he who had paid court, and not she.

And over and over she told herself how devoted he was, this gallant, handsome Spaniard.

Maia, knowing of the other women who shared this so-called devotion, hied her to a church and prayed that Lucretia might continue so to believe.

"For Heaven help all Rome if ever she finds how mistaken she is," she concluded piously to herself.

CHAPTER IX.

It was barely a month after the night when Don Juan first kept a rendezvous with Lucretia Borgia that the cathedral bells, tolling as sunset faded over Rome's seven hills and the evening star grew clear, announced the wedding night of Adriana and the Count Donati.

It was but a few hours later that Donati, befogged with drink, looked down the bedecked table at the head of which he sat with his young bride, impatient at the slow progress of the banquet, wondering if he could not somehow hasten the moment when he and she could be free of the presence of all these guests who sat drinking their health.

The great banqueting hall was crowded. Other long tables parallelling that at which the guests sat, were laden as it was with marvellously prepared food. There were peacocks, swans, fowl and fish and fruit brought specially to Rome, cooked by the most famous chefs in the city. The fowl had been so prepared that after they were cooked their feathers and heads had been placed upon them, so that they might have been live birds, as they rested on the gold and silver platters which the serving men bore past the long tables. Black and golden grapes trailed gracefully over the sides of wide, shallow dishes of Syrian glass. The lace that covered the tables was priceless; even as Donati watched the scene one of the guests turned and threw his arms around a woman, upsetting his goblet of red wine, which cascaded over the cloth, staining it.

"As red as the blood that feeds your heart!" the man exclaimed, and the woman laughed, the low, sweet laughter of passion.

At Donati's side, Adriana also stared the length of the table, her face as white as the heavy satin of her gown. It was all a nightmare, the music that came murmuring from the gallery where the musicians sat, the laughter of the guests, the love making that went on so openly. And a far worse nightmare lay just ahead.

Of that she did not dare let herself think. She turned and managed a piteous little smile at her father. She had done this for him, she told herself. And the fact that he was sitting there beside her now, alive, was her reward.

Donati's arm crept around her shoulders; she shuddered as his hand touched her bare flesh. His sodden face flushed with anger, and then he laughed, thickly.

His fingers clenched her shoulders cut into the smooth skin beneath them. Adriana sank back against the high back of her chair; one hand gripped the carving of the chair arm till pain brought her out of the half-swoon that for an instant had claimed her. Her wedding veil and headdress were intolerably heavy; their weight seemed to drag her head backward. She felt as if she were being tortured. Maddeningly her thoughts painted a far different picture than the one before her. If it had been Don Juan to whom she had just been married in the cathedral, if it had been he who sat beside her—how would she have felt then!

Her father's hand touched hers; she looked up, to find him gazing down at her compassionately. For a moment she relaxed, and smiled up at him, trying desperately to reflect the gaiety of the guests, trying to make him believe that her sacrifice had after all been but a little thing, that she did not mind wedding Donati.

And Lucretia, sitting near, turned to her brother with a quizzical little smile; it was answered by Cesare's; to him also this was an interesting spectacle. What more amusing than a youn g girl on her wedding night, married to a man whom she feared and hated?

The long windows stood open; through them came the tolling of the cathedral bells. Adriana trembled at the sound. She had heard the tolling of those bells when she was supremely happy, when her love for Juan and his for her filled all the world. And now they were sounding a death knell to her happiness.

To Juan, too, came the sound of the bells. Sharply he turned to Pedrillo. "Shut the windows, you fool!" he cried. "The noise of those bells drive me mad!"

Hastily Pedrillo obeyed, but the music of the bells still sounded in the room where Juan sat with a woman at his side. Across from the wide seat where he lounged, two other men sat drinking, talking lazily, watching him.

They were no such companions as Juan had formerly known. Since the night when he had found Adriana and Donati together in her sleeping chamber, Juan had tried desperately to forget her. He had gone into the slums of Rome, had engaged in street brawls. Had sought every possible means of separating himself so widely from the world in which Adriana moved that there would be no chance even of hearing her name.

And yet he could not make himself leave the city. And tonight the tolling of the bells made him wince under the lash wielded by his memories of her.

The woman beside him moved nearer laid her head on his shoulder, put one arm around his neck. Impatiently he jerked away, dragged her arm from its resting place. In that moment he loathed her, wondered why he had ever tolerated her presence.

The fact that she was one of the loveliest women in Italy, the wife of a great noble, meant nothing to Juan. She was not Adriana. Therefore she might as well have been any beggar maid in the streets, any flower girl—or any princess, for that matter.

But the woman would not let her love be denied. Again she edged close to him, slipped her arm through his, her fingers closing over his hand. At his impatient movement she sighed.

"You do not love me any more," she murmured accusingly.

He turned and looked down at her coldly, his eyes as empty of affection for her as if she had been some mangy dog crawling through the streets. In his heart he hated her for loving him, as he hated her for not being the woman whom he loved.

"Your repetition forces me to believe you," he told her, and smiled to see the anguish in her face.

GRAIN IN FIELDS ON LAKESHORE

One Farmer Has Some Hay Not Yet Cut.

YIELD FAIR.

COBOURG, Sept. 23.—A month ago crop prospects in this district were excellent and almost every farmer was jubilant over the expected garnering of his grain into the barn, the threshing, and the expected good returns. The situation today is that along the lakefront there are many fields of heavy oats in sheaf, and some other grains, lying out upon the ground. It is not expected that this grain will be of much value, even for feed. As farmers along the lakefront experience more difficulty in getting the crop in early, and their grain in later, they are worse hit than those farther back on the concession lines, where also there are occasional fields of grain in sheaf and stook. The unusual, however, was related the other day of one Hamilton township farmer who had still a field of hay uncut. Harvest had crowded haying with this result.

Farmers in this locality, and there are many such, who have threshed their wheat, rye and barley, which they stored early in their barns, report the yield good and the quality of the grain A 1. Corns has come on well notwithstanding adverse conditions through almost the entire summer, and roots of all kinds will be a fair crop. Tomatoes are not doing well. There is considerable rot, and too little sunshine. Potatoes on very low lands give indications of rot also.

But after all has been said most of the farmers will reap a fair reward for their labor and expense, although the crop will not be the bumper one that was at first expected.

THEY BURN THE LAKE.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Dr. Paul C. Standley, botanist of the National Herbarium, who recently returned from Costa Rica, reported that the natives burn a certain lake every year. The lake is thickly grown over with tall grass. The tips dry under the sun and the natives set fire to the mass.

ANTOINETTE

To the average person, Antoinette and Annette are regarded as closely related—the former is thought to be merely an elaboration of the latter. But such is not the case. Annette, which will be discussed later, comes from the Hebrew, while Antoinette is of Roman extraction. It means "inestimable" and is said to have originated with Antius, a son of Hercules.

Several distinguished Roman families bore the name of Antonius and its first famous exponent was Mark Anthony, avenger of Caesar and lover of Cleopatra. It received a reputation for sanctity through St. Anthony, the great hermit of the Fourth century.

The feminine form Antonia made its appearance in Italy, also and in Spain, where it is still popular. The Germans adopted it as Antonie, but the French are responsible for the charming Antonette, which is forever pityingly recorded in history through the fate of lovely Marie Antoinette, queen of Louis VI.

The French later contracted Antoinette to Toinette, a popular form throughout the country. Toinon is also sometimes used as a diminutive? Italy has an Antoinetta and an Antonica. Antonia and Antoinette are the favorite equivalents in Sweden.

The garnet is Antoinette's talismanic stone. It possesses many of the powers of the ruby, whose flaming heart it so closely imitates. It promises its wearer courage, a dauntless heart, and success in every ambition. Friday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

JUDY MUST DECIDE

I looked at Joan Meredith rather curiously. I wondered just what her reaction was to this affair which was rapidly becoming rather hectic between her brother and me.

She, however, smiled and said, "Don't you worry, Judy, I think it is splendid for you to interest John. You have changed his whole outlook on life. But my dear, I know you love power and because you love it more than anything else in the world you are tempted to keep on without any regard for my poor brother's feelings."

I vehemently shook my head. But even as I did so I said to myself, "By this gesture I am teiling an untruth" and I thought the blood rushed to my face. I did not deceive Joan in the least, however, for she said, mischievously, "Don't shake your head, Judy, I have learned today that almost any woman would be tempted to annex Jack. Any woman in this day when every man is supposed to have lived before he comes to the point where he asks any woman to become his wife would certainly have a thrill if she could be sure of knowing that she was absolutely a man's first love; not only his first love, but almost the only woman to whom he had ever spoken in social terms, that as far as he was concerned she was to him as Eve in the Garden.

"But—you see there is always a 'but' dear, you know, do you not, that John must not be hurt, consequently you, Judy, must decide quickly whether you love him enough to marry him or whether you love Jerry Hathaway."

"But, you see, Joan, I too have to nterject that word 'but'—your brother has not asked me to marry him."

"Don't beg to question, Judy, surely I don't have to tell you, that not only you but almost any other woman can get a man to marry her if she wants him to do so; and in the case of Jack I am sure that you have already had to shy away to keep him from telling you that he loved you.

"Think it over, my dear, and let me know your decision tomorrow morning."

This will be a very decisive evening, I said to myself, little knowing how in a very few moments everything would be decided for me.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT AND FANNY FAIRCHILD

The following is one of the most remarkable missives inspired by love. It was written by William Cullen Bryant, the famous American poet on behalf of himself and his bride-to-be, Fanny Fairchild. It is a prayer, a prayer to the Almighty offered by a man who loved so much that he was in dread lest anything should happen to interrupt its idealised course. It is a prayer that may well be offered by any couple on the altar.

"May the Almighty God mercifully take care of our happiness here and hereafter. May we ever continue constant to each other and mindful of our mutual promises of attachment and truth. In due time, if it be the will of Providence, may we become more nearly connected with each other and together may we lead a long, happy and innocent life without any diminution of affection until we die. May there never be any jealousy, distrust, coldness or dissatisfaction between us—nor occasion for any—nothing but kindness, forbearance, mutual confidence and attention to each other's happiness. And that we may be less unworthy of so great a blessing may we be assisted to cultivate all the benign and charitable affections and offices, not only towards each other but towards our neighbors, the human race and all creatures of God. And in all things wherein we have done ill, may we properly repent our error and may God forgive us and dispose us to do better. When at last we are called to render back the life we have received, may our deaths be peaceful and may God take us to His bosom, all which may He grant for the sake of the Messiah. Great Barrington, 1820."

Bryant's noble prayer was granted. The Bryants were blessed with forty-five years of happy life together.

The Rebekah Assembly, which has just celebrated the seveny-fil anniversary of the founding, was organized in 1851 as the women's auxiliary to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and was the first order of the kind for women.

Among the pupils of a certain school in England, Queen Mary annually gives a prize to the one who is selected by the masters as having best lived up to the motto: "Be good and do good." This motto was chosen by the Queen herself.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright: McClure Syndicate.)

FOR FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1926.

Good and evil planetary influences are active today, according to astrology.

Venus is in a place presaging the beginning of important public activities of women. Reform movements of wide scope are forecast.

This is read as a day lucky in love affairs. The summer romance is likely to become serious under this sway.

Many marriages will mark this autumn season, for middle-aged and elderly persons will be as much interested in love as the young. Foolish unions may be numerous.

It is wise to engage in routine work today and not to take risks of any sort, especially where future business is concerned.

This is not a lucky day for seeking employment and it is wise to delay all initiative.

It is an unfavorable rule under which to open shops or to start any business venture.

Uranus and Saturn are in aspects read as inimical to the best interests of labor, which is likely to be restive and unreasonable where capital is involved.

The autumn ingress is read as unfortunate for our relations with Mexico, Peru, Colombia and Venezuela. France and Italy also will find faultwith us.

All the signs appear to presage storms and upheavals of nature which will affect all parts of this country. Earthquakes may be numerous.

Trade activity for all the states on the Pacific coast is forecast and commerce will increase greatly.

Oil and shipping industries east and west will thrive amazingly in the coming year, it is prophesied.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of prosperity in the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will be endowed with great personal magnetism. Both girls and boys will be exceedingly popular.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

To-day's talismanic stone is the garnet, and those who are beset by doubt or anxiety should observe the old superstition concerning this stone. In ancient times the garnet was thought to be all powerful in solving a mystery or in determining for its owner what course to take in a doubtful situation. It is particularly potent in clearing away doubts with which friendship is concerned. Today's natal stone is the emerald. To benefit by its powers, one should wear it in a ring on the left hand. The ancients believed that it brought to its wearer the power to achieve success through seeing far into the future.

Green is to-day's lucky color, bringing to those who wear it good luck through travel.

The camelia is today's significant flower. Worn by a woman it is believed to bestow unusual loveliness.

SNOW IN WEST STOPS HARVEST

Threshing Operations Interrupted In All Prairie Provinces.

GRAIN SPOILED.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 23 (Canadian Press). — Harvesting in Western Canada, already delayed many weeks in most districts by inclement weather, received another serious setback yesterday, when wintry conditions brought rain and snow generally throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Alberta experienced unseasonable cold accompanied by heavy falls of snow. Several degrees of frost was reported in the Province, thermometers dropping to 20 above zero at Swift Current and 22 above at Calgary. Alberta was the first to feel the icy blast. It swept eastward yesterday enveloping Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Frost, snow and rain were reported from all sections of the Province of Saskatchewan and last night telegraphic reports indicated similar conditions prevailed throughout Manitoba.

Forecasts were for fair and cold weather in Alberta today with rain and snow in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Heavy losses to the farmers of the Prairie Provinces will result from the unseasonable weather. Grades of grain have already been lowered by the rainfall of the past month and it is feared a further lowering of the quality of the crop will result from the present weather conditions. In the Yorkton, Sask., district 75 per cent. of the grain is still in stook.

Threshing Suspended.

SASKATOON, Sept. 23 (Canadian Press).— Threshing operations are definitely suspended throughout Saskatchewan as a result of a snow storm which, according to reports, extends from at least as far west as Calgary, across the Province to within a short distance of the Manitoba boundaries.

That the storm is general in Saskatchewan is indicated by reports of snow at both Prince Albert and Regina. Snow began falling here between six and seven o'clock yesterday. It is estimated that about two inches of snow has fallen in the city.

Five Inches at Calgary.

CALGARY, Alta., Sept. 23 (Canadian Press).—Calgary presented a real wintry appearance at the close of the second day of the snow storm. In two and a half days nine inches of snow had fallen in the city and district. Although part of this had melted, there was still five inches of snow on the ground last night. For two days the temperature has not been above 29 degrees, or three degress of freezing, while during the colder parts there have been 12 degrees of frost. A rising barometer indicated a slight change in the weather conditions, but another half inch of snow has fallen since.

NO SNOW IN WEST.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 23.— (Canadian Press.)—Farmers of Western Canada, already suffering heavy financial loss from the snow and rain storms of the past week, to-day watched for an eraly break in the weather, but their hopes were dissipated in many districts, especially in Manitoba.

One of the heaviest downpours of the season was recorded in Manitoba over night and in many sections of the province it was still raining this morning and gave little indicationof immediate clearing.

Returning Officer A. W. Jackson, last evening declared Dr. T. E. Kaiser, Conservative elected with a majority of 879. Various discrepancies were disclosed, however. BET RESULTS IN DROWNING Man Falls Off Narrow Plank Into the Welland Canal.

SIXTH OF SEASON.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 23.—A plank-walking bet yesterday cost the life of David Phillips, aged 35, of Port Robinson, who plunged to his death in the rushing waters of a lock of the old Welland Canal at Port Dalhousie. Phillips attempted to walk a narrow beam over the lock, and upon reaching the centre stopped to dance a jig. He lost his balance and fell into the seething waters at the foot of the gate, where his body still remains unrecovered.

Phillips was a fireman on the tug Schofield, and was a veteran of the Great War. His drowning is the sixth at Port Dalhousie this summer.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Todays' Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE ROLLING EGG.

Once upon a time there were two little red spotted Squiggie Bugs named Abee and Beebee. They were crawling along near the coop house of Mrs. Cluck, the hen lady, one day, when the Squigglers found an empty egg shell, quite evenly broken in two parts, or halves.

"Oh, look what I have found!" buzzed Abee.

"I found it as much as you did!" cried Beebee.

"Of course you did," answered Abee. "We both found it together and we shall now go traveling around all the world."

"Traveling around the world in an egg shell! What do you mean?" asked Beebee.

"I'll show you," explained Abee. "This egg shell is hollow, just like Cinderella's golden pumpin coach, or an automobile, or a railroad car, or anything else one travels in. Once there was an egg in this shell, but I guess Mrs. Cluck took it out to make a cocoanut cake."

Abee was a bit wrong about that, for what Mrs. Cluck had made was a chocolate cake. However, let that pass. Anyhow the shell was empty.

"You and I will get inside—you in one half the shell and I in the other half," went on Abee. "We can fasten the edges together with some sticky gum from the pine tree. Tehn we can go rolling along and travel all over the world."

"What will make the egg roll?" Beebee wanted to know.

"You and I, of course," answered the other red spotted Squiggle bug. "We will jump somersaults over each other's back inside the shell. That will start the egg to rolling like a ball and we shall thus travel."

The Squigglers placed themselves inside the two halves of the empty egg shell, fastening it together with sticky gum from the pine tree. Then Abee jumped over Beebee's back and Beebee jumped over Abee's back, and this motion caused the egg to roll along.

Uncle Wiggily was one of the first to see the rolling egg. The rabbit gentleman had hopped away from his hollow stump bungalow to look for an adventure and, all of a sudden, along came rolling the egg.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed the bunny to himself. "Charlie or Arabelle, the chicken children, must be around here rolling eggs for fun." But when he looked and waited for the little rooster chap and his sister, they did not come out of the bushes. Still the egg rolled on.

"That is very strange!" exclaimed the bunny. "I might even say it was magical and surprising. And if I did not know better, I should say that egg was bewitched. But there must be a reason for it rolling as it does, even up hill, and I'll find out about it."

Uncle Wiggily gently held out one paw and stopped the rolling egg. Then all at once, from inside, out through some tiny air holes he had made, spoke the voice of Abee asking:

"Who stopped our rolling egg?"

"I did, if you please!" answered Uncle Wiggily. "But who is inside the rolling egg?"

"We are!" answered Beebee, and he and his brother opened the stuck together shell a little way and looked at Uncle Wiggily, whom they knew very well.

"Bless my pink, twinkling nose!" cried the rabbit gentleman, as he laughed. "What are you doing in an egg shell?"

"Travelling around to see the world," answered Abee.

"And we joggle and jiggle the egg shell and make it move by jumping somersaults over each other's backs," explained Beebee. Uncle Wiggily laughed harder than even.

The Squiggle Bugs had fastened the halves of the shell together again, and they started to roll up hill to get to the top and see more of the world when, all of a quickness, the Woozie Wolf popped out of the bushes to get the rabbit gentleman.

But when the bad chap saw the egg rolling up hill he was so surprised that he tucked his tail between his legs and howled:

"Oh, that must be a magical egg! There must be a fairy inside and she will turn me into a pancake! I'm going to run!" And away ran the Wolf. He was not wise enough to stop and see what was inside the egg. Then away rolled the Squigglers to see the world and they had a fine time.

So if ever you see an egg tumbling up hill don't be afraid, for it will only have Squiggle Bugs inside, and you may say "hello!" to them. And if the eye of the needle will watch the head of the pin trying to crawl under the hatrack, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Jack's legs.

MISSION WORKER GIVES ADDRESSES

Rev. W. Mattheson Speaks at Bethany Tabernacle.

Rev. William Matthison of Toronto, gave a spiritual address to a goodly company gathered at Bethany tabernacle last evening. Mr. Matthison, a prominent rescue mission worker of Toronto, speaks with an earnestness that grips his hearers.

Mr. Matthison chose for his text the last evening the 15th verse of the 6th chapter of John's Gospel: "When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himself alone."

In discoursing on this text the speaker said in part: The multitudes followed Jesus for various reasons: some to hear His words, others out of curiosity, and many for the "loaves and the fishes." They sought Him for what they might gain. Their desires were wrong; so it is in the present time. Many seek religion for what it brings them of gain, of prestige, or position. They love God for what He gives them. The speaker said man must love God for Himself. There is a sacrifice connected with Christian life, and it is not what a great many believe it to be. It is not gifts of money—service—etc., but the sacrifice of oneself, for Jesus said to the rich young ruler: "Deny yourself; come, take up your cross and follow Me."

With seriousness and earnestness, the speaker portrayed the great blessing in following the Lord wholly and loving Him for Himself, and His long-suffering and faithfulness toward men.

At the close of the service time was spent in prayer, and a number were greatly helped on in their Christian faith and walk.

Mr. Matthison will speak to-night at eight o'clock. This will be the last opportunity to hear this Christian worker.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

First Meeting of Winter Season Held on Tuesday.

The first meeting of the fall and winter season of St. Andrew's W. M.S. was held on Tuesday afternoon and took the form of a Home Helpers' meeting.

The President, Mrs. J. John, was in the chair and opened the meeting with devotional exercises, after which business was discussed and it was decided to hold the Thank offering meeting in October.

Mrs. B. L. Barnes contributed the scripture reading, followed by a vocal solo by Mrs. V. Walker, who was accompanied by Miss A. Blanchard.

A very pleasing address, dealing with the work of the Home Helpers, was given by Mrs. A. Porteous, who spoke in glowing terms of the good work done by this branch of the society.

Miss Craw, the very efficient convenor of the Watch Tower, called on the following ladies, namely, Mesdames Nelson, Shirley, Kerr and Miss Best, to report, each giving a short message from the various fields of labor which they represent. Miss Dixon pronounced the closing prayer.

PEACE OFFERING SERMON SUBJECT

Evangelist Gives Stirring Message at Gospel Hall Meeting.

It is clearly evident that nothing stirs the affections and spiritual life of the saint of God like meditation on Christ. In Gospel Hall last night Mr. Innes presented a message of peace to heart and conscience from Christ, the peace offering, Leviticus, chap. 3. The following gives a fair summary of his message: "In the offering we have the believer identified with the offering, in the death of sacrifice we have the divine truth of substitution and redemption by blood. By His death on the cross Christ made peace, in His resurrection proclaimed peace, and now He is our peace, a Gospel message surely to all in this world of unrest and commotion."

To-night he expects to speak on Christ, the sin offering.

The Royals of the All Saints' Athletic Association, Peterboro's last hope in the O. B. A. A. series, tied up the midget semi-finals with Kingston, yesterday, by beating the Eastern youngsters 16 runs to 1. The victory left the two teams tied and they were slated to decide a winner by a sudden death game at Belleville to-day.

The Peterboro youngsters won yesterday's game in just as hollow a fashion as the score indicates.

The Royal's heaver blew the ball by them so fast that the Easterners were helpless at the plate and Cripps had only to throw to twenty-nine batters during the game. One single by Quigley with one out in the seventh was the only hit off Royal catcher who caught one of Cripps and but four Kingston players reached first base. The Royals heaver would have scored an easshut out had it not been for his own wild throw in the first inning which put Wood, the Kingston lead off man in position to score the visitors' only tally.

Patterson started the game for the Kingston gang and did not do too badly but he was yanked after the Royals had tied the score in the third. Matheson who is considered the Kingston ace was sent in to hold the locals but the visitor's curve ball heaver simply could not locate the plate, giving ten bases on balls in the two frames he worked and these charities with a couple of hits and an error gave the Royals nine runs. McKee finished the battle and after being cuffed for six runs in the sixth, got by safely in the next two frames.

A feature of the game was a long home run by Doug. Hatton, the Royal catcher who caught one of McKee's slants on the nose in the sixth and smashed the ball to deep centre field for the circuit.

The Royals played good ball throughout and outclassed the visitors on the days play.

Kingston scored their only run in the first inning. Wood walked and was sacrificed to second by Robinson. Cripps tried to pick him off second and on the pitcher's wide throw, Wood ran to third from which station he scored on Quigley's sacrifice fly to Carroll. McKee fanned to retire the side and nut another Kingston man reached first until Quigley made his team's only hit with one out in the seventh. Hatton shot him down at second with a perfect peg when he tried to steal. In the eighth, two Royal errors put a couple of visitors on the runways but they died there.

The Royals tied the score in the third. Hope singled to right, stole second and continued on to third on Gratton's wide throw. Hollingsworth popped a single past first to score Hope. Hatton grounded out to second and Gordon lifted one to Patterson.

In the third, with Matheson pitching for Kingston, Holmes grounded out. Wilson and Stuart walked. Cripps forced Wilson at third on a roller to Matheson. A wild pitch moved the runners up a peg and Stuart scored on a passed ball. Passes to Hope, Hollingsworth and Carrol in succession forced in another run and with the bases still loaded, Hatton rolled to Matheson, for the third out.

Matheson filled the bases up to start the fourth by walking Gordon. Holmes and Wilson. Then Amy, the Kingston catcher interfered with Stuart and the batter was sent to first. Gordon being forced home. Cripps walked and Holmes sauntered in. Hope grounded to first and Wilson scored. Hollingsworth shot a single to left, sending Stuart and Cripps across the plate. Carrol drew a pass. Hatton beat out a roller and when Wood threw low to the plate, Hollingsworth and Carroll registered. Hatton was out stealing third and Gordon fanned, making the third out.

Six more were sent across in the sixth with McKee on the rubber for Kingston.

Holmes popped to Wood. Wilson was safe on Mattheson's error and Stuart singled to right. A couple of wild pitches and Cripps' double to right sent Wilson and Stuart in. Hope was safe when Robinson dropped Matheson's throw. Hollingsworth bunted safely. Cripps scoring and Hope reaching third. Carroll's sacrifice fly sent Hope in and then Hatton boomed his long home run to centre. Gordon struck out.

OSLERS DEFEAT KINGSTON TEAM

Toronto Team Hits Cairns Hard—McCay Hurls Well.

GOOD FIELDING.

KINGSTON, Sept. 23. — Under leaden skies with rain threatening throughout, the Kingston seniors, champions of the Central Ontario League, fell before the Toronto Oslers here yesterday before a very large crowd by the score of 12 to 3. The Oslers connected with Cairns's delivery with great freedom and made 14 hits. Cairns was no mystery to the Toronto team and did not strike out a batsman. In addition he walked two men and made a wild pitch. The Kingston hurler, on whose shoulders has fallen the full pitching responsibility, was suffering from a back injury.

Oslers made hard and clean hits. One error, by Halbert, when he dropped a high fly at second base, accounted for two runs. Oslers had the old fight all the way. After they scored their three runs in the first inning there was no holding them. The locals were just the opposite, but with three runs against them at the end of the first inning they came to life in the second, scored two runs, and proceeded to let it go at that. There was no life, no fight, and the game was gone long before the ninth inning came around.

McCay was the pitching selection for the Oslers, and although Kingston got only nine hits, they hammered the ball hard, too, and only one man went down by the strikeout route, "Bubs" Britton 'fanning' in the eighth inning. McCay was given marvellous support, especially by Breen, Dodds and Burt. Dodds, in centre field, played a remarkable game and picked off some beautiful clouts, but he did not have as many to handle as did 'Del" Cherry of the Kingston team, who got under nine drives, of which seven were very difficult to catch. Cherry played his best game of the season in the field and in addition got three hits in four times at bat. With all due respect to the others, Cherry was the star of the game. McCay whipped Kingston at Toronto last year and duplicated the feat in the Queen City last Saturday.

On Their Way.

Right off the bat the Oslers secured three runs. Fleming singled, Hughes reached first on the play at second, and Fleming was also safe. Egan sacrificed the runners along. Burt drew a walk, and with three on, Breen tripled, scoring Fleming, Hughes and Egan.

Kingston closed the gap in the second by scoring two. Cherry opened with a triple. Britton singled, scoring Cherry. Britton went to second on Burt's wild throw in. Purvis hit to right for a single. Walker fumbled the ball around and Britton came through with the second run. The only other time that Kingston scored was in the sixth. Halbert and Batstone both walked. Cherry singled and Halbert scored. With Cherry on first and Batstone on third, the former was caught between first and second. He tried to delay to get Batstone home, but the latter was watched, and the play switched from Cherry to him in time to get him at the plate. The next two men flied to centre.

Toronto scored a run in the third. Hughes tripled and scored on Egan's high fly to centre. Two more were added in the fifth. McCay singled. Fleming flied to Purvis. Hughes singled. Egan grounded, and Hughes was thrown at second. Burt lifted a high one to Halbert, and he dropped the ball, McCay and Egan scoring.

Piling Them Up.

Another pair came in the next inning. With two down, McCay walked. Fleming singled. Hughes singled, scoring McCay. Egan singled. Fleming scored, but Hughes was caught at the plate on Teepell's throw-in. Two runs were added in the eighth and ninth.

In the eighth, Dodds singled and went to second on a passed ball. Walker was safe at first on Britton's error, and Dodds scored. Walker went to second on a wild pitch. McCay doubled, scoring Walker. Fleming put down a bunt to advance McCay to third, and was thrown out at first. Hughes flied to centre, and McCay attempted to score, but he left the bag too soon, and was thrown out.

In the ninth, with one out, Burt singled, Breen tripling to score him. Hoose laid down a grounder, and the play was made on Breen, but he was safe. The next two men were easy outs.

YANKEES' LEAD CUT TWO GAMES RALLY IN NINTH

Barrett Gets Winning Run When Hunnefield Knocks Two Bagger.

BOSTON DEFEATED.

Indians Win Last Game of Season's Series From Braves.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (Canadian Press).—The New York Yankees' pennant hopes were given a jolt yesterday when the White Sox defeated them 2 to 1, while the Indians trimmed Boston, cutting the lead of the League leaders to two games. Chicago outhit the visiting Yanks, but were doomed to defeat until the ninth inning when Shocker weakened after two men were out. Harris started the rally with a walk, and Mostil, who was out of the game because of a lame shoulder, ran for him. He took second on a passed ball, and scored the tying run on Hunnefield's double to centre. Barrett drove over the winning run when Hunnefield scored on a two-base hit to left field. Thurston held the Yankees to four hits but his own wildness cost him a run in the seventh inning. Koenig started the round with a scratched double to centre, after which Thurston filled the bases by walking Severeid and Shocker. Combs forced Severeid at second, Koenig scoring the run which saved the Yankees from a whitewash.

Cleveland made it two out of three from Boston, winning 5 to 1, giving Cleveland the season's series, 16 to 6. Buckeye kept the visitors' eight hits scattered, while Cleveland bunched hits off Heimach with his two passes and three Boston errors to score three runs. The game was featured by Speaker's sensational work in centre field.

After pitching hitless ball for six innings, Earl Whitehill's cunning left him, and Philadelphia drove him from the box to beat Detroit yesterday, 8 to 2. Holloway, who succeeded him, was little better. Manush, who is leading the American League hitters, emerged from his batting slump, making three hits in five times at bat.

Bucky Harris' Washington Senators defeated the St. Louis Browns four straight by winning 6 to 3. Giard was knocked off the hill in the sixth.

CARDINALS SLAM ROBIN HURLERS TOTAL 17 HITS

St. Louis Practically Clinch Championship By Defeating Brooklyn.

CINCINNATI IDLE.

Pirates Take Odd Game in Three Game Series From Phillies.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (Canadian Press).—The League leading Cardinals slugged the Robins into submission at Brooklyn yesterday to the tune of 15 to 7, burying three opposing hurlers under an avalanche of 17 hits for a total of 36 bases. As Cincinnati was idle yesterday, the St. Louis lead on first place was increased to two games and a half.

In winning the game that practically clinched the championship, Bottomley and Thevenow hit home runs, Lester Bell three triples and a double, O'Farrell a triple and Southworth a three-bagger, a double and a single.

Arthur Reinhart went the route in the box for the Cardinals, yielding eleven hits. He had little trouble, for his team-mates piled up an early lead with three runs in the opening inning and five more in the second.

Jess Barnes was knocked off the mound in the second inning when five successive hits were made after two were out. Rube Ehrhardt followed Barnes, and in the fourth St. Louis scored four runs at his expense. Bob McGraw finished the contest.

The game was the last of the season between the two clubs. The Cardinals won 15 out of 22.

Pittsburgh took the odd game of the series of three at Philadelphia by winning 9 to 3. Pie Traynor led a slugging attack with a single, double and home run that accounted for a total of five runs.

The Cubs won their last game of the season's series with the Giants here yesterday, 3 to 2, taking the final group by three games to one. The Chicago club won 14 of 22 tussles in the year's count with the New Yorkers.

Joe Poetz, right hander from the Portsmouth club of the Virginia League, worked seven innings for the Giants, allowing only five hits, two of which were home runs by Floyd Scott and Gabby Hartnett.

CROWDS GATHER AT QUAKER CITY FOR BIG BOUT

In Spite of Injunction Moves Battle Is Expected To-day.

CHAMP FAVORITE.

132,000 Spectators To Fill Sesqui-Centennial Stadium.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23 (Canadian Press).—While the last injunction move was being fought in court and the last nails driven into the serried rows of pine seats at the Sesqui-centennial Stadium, Philadelphia last night became the centre of the most feverish fight furore in boxing history.

Nothing in the last three decades of glove fighting has even approached the excitement and enthusiasm aroused on the eve of the ten-round battle to-night in which Jack Dempsey, king of the heavyweight division for seven years, will defend his crown against the attack of the handsome former marine, Gene Tunney.

The fact that Dempsey is an overwhelming favorite, quoted at odds of 3 to 1 in brisk wagering, has not dampened public interest. Philadelphia, entertaining the greatest sporting event in its history, has gone "fight mad" on general principles. The incoming thousands, most of them from the big eastern and middle western centres of populations, but others from such far away points as Australia and South America, testify to the world-wide attention drawn to boxing's classic event.

The first heavyweight championship bout in three years will have the most dramatic and spectacular setting in the annals of boxing or probably any other sport. If the expectations of Promoter Tex Rickard are fulfilled, and they seem likely to be, approximately 132,000 spectators will pay something like $1,750,000 to see Dempsey and Tunney match their skill and stamina in a struggle that cannot last more than 30 minutes.

The Gladiators of ancient Rome, who fought for hours to a finish without compensation, probably would turn over in their graves if they knew that these two modern fighters were to split a purse of $650,000 for a carefully regulated test of supremacy, limited to little more than a half-hour.

No stadium in modern sports history has ever seated such a throng as will be banked in the vast reaches of the gigantic Sesqui Stadium. Nor has any athletic spetcacle ever attracted as big a "gate." Boxing, boomed to unprecedented proportions in modern times by the promoting skill of Rickard, has set the financial pace in sports. It will reach new high marks here, with the crowd exceeding by about 40,000 the largest attendance heretofore and eclipsing by at least $100,000 the highest previous record for gate receipts.

Previous records were established in 1921 by Boyle's Thirty Acres, Jersey City, when 90,000 saw Dempsey hammer Georges Carpentier into submission at a cost of $1,626,000.

Wherever fight throngs eddied and flowed in increasing thousands, Dempsey stood out as the pick of the great majority of fans and experts, but Tunney is already the hero of the battle. In the same breath with which excited fans declare Dempsey's devastating punch is destined to end the match before it is half over, they will utter the "hope" that Tunney is returned the victor.

The most hopeful of Tunney's prospects base their conviction that he has at least a fighting chance upon several factors. These have to do not only with Tunney's excellent record, but unquestioned ruggedness and defensive ability, but a belief that Dempsey will not be the same champion who battered Willard, Carpentier, Firpo and others into defeat. These critics, while conceding Dempsey to be the heavier puncher, doubt that he has regained his best condition or that his legs will carry him through if the fight is unexpectedly prolonged.

Then, too, observers feel that the harassing and bothersome series of legal actions, unprecedented in connection with a title battle, have affected the champion's morale. His friends, however, are convinced that these moves have served only to stimulate Dempsey's fighting temper and put him on edge.

POLICE OFFICER DIES IN CRASH

Riding in Taxi Which Is Struck By Touring Car.

IN TORONTO.

TORONTO, Sept. 23.—Constable John Mackenzie of Claremont Street Police Division was instantly killed yesterday afternoon when the taxi in which he was riding was struck and overturned by a touring car at Harbord and Bathurst Streets. Jack Grosse, 880 Manning Avenue, driver of the taxi, escaped unhurt. He, along with the driver of the other car, Joseph Arrigo, 211 Montrose Avenue, were arrested on charges of manslaughter. They are both out on bail of $3,000 each.

Grosse's story to the police was that Mackenzie hailed him at Bloor and Bathurst Streets and asked him to drive him as quickly as possible to the Union Station, as he wanted to see some friends on the train before reporting for duty. This was around 2 o'clock, and the constable was due to report at the station at 2.45.

Hurled Against Light Standard.

The driver claims he was driving south on Bathurst Street at about twenty-five miles an hour. Crossing over the intersection of Harbord Street, he said, he slowed down. The next he knew, he said, was when the car had been struck and hurled against an electric light standard.

Arrigo was driving west on Harbord Street. His car, police said, struck the rear of the taxi with such force that it tore the back of the body of the car completely off. Dr. L. M. Golden, who has an office at Bathurst and Harbord Streets, was on the scene immediately, and pronounced the policeman dead from a fracture of the skull.

Coroner M. M. Crawford ordered the body removed to the Morgue.

Just one year ago, at the same spot, Mackenzie figured in the stopping of a runaway. He was injured and taken to the hospital.

The late Constable Mackenzie had been three years on the force. He was well liked and had done duty in Markham and Claremont Street Divisions. Members of the force will march at the funeral.

Mackenzie Was 27 Years Old.

ENGLAND WINS BY DETERMINATION

Coolness, Courage and Patience Ascribed By Visitor.

TORONTO, Sept. 23.—That the patience, coolness and determination of the Englishman were responsible for England's remarkable recovery from the conditions brought about by recent strikes was the opinion expressed by William Stone, a Toronto business man, who has just returned from an extended trip to the Old Country. Mr. Stone made his first trip to England 50 years ago, and has visited there frequently since, so that he was in a position to accurately diagnose the conditions there.

He believed that one good effect of the strikes would be the bringing of the employers and employees closer together. This co-operation, he thought, would result in greater production and thus afford British goods a better chance in foreign competition.

Mr. Stone said that he was very much impressed with the amount of building going on over there. "Not only houses, but business places and public buildings, as well as many miles of new highways," he said, "are being built."

Conditions in the agricultural districts were exceptionally good, and the farmers were looking forward to a very profitable result from their season's work, Mr. Stone said.

YOUTH CONFESSES HIS PART IN FRAUD

Admits He Was Coached To Say He Took His Mother To Carmel.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—(Canadian Press).) — Clarence Wiseman, 19, son of Mrs Lorraine Wiseman Seilaff, who confessed attempting to manufacture testimony to support the Aimee Semple McPherson kidnapping story, admitted to District Attorney Key's early to-day that he had been a "plant" in the alleged evidence fraud.

Wiseman said he had been coached to tell newspaper men he drove his mothr to and from Carmel during time Kenneth Ormiston and a mysterious woman companion occupied a cottage there. Keyes said the youth's testimony completed the chain of evidence in the Carmen angle of the case.

ONLY HURRICANE OR INJUNCTION CAN STOP FIGHT

Lawyers Are Busy Clearing Up the Legal Troubles.

SPECTATORS ARRIVE.

Dempsey 4 To 1 Favorite Now and Confident of Victory.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23 (Canadian Press).—Jack Dempsey, the champion, and Gene Tunney, the challenger, two modern gladiators, were girded today to fight for the heavyweight championship of the world and the richest prize in the sporting world—$650,000—before the greatest throng that ever paid to view a boxing match anywhere. Few wars, ancient or modern, have required more diplomatic manoeuvres, negotiations, and ultimatums than this duel, but the path to its consummation today seemed clear, barring a last minute injunction or a hurricane.

Cloudy with possible showers was the prospect early today. The day broke with overcast skies and at times there was a slight drizzle.

Preliminary skirmishes in the ring were scheduled to begin at seven, standard time, with the signal for the main attack expected between 8.30 and 8.45.

While lawyers moved to settle the last remaining legal issues and workmen put the finishing touches on the Stadium, the advance guard of visitors, numbering close to 50,000, converged on the city overnight, with as many more expected during the day. While the seating capacity of the Stadium is 132,000, it is expected 200,000 will seek the scene of battle by nightfall.

The wealth, society, and public life of the continent will be represented at the fight with people whose names fill society's blue books holding the choicest of ringside seats and mingling with the fans clutching $5.50 pasteboards. Nothing in boxing or sporting history in this country has even remotely approached the proportions of this spectacle, taking all angles into consideration.

Dempsey has been established a heavy favorite. Wagers on him, accepted as a barometer of public opinion, have reflected a steady lengthening of odds of from 2 to 1 to close to 4 to 1 as the time of the bout approached. Dempsey, all critics believe, will make a rushing, tearing battle of it from the start, just as he did against Jess Willard and Luis Firpo. Tunney's best prospect of victory was conceded to be in the fight going the limit or close to it.

Both fighters are confident. Dempsey said: "I'll knock Tunney out in the first round if I can." While the challenger said he was confident he would win.

An application for an injunction to stop the Dempsey-Tunney fight to-night was dismissed this morning by the unanimous opinion of three judges in the Common Pleas Court.

WEATHER MORE FAVORABLE.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23. — (Canadian Press.)—Weather conditions more favourable for the Dempsey-Tunney fight to-night were apaprent at noon. It had stopped raining and the clouds were higher, indicating a decreasing possibility of further showers. The temperature was 70.

CHAMP WEIGHS IN.

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 23. — (Canadian Press.)—Jack Dempsey moved the beam at 190 pounds when he weighed in this afternoon for his fight to-night at Philadelphia with Gene Tunney.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23. — (Canadian Press.)—Gene Tunney, jumping on the scales afteran aeroplane trip from his Stroudberg camp, weighed 185 1-2 pounds. Dempsey's challenger was pronounced in perfect condition by physicians.

BALLOTS FOUND LYING ON FLOOR

Discrepancy Also Discovered in Four Oshawa Divisions.

BEING INVESTIGATED.

OSHAWA, Ont., Sept. 23.—More than five hundred ballots are unaccounted for from the City of Oshawa, statements from at least four polling sub-divisions in the city show actual discrepancies in the returns and five ballots marked for Dr. T. E. Kaiser, Conservative candidate, were found after the election on the floor of pooling booth No. 8 in the City Hall.

All these facts brought out yesterday in the declaration of returns before Returning Officer A. W. Jackson, of Whitby, would indicate that a recount of the vote in the constituency of Ontario is probable. Dr. T. E. Kaiser, Conservative candidate, was declared the elected representative, with a majority of 879, the vote being Dr. T. E. Kaiser, 8,569, and W. H. Moore, 7,690.

A. W. Jackson, returning officer for Ontario riding, stated that he had gone as far as the law permitted him to go in the matter of clearing up the situation. He was of the opinion that any discrepancies shown were not wilful, but would be shown when looked into to be either carelessness or mistakes.

Fire Chief Cameron and two of his men, while cleaning up the City Hall, following the day of voting, picked up five ballots on the floor. These were all marked for Dr. Kaiser. Chief Cameron forwarded them to J. A. McGibbon, and he in turn sent them on to the chief returning officer, A. W. Jackson, at Whitby. Mr. Jackson immediately got in touch with Ottawa as to what disposition should be made of the stray ballots. He received word to have them placed in a separate parcel and forwarded direct to Ottawa. In the meantime he is to secure statements from all those who in any way had to do with the finding or returning of the papers. This is now being done.

Both Mr. Moore and Mr. Mangan stated that they were anxious to do anything in their power to avoid the expense of a recount, if the information desired could be secured through the ordinary channels.

FORM COMPANY TO BUILD BRIDGE

Canadian and American Business Men To Construct Niagara Bridge.

COSTS $4,000,000.

NIAGARA FALLS, Sept. 23. — Public notice is given that an application will be made to Parliament for the incorporation of a company to be known as the "Niagara Memorial Bridge Company," whose purpose is to construct a new $4,000,000 connecting link between the American and Canadian sides of the river. This structure will be seventy feet wide, as compared with the forty-five foot dimensions of the present upper bridge, and will be located between the International Bridge and the Falls themselves, so as to join Falls Street, Niagara Falls, N.Y., with Ferry Street of this city.

The application for a charter is signed by German & Brooks, solicitors, on behalf, it is understood, of a syndicate of Canadian and American business men, including George Wright of Toronto; W. M. German, K.C., of Welland; Mayor Harry Stephens of this city; and Messrs. McDonald, Scoville, and Randall of Buffalo.

URGES CHANGE.

New Zealander Would Have Condition Struck From Acceptance.

(By Henry Wood, United Press Staff Correspondent).

GENEVA, Sept. 23.—Sir Francis Bell of New Zealand today urged revision of the formula recommended to the plenary world court conference as suitable for the acceptance of American reservations to court membership.

Sir Francis proposed an amendment eliminating the provision of the formula which would permit the world court signatories by a two-thirds vote to withdraw their acceptance of the American reservations. The United States would probably resent such a provision, Sir Francis said.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE — — — — By AHERN

Y. W. DIRECTORS PLAN FOR YEAR

Rally on October 1 Will Start Work of Season.

SPECIAL SPEAKER.

The Board of Directors of the Young Women's Christian Association met on Monday afternoon for the first meeting of the fall term. The President, Miss M. Hamilton, was in the chair.

The Programme and Entertainment Committee reported that arrangements for the fall rally has been made. It will be held on Friday, October 1st, at eight o'clock. Following the devotional exercises and musical programme, there will be an outline given by the Secretaries of the classes and activities for this year. Miss J. M. Pearce, General Secretary of the Toronto Y.M.C.A., will be the guest of the association and will speak at the rally. Miss Pearce's wonderful interest in Y.W.C.A. work, not only in Toronto, but all over the world, will make her message to Peterborough a valuable one. She has just returned from the World's Y.W.C.A. Conference in London, England.

The rally programme will conclude with an exhibition of gymnastic drills, display of basketry, selections by the Ukulele and Outdoor Clubs and a tour of the building and swimming pool, followed by the service of refreshments. Everyone is cordially invited to be present. A junior rally for all juniors will be held at three o'clock on Saturday, October 2nd.

At this meeting the Religious Work Committee reported that two Bible study classes will be held, one on life problems and one for teachers of classes of 'teen age girls. The Sunday evening sing-songs will be held during January, February and March. World Fellowship Week will be observed by all classes from November 14th to 20th. The committee, with the help of the India Council, will endeavor to raise the foreign work budget of $150.

The Educational Committee recommended the following classes for this season: Elocution lessons, dramatic club, home nursing and first-aid course, ukulele club for beginners and advanced pupils, basketry class, housework training club, Christmas novelties club, wood carving, junior cooking class and junior story hour. A new course to be organized this year will be the English literature extension course of the Toronto University. Arrangements have been made for Dr. Pratt, of Toronto, to conduct a series of eight lectures on modern writers. The course will start at the end of October and will be held every second week. The first four lectures will be on Hardy and Masefield. The price of the course is $2.00.

Miss C. Littlefield reported for the gymnasium classes this term. The classes will start on October 4th, and a higher registration than that of last year is anticipated. The swimming classes have kept up well all summer, over eight hundred lessons having been taught. The pool will be open until the end of October for swimmers and life-saving classes and a big exhibition will be held at the close of the term.

Miss L. Brownscombe spoke of the week-end conference for girl leaders of the association, which is being held at the end of this week, and of the benefit to be derived from it in promoting the all-round work of the association.

Reading of the regular monthly reports was left over until the next meeting.

Arrangements were made for necessary heating repairs to the House Department.

A committee was appointed, to be ready to co-operate with the Rotary Club, in connection with a swimming campaign, and with the Kiwanis Club in connection with life-saving classes.

THREE SUICIDES IN ONE FAMILY

Another in Serious Condition From Self-Inflicted Wounds.

IN MANITOBA.

ROBLIN, Man., Sept. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—This quiet farming community has been shocked by a series of tragedies which have resulted in four deaths, and which may result in a fifth. Three members of the Little family have died from self-inflicted gunshot wounds, and a fourth member of the same family is reported in a serious condition at Bield, a small town east of here, also as a result of an attempt at suicide.

On Sept. 13 Ross Little shot and wounded a neighbor, James Monro, and then committed suicide by shooting himself throughout the head.

Yesterday police found the bodies of George and Myrtle, his sister, lying outside the house, and partly covered by snow. The police have reported a double suicide. Scarcely had the town heard the news of this tragedy when word came from Bield that Miss Allie Little, another member of the family, had attempted suicide by slashing her throat.

THEATRE

AT THE REGENT

JOHNNY HINES SCINTILLATES IN "THE CRACKERJACK" REGENT TO-NIGHT.

There is a fast-moving story on the Regent screen this week that is indeed well worth seeing. It's name is "The Cracker Jack" and it certainly is every bit of that. With the breezy Johnny Hines in the stellar role, "The Cracker Jack" is in the hands of a most capable personage who romps through seven intensive reels of action, speed, humor and intrigue that registers practically every foot of the way.

Hines' personality and ingenuity dominate the entire production, and justly so since he is the very hub around which the ingenious plot revolves. "The Cracker Jack' tells the story of a college boy who puts his genius to the test by putting over his uncle's pickle product. Perkin's stuffed pickles have been on the market in haphazard fashion due to the slipshod business methods of Col. Perkins, but Hines, in the role of Tommy Perkins comes to the rescue and by his whirlwind advertising methods makes the pickle product known the length and breadth of the country.

AT THE CAPITOL.

GROUP OF REAL COWBOYS APPEAR IN "DESERT GOLD"

Ace of Western Pictures has Crew of Rugged Western Aces.

The most remarkable aggregation of champion western stunt horsemen assembled since the Pendleton and Cheyenne roundups has been brought together as a stock company of cowboys by Famous Players-Lasky in Hollywood and will appear in the picturization of Zane Greys "Desert Gold," which opens at the Capitol Theatre to-day.

"We decided that the best way to put real western punch into pictures with western settings was to engage the finest western characters available, includin stunt riders, bulldoggers, ropers and branders," said Hector Turnbull, associate producer at the Studio.

The ace of the outfit is Bill Hurley, who won eleven out of thirteen starts in the Pony Express contests held in London a few years ago.

Hurley also established a world's record by making a complete change of horses, including the transfer of saddle in five seconds flat.

Tommy Grimes of the Paramount outfit, won the roping championship at the last Pendleton, Oregon, roundup. Another member guesses with unfailing regularity within ten pounds, the weight of any steer in a herd.

Neil Hamilton, Shirley Mason, Robt Frazer and William Powell, the featured players in "Desert Gold," found plenty of competition in the many hard riding scenes. Lucien Hubbard editorial supervisor, and George B. Seitz, director, who worked together in a similar capacity in "The Vanishing American,' were again associated in "Desert Gold.'

Van Sweringen Stocks In Great Demand To-day

NEW YORK, September 23. — Canadian Press. — Reduction in the call money rate from 5 1-2 to 5 per cent., and the renewed demand for Van Sweringen railroad shares, helped to revive the wanish bullish enthusiasm in to-day's stock market.

Prices were unsettled during most of the morning with selling pressure exerted against such recent favorites as United States Steel common and General Motors, but the market was headed upward again by early afternoon.

Brisk buying of Van Sweringen shares reflected the growing belief that the Cleveland financiers will be able to put through a merger plan satisfactory to the opponents of the original proposal. Chesapeake and Ohio crossed 175 and "Nickle Plate" common crossed 202 to record high levels, and Pere Marquette advanced two points. Good buying also developed in a number of other high grade dividend payers.

The persistent buying of Union Oil of California was associated with merger reports but no definite inforamtion of the companys plans was available. General asphalt issues also staged a remarkable come-back, which helped to stimulate the interest in some of the other oils.

Bad Weather In West Sends Wheat Price Up

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—(Canadian Press)—Widespread rain & snow in Western Canada, together with a forecast of continued unfavourable conditions, brought about an early rush of wheat buying today. Starting unchanged to 3-4c higher, the wheat marketscored a quick general advance. Corn, oats and provisions all delveoped strength, corn starting at 1-8c off to 5-8c up and later showing gains all round.

Trading Featureless On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, Sept. 23 (Canadian Press).—Trading was light and featureless on the Standard Mining Exchange today, with only sligth prices changes recorded. Hollinger gained 5 cents to 19.20, and Lake Shore 5 to 13.85, while Kirkland Lake lost 2 to 102, McIntyre 14 to 24.76, Teck Hughes 1 to 4.51, and Wright Hargraves 5 to 8.70. In the silvers, Beaver eased 3 cents to 85, Castle 2 to 1.40, and Keeley 1 to 1.64, while Bourlamaque firmed 2 to 1.16. In the unlisteds Noranda dropped 5 cents to 18.30 and International Nickel 13 to 35.87.

Toronto Market Dull Trend Rather Mixed

TORONTO, Sept. 23.— (Canadian Press.)—Loblaw's Groceteria's advance of four points to a close at noon at 51, featured the rather dull session of the Toronto stock exchange to-day. Massey Harris common firmed three-quarters to 72 5-8 and Industrial Alcohol, which was fairly active, gained one point to 22. Arnold common was up one point to 24 1-4, while Brazilian Track eased five-eighths to 120. Abitibi lost 1 1-2 points to 95 and Barcelona one-half to 38. Winnipeg Railway closed one point higher at 58 and Twin City firmed one-eighth to 68 1-4. Smelters was off one point to 245. Gooderham and Worts dropped one to 34 and Page Hersey preferred one-half to 105 1-2, while Bank of Commerce gained one to 21, Montreal closed two points lower at 270, Noranda eased five cents to 18.35.

WEDDING BELLS.

COLLIS—WORRALL

On Wednesday, September 22, at St. John's Church, Peterborough, a quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized by the Rev. R. C. Blagrave, D.D., when Charlotte Elsie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Worrall of Bowmanville, became the bride of John Frederick Durrant, only son of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Collis, Peterborough.

The bride was charmingly attired in a costume of cocoa brown with hat to match and fur choker, the gift of the groom. Her corsage bouquet was of sweetheart roses.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strain of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Mr. F. G. Mann, and was attended by Miss Florence Greene, who looked lovely in blonde canton crepe, with hat to match and corsage bouquet of American beauty roses. The bridegroom was supported by Mr. Bert Graham.

After the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served at the home of the groom's parents, at which Dr. Blagrave proposed a toast to the health and happiness of the bride and groom. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a piece of silver, and to the best man a pair of gold cuff links.

The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts. They left on the noon train for Toronto, Niagara and other points. On their return they will reside at 785 George Street, Peterborough.

MILLIONS LOST TO WESTERNERS BY DETERIORATION OF GRAIN FROM BAD WEATHER THIS WEEK

Rain, Snow and Sleet Cause Serious Delay in Harvesting.

HEAVY FROSTS.

Mercury Drops To 14 Degrees at Calgary—Blizzards Reported.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—The snow, rain and sleet which has prevailed throughout Western Canada for the past two days, have caused the most serious delay in harvesting the prairie grain crop in many years. Fears are generally entertained that the final yield will be greatly reduced and that millions of dollars will be lost to Canadian farmers through deterioration of grade values.

The cold wave that hovered over Alberta for several days has now spread over the entire Western grain belt, Manitoba being visited by a snowstorm last night that reached blizzard proportions in some districts.

Wintry conditions are general throughout the prairies, and heavy frosts are reported from several points. Alberta continued to bear the brunt of inclement weather, the Calgary and Edmonton districts experiencing 18 and 12 degrees of frost respectively.

NO MORE HAZING AT UNIVERSITY

Queen's Students Voluntarily Abandon "Relic of Barbarous Past."

PRINCIPAL PLEASED.

KINGSTON, Sept. 24.— Hazing at Queen's University was abolished for all time by the Alma Mater Society, the student governing organization of the university, at a special meeting yesterday. The meeting was called as a result of a resolution denouncing initiations, drafted by the captains of the football, track, basketball and hockey teams, J. Alex Edmison, Acting President of the Alma Mater Society, and members of his executive, the Presidents of the various faculty societies and years, the editor and the business manager of the Queen's University Journal and by the members of the committee which had been appointed to supervise the initiation which had been proposed for this year. The undergraduates of the university are so thoroughly agreed that hazing is a relic of the barbarous past that the motion to dispense with it met with very little discussion, and was passed unanimously.

Dr. R. Bruce Taylor, Principal of the university, when informed of the action of the Alma Mater Society immediately after the meeting, said: "That is very, very good news. I am particularly glad, because the students acted on their own initiative, entirely without prompting from the faculty. It is a great victory for student self-government."

About 11 per cent. of the total production of iron and steel in this country, or about 3,052,818 tons, went into the manufacture of automobiles in 1924.

Art Displays On Its Ships Installed By French Line

PARIS, Sept. 24.—Passengers crossing the Atlantic by the French Line will henceforth have an opportunity to admire and study French art in a series of expositions of painting organized aboard the company's liners. The inauguration of these salons takes place on the Paris, which left Havre yesterday for New York, the occasion being celebrated with a luncheon which the President, Dal Piaz, gave to a number of French and American artists, official personalities and newspaper men. The salon, which was afterward visited, contains a very fine selection of landscapes signed by the foremost painters of the nineteenth century and contemporary schools.

The expositions were organized by M. Jean Charpentier under the auspices of the French Association for the Expansion of Artistic Exchanges.

POLES WELCOME LEADER AGAINST WAR MINISTER

Shout "Down With Pilsudski" and Cheer For His Opponent.

BILL VOTED DOWN.

Scandal in War Ministry Adds To Sentiment Against Dictator.

WARSAW, Poland, Sept. 24.—Growing sentiment against the semi-dictatorship of Minister of War Pilsudski broke forth in a vast demonstration of support for General Malczwski, who opposed Marshal Pilsudski during his revolutoin of last May.

When Malczwski arived at the Vienna station here, a crowd of nearly 4,000 persons greeted him with cries on "Down with Pilsudski," and carried him on shoulders to his automobile. They followed him to his hotel and continued the demonstration there until dispersed by the efforts of almost the entire Warsaw police force. Several were slightly wounded.

Yesterday the anti-Pilsudski movement again showed its strength when the finance committee of the Polish Diet voted against the War Ministry Budget for the last quarter of the present year. One of the principal items opposed to was the 60 per cent. increase in army pay, which Pilsudski obtained for the men last July but upon which the Diet had not yet had opportunity of passing judgment.

If the Diet supports the veto of the finance committee when it votes on the War Ministry Budget in two or three days, the Government will be faced with the alternative of resigning or of dissolving the Diet and calling a new election. In either event a critical situation for the internal peace of Poland may arise.

Some circles here compare the present situation with that which existed in Warsaw just before the outbreak of the May revolution. The War Office is far from popular here now and the newspapers have just revealed a financial scandal, which has brought it into further popular disfavor. The Frankopol factory, in which a number of Polish industrialists and a French airplane motor company are interested, has for the last three years received a total credit from the War Ministry of approximately $1,000,000 for future delivery of airplanes and motors. But no deliveries have yet been made, and out of this credit only the factory has been built. Even that has not been completed. The credit is now exhausted, and as the War Ministry has refused to grant further credit, negotiations are going on for the sale of the factory to the Skoda Works, a Czecho-Slovakian munitions concern now owned by the French munitions firm of Schneider.

LONDON, Sept. 24—(United Press).— William Pronger decided to commit suicide. He climbed through the window of his office and hung by his hands, ready to drop six stories to death. In a moment, however he reconsidered and shouted for help. His hands slipped as he reached out to a rescurer who had rushed from the adjoining room and he fell to his death.

KING CABINET IS READY TO TAKE OFFICE

Wait Meighen's Resignation After Final Meeting Slated For Friday.

NEW MEMBERS.

Rumored Premier Will Make Secretary of State Separate Portfolio.

OTTAWA, Ont., September 24. — Canadian Press. — Premier Meighen will resign at noon to-day, unless there is a change in plans. A meeting of the Cabinet, the final one, is scheduled fo. the morning at eleven o'clock. At its conclusion, Mr. Meighen will, in all probability, proceed to Government house, and tender his resignation to the Governor-General.

It seems probable that the calling of Mr. King will follow close on the resignation of Mr. Meighen. This evening it was stated on excellent authority that Mr. King is quite ready. The cabinet slate is complete, and the final announcement is unlikely to produce many surprises. While there is always a possibility of change at the last minute, the line-up is likely to be as follows:

Prime Minister and External Affairs: Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King.
Minister of Finance: Hon. James A. Robb.
Minister of Justice: Hon. Ernest Lapointe.
Minister of Railways: Hon. Charles Dunning.
Minister of Interior: Hon. Charles Stewart.
Minister of Agriculture: Hon. W. R. Motherwell.
Minister of Marine: Hon. P. J. Cardin.
Postmaster General: Hon. P. J. Veniot.
Minister of Public Works: Hon J. C. Elliott.
Minister of Customs: W. D. Euler.
Minister of Trade and Commerce: James Malcolm.
Minister of Immigration: Robert Forke.
Minister of National Defence: Col. J. L. Ralston.
Minister of Health and S. C. R.: Hon. J. H. King.
Minister of Labor: Probably Peter Heenan.
Without portfolio: Senator Dandurand and Hon. J. E. Sinclair.

Mr. King, it is rumoured, will again make the Department of the Secretary of State a separate portfolio. If this is done Fernand Renfret, of St. James' Division, Montreal, will probably be the minister. This department was placed under the direction of the Minister of Justice some time ago. While there is nothing definite in regard to the Department of Labor, Peter Heenan is now regarded as the probable appointee. He is on his way to Ottawa from his home in Kenora.

When the Cabinet is sworn in, the Ministers must be re-elected in their constituencies. A seat must be found for Col. Ralston in Nova Scotia and the way may be cleared by the appointment of Paul Hatfield, member for Shelburne-Yarmouth, to the Senate.

Issuance of writs for the bye-elections must wait upon the return of the writs from the general election which may occupy some weeks. The government may not be able to call Parliament until late in November or early in December.

EXPECT WINTER WILL BREAK UP COAL DISPUTE

Breaking of Cold Weather Will Force Strikers Back To Mines.

OWNERS DETERMINED.

Miners Are Prepared To Accept the 1921 Wage Agreement.

LONDON, September 24. (United Press.) — The coal miners are in retreat and labor leaders are frankly admitting that only the government can now save them from a complete rout, provided the owners are prepared to continue the fight for a few weeks more.

It is believed that the moment the weather breaks the miners will return to work on the best terms they can get, without consulting the national leaders.

Hence, there is a tremendous effort to get the government to act as a salvage corps. The Laborites are also hopeful that financial interests who want to see a settlement reached as rapidly as possible, will bring pressure to bear on the owners not to prolong the strife by exploiting their victory, and they are backing rather heavily on this aspect, because yesterday the stock exchange was filled with rumors that a settlement was likely to be reached in a few hours.

1921 Agreement.

The miners are now prepared to accept what is known as the 1921 wage agreement, which would mean a general reduction in wages of about ten per cent., but they are pleading with Premier Baldwin to stand by the coal commission's report, which would also ensure a seven hour day.

The premier wants the owners to meet the miners and the government in a tri-party conference, but the owners are reluctant to have anything to do with the Miners' federation, which avowedly they are determined to break so as to ensure a long spell of peace in the mining industry.

NOT IN FAVOR.

LONDON, September 24. Canadian Press. — Almost continuous negotiations which have been in progress for the past week have failed to bring an immediate settlement of the long protracted coal tie-up in Great Britain.

Executives of the Miners' federation last night returned to their districts after offering to have their men return to work temporarily under the general terms of the agreement of 1921 with other stipulations regarding a national wages agreement.

It is understood that the Baldwin government is not favorably disposed to the miners' suggestions, which, however, will be laid before a full cabinet meeting to-day by the premier.

AFTERNOON TEA.

Successful Function Held By Ladies of St. Paul's Church.

A very successful tea, with a pleasant musical programme, was held yesterday afternoon and evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, at the residence of Mrs. R. H. Hunter, George Street. Over one hundred ladies were in attendance, and were received by Mrs. Hunter, Mrs. D. Jordan, president of the society and Mrs. William Allen. Mrs. R. W. Davidson had charge of the musical programme, and the ladies were ushered into the tea room by Mrs. S. D. McKee and Mrs. J. McNabb. The color scheme in the floral decorations was an attractive effect of mauve and gold. The tea table was centred by a basket of mauve asters and phlox, banked by gold tulle. Tea was poured by Mesdames J. Garbutt, William Turner, James Skinner and James McCaw, assisted by Mesdames F. Weir, McLean, Hancock, Squair and Miss Montgomery. The musical programme included vocal numbers by Mrs. H. Doig, Mrs. V. Walker, and Mr. C. H. Crowe, with accompaniments played by Miss Gwen Donley, Miss Alma Blanchard and Miss Emma Lou Chenhall.

LABOR CONGRESS WILL ASK RIGHT FOR PICKETING

Trades Union Debate on "Peaceful Picketing" at Annual Convention.

CLAUSES PASSED.

Plan To Ignore Court Injunctions Voted Down By

MONTREAL, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—"Peaceful picketing" was a subject which roused deep feeling amongst the delegates at yesterday's meeting of the 42nd convention of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, in session here. The discussion was enlivened by the efforts of the "Left" or "Red" wing of the Congress to induce the executive committee to go to the extent of advising and aiding Labor to continue picketing, whether or not against the law, and to ignore injunctions of courts.

The radical element fared badly, however, in the voting, though prominent in the debate. The various clauses of the report of the special committee named to deal with the matter were adopted except for the last clause, and this will be taken up on resumption of sittings.

Tim Buck of Toronto, and Delegate John Macdonald, also of Toronto, led the fight against the recommendations of the special committee, of which Vice-President Jas. Simpson of Toronto is chairman. Amendments were proposed, which had to be voted down, but throughout it was shown that the vast majority were content to leave to the executive council the task of dressing, first, for amendments to the Criminal Code which would make it clear that picketing is legal, and secondly, to have provincial legislation in each province which would prevent the civil courts granting injunctions against picketing.

Chairman Simpson reviewed the present situation, pointing out that picketing came under Federal jurisdiction, and that injunctions, having to do with civil property, came under provincial jurisdiction. He pointed out that injunctions are still being granted, and have as effect, in the main, to make strikes ineffective. The Supreme Court of Canada had given decisions denying the right of peaceful picketing, though the Government maintained that such right existed. The Ontario Court of Appeals had taken a different view, said Mr. Simpson, declaring that government by injunction was abhorent to the laws of England and of Ontario.

Mr. Simpson quoted from the legal opinion of J. G. O'Donoghue, K.C., legal representative of the Congress, which opinion gives suggestions to the unions in the matter of picketing. It advises that there be not more than three pickets togeher, and that they move on when ordered by officers, but could move back again to the same spot, as long as they continued to keep moving when ordered. A further recommendation by Mr. O'Donoghue was that if the strikebreaker rejects advice he should be left alone; further, that violence should not be condoned.

The special committee recommended first that "the incoming executive of the Trades and Labor Congress continue to press for the necessary amendments to the Criminal Code, or pursue such other course as their legal adviser will recommend, to adequately protect trades unions and trade unionists in their right to picket in industrial disputes."

Discussing this clause, Delegate Polakoff, of the Garment Workers, of Toronto, pointed out that picketing is the life of a strike. Injunctions, he said, were evils which existed everywhere.

There was clearly no possibility of getting the amendments to the Criminal Code under present conditions, declared Tim Buck. Strikes have been smashed by injunctions, and had become as regular and fashionable in Canada as in the United States. In Montreal there had been a strike of Clothing Workers, and where picketing had been allowed the strikers had won, but in one case the employer had secured an injunction and the strikers could make no headway.

"According to the opinion of Mr. O'Donoghue we have a right to picket with three people, but you are in the unfortunate position that if there are six or seven together it means jail, and if two or three being beaten up by gangsters," said Delegate Buck. "We must fight against the injunction. We will get rid of injunctions when it becomes more costly for the employers, and the

THANKSGIVING SERVICE HELD AT ALL SAINTS'

Rev. P. R. Soanes, of Aurora, Special Preacher at Annual Festival.

INSPIRING SERMON.

Speaker Discusses Many Benefits Received By People of Canada.

Thankfulness to God for His many blessings was the theme of the sermon preached by the Rev. P. R. Soanes at the annual Harvest Festival service in All Saints' church last night. The speaker chose as his text the second verse of Psalm 103, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not his benefits", and read as the lesson, the promise of a good land to the Israelites, as found in the book of Deuteronomy, and the parable of the rich man who pulled down his barns to build greater, from the Gospel by St. Luke.

The speaker referred first to the benefit of residence in Canada, a land much like the description of Palestine, "A good land, a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths—a land wherein thou shalt eat bread without scarceness, thou shalt not lack anything in it; a land whose stones are iron and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass." He expressed doubt that the blessings of residence in Canada could be appreciated in full until the advantages over other lands had been learned by experience.

The blessings of belonging to the church and living a Christian life were next touched on, and the preacher urged a comparison of conditions in heathen lands as a means of arriving at a full appreciation of these benefits. There are many other benefits, he said, and sorrows and other afflictions usually prove to be blessings in disguise, planned in love and wisdom for man's good and God's glory.

Spiritual blessings, the gospel of Jesus Christ with its message of salvation, freely provided, and the hope of another life, better than this were also recalled by the preacher, who said that people in this world are only beginning to taste the good things provided for them hereafter.

A warning was given against the temptations and dangers that have to be guarded against. When Moses told the Children of Israel about the promised land he warned them against forgetting God and saying, "My power and the might of my hand hath gotten me this wealth.' In this wonderful age and country, said the speaker, this danger is creeping over the world. The Jews were warned that it meant national ruin and failure; other nations which have forgotten God have experienced it; and it means individual and family ruin as well if He is forgotten in Canada.

The world, said the speaker, is trying to put God out of His own universe, setting up its science and knowledge as obviating the need for a God. The rich fool forgot God in his thoughts about his own possessions and abilities. His mistake cost him his life. Men are trying to put God out of the Bible, studying His book as if it was the work of its human authors rather than of the God who inspired them. The speaker foretold the coming of a day of awakening when when would discover that they could not do without God, and that His power and wisdom had given them everything.

FRASER CHALLENGES MAYBEE TO RESIGN SEAT FOR MEIGHEN AT BIG LIBERAL COBOURG CELEBRATION

Says Fight Would Be Started With Issuance of Writs.

HAS FEW REGRETS.

Seeking Evidence of Slander To Use in Legal Action.

(Examiner Correspondence)

COBOURG, Sept. 24.—With a torchlight procession, Kilties band, girls throwing flowers and a great crowd of people lining the streets and swarming around the bandstand in the park, Northumberland Liberals last night celebrated the federal victory of ten days ago until driven by the heavy rain at nine o'clock to the town hall where W. A. Fraser, the party's candidate in the election, challenged Milton E. Maybee, M.P., Conservative victor at the polls, to resign his seat in favor of his defeated leader, the Right Honorable Arthur Meighen.

"If Mr. Maybee will offer his seat to Mr. Meighen we will have another battle in this constituency as soon as the writ is issued," Mr. Fraser declared. "On the eve of the election Mr. Meighen cancelled his engagement to speak in Montreal and rushed into Northumberland as his very last effort. At that, if it hadn't been for the irregular vote we's have won."

A Capacity Crowd.

The theatre in the town hall was crowded to the doors with women, and children too, who manifestly had come to praise Fraser, not to bury him. And as for Mr. Fraser's sentiment he asserted that he was in no mood to hold a post-mortem on the result in Northumberland.

"I believe I have made many friends in Cobourg," he said, "and this meeting affords me the opportunity of thanking everyone who helped me. I have made friends whom I want to remember and I want to have them remember me. I want to thank your Mayor, who treated me very courteously, and also to say that if there is anything in the next four years he wants me to take up in the interests of Cobourg I shall be glad to do whatever I can, if I can be of any assistance. (Applause).

Riding Missed Chance.

Mr. Fraser said he had no personal regrets upon his defeat. "From the standpoint of business and this country's influence in Parliament from the fact that Mackenzie King has a large enough following to carry on the government I do regret that Northumberland is not represented in the new administration at Ottawa. Premier King, Robert Forke, and members of the Cabinet are well known to me and I think they will listen to me and my requests whenever I may visit Ottawa.

I have another regret. One of your manufacturing concerns saw fit to give an interview in the Cobourg paper as to what they would have to do in the event of a Liberal victory, but in the same paper last week I saw a report that this same factory was expanding their plant and increasing their production, removing their factory (Edwards and Edwards tannery) from Omemee to this town.

Aided By Tariff.

It is beyond my comprehension why some fellow manufacturers follow the procedure they do in elections. This company imports its raw materail free of duty and they have a tariff of 30 per cent protecting their manufactured product, so why should they come out one way or the other. I don't think that was fair polifies, especially as handbills with that company's statement were distributed before the election to hurt me."

"I can't understand why any political party will indulge in the cowardly, malicious methods that were used againstme. That is another regret. At my meetings I invited any person to say in public the things that were being whispered against me. But they were si-

MILLION SPENT BY PROVINCE ON RURAL POWER

Expenditure as Bonus For Electricity For Farms Is Large.

HALF OF COST.

Popularity of Scheme Will Prevent Surplus For Province.

TORONTO, Sept. 24.— The Government of Ontario is disbursing a total of $1,000,000 during present fiscal year in order to make Hydro electric current available to the farmers of the Province. The expenditure is being made under the legislation for rural Hydro bonuses which the Ferguson Government extended to primary and secondary lines at the 1924 session of the Legislature. The advantage which the agriculturists of the Province have taken of the legislation in the past 12 months was stated yesterday by Premier Ferguson in a press interview.

The million dollar expenditure, when it is finally made by the close of the fiscal year at the end of the next month, will constitute a new record for rural Hydro bonus payments. It will represent slightly in excess of 200 miles of transmission line construction, and will have extended Hydro benefits to many areas of old Ontario, which had not previously been served. To the present time this year over $750,000 has left the Provincial Treasury for the work, and the rate of disbursement is such that the million dollar mark will surely be passed by the end of October next.

The rural Hydro bonus was inaugurated in its simplest form by the late Drury Government which agreed to pay one-half of the cost of primary line construction. The burden

SYNOPSIS

His father's warning—"Destroy women or they will destroy you!"—has made Juan the greatest lover of all time. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese. Loving her, he reforms, but incurs the enmity of infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves him, and Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana. The Borgias contrive to have Juan catch Donati in Adriana's room under circumstances that destroy his faith. Cynically he becomes the lover of Lucretia, while to save her father, Adriana marries hateful Donati. On the wedding night Juan tries to forget Adriana by dallying with another woman.

She shrank back into a corner of the wide, cushioned seat. Her eyes filled with tears. Wearily Juan rose and walked away. He had changed greatly since his last meeting with Adriana, on the night when he found Donati hidden in her rooms. He was thinner, paler, and his mouth had a bitter twist.

He walked slowly toward his bedroom, pausing near the door to give an order to Pedrillo. The servant picked up the lady's coat and took it to her. Juan turned, with a mirthless smile, as she rose to let Pedrillo slip the cloak around her shoulders.

Appealingly she held out her hand toward him. He shrugged his shoulders, went into his bedroom and closed the door behind him. Sobbing, she left the house.

Juan paced the room restlessly. The bitterness had left his face, but he looked like a man haunted. He beat the palm of one hand with the clenched fist of the other; turned to glare at the nearest window, through which came the tolling of the bells, and turned again, to sink into a chair and then rise to pace the room again.

There was a noise at the door. He whirled to face it as a woman entered the room, and smiled grimly as he recognized the Marchesa Rinaldi.

She ran across the intervening space to him. Her voice trembled when she spoke.

"My husband suspects!" she cried. "I hurried here to warn you."

The grim smile did not leave Juan's face.

"Indeed?" he murmured, apparently only amused at her news.

Desperately she went on.

"Help me, Juan!" she urged. "If he learns the truth it will end everything for me. Happiness—honor—my very life will be ruined. Help me!"

Juan was quite indifferent; rather bored, in fact. His own suffering was so great that that of anyone else could not touch him.

"You should have considered all this before," he told her, diffidently.

She cried out wildly, as if she had been given a mortal hurt. But before she could speak again there came the sound of clenched hands pounding on a door. Frantically she choked back her cries, turned to listen, turned back to Juan again.

"My husband!" she exclaimed.

Juan would have gone at once to open the door, but his progress was impeded because of her clinging to him. At last he released himself from her hands.

"Let us end this tiresome farce," he exclaimed, and she could not know that he meant not their deception of her husband, but his own life. The thought had come to him that possibly Rinaldi, finding her there, might try to kill him. What a relief if the effort was a success!

She sank to her knees, remained huddled there on the floor, as Juan went to the outer door, unbolted it and threw it open.

The Marchese Rinaldi faced him. Jealousy and suspicion were in his eyes, as they met Juan's, then travelled on to where his wife crouched. He cried out like some animal suddenly gone mad, and rushed toward her, and Juan, calmly, closed and bolted the door.

"Then it is true!" Rinaldi cried, agonized. "It is true! You have loved him—and love him now!"

Trembling, she crouched still lower, burying her face in her hands. He turned to Juan, who had slowly followed him. Drawing his sword, he lunged at Juan, who stepped aside at the last possible moment, caught Rinaldi's hand, and twisted it until the sword fell clattering to the floor. Death would be sweet, but not in such a cause, he told himself.

Rinaldi was beside himself with rage. "The world will be better without you," he cried to Juan. "You destroyer of men's lives—of their faith in the women they love!"

Juan faced him contemptuously. "You fool! I deserve your stupid thanks for lifting the scales from your eyes," he replied. "No man is quite sane, who has illusions about women."

Over Rinaldi's shoulder he smiled mockingly at the Marchesa. Her face was drawn, piteous; he fought against the inclination to help her, to be kind and merciful, when she so much needed help. Life had tormented him—let it torture others also!

She stumbled to her feet, moaning, and ran to her husband. She threw her arms around his neck, uttering little imploring cries, clinging to him, sobbing. Rinaldi looked down at her almost tenderly; would have taken her in his arms, had not Juan's cynical laughter forced him to recall what he had for a moment forgotten.

Muttering a curse, he tore her arms from his neck and hurled her from him.

Juan wondered at himself. He had not meant to laugh, yet it was as if some force which he could not control was governing him; the hatred of life that had had its way with him since he lost faith in Adriana never for an instant lost its power.

He felt as if he were taking part in some scene that had no reality. He stood calmly watching the Marchese, realizing her desperation all too well—it was akin to his own mood.

But he was not prepared for her next action. Drawing a short, jewelled dagger from the bodice of her gown, she drove it into her breast, straight toward the heart.

Juan stood, dazed. Rinaldi, with a cry that Juan felt would ring in his ears forever, ran to her, caught her falling body in his arms, and lowered it gently to the floor. Still holding her, he murmured endearments, kissed her hair, begged her to forgive him for his cruelty. And dying, she looked not at him, but at Juan.

Infuriated, Rinaldi laid her dead body on the stone floor and leaping to his feet, stood glaring at his wife's lover.

"You shall pay for this!" he cried, his voice thick with rage. His face was like that of a madman, twisted with fury. "You killed her, as surely as if your hand had struck the blow. You shall pay—"

Juan watched him coldly. Then with deliberatiln he sauntered to the door, unbolted it, and as he flung it wide, called to Pedrillo and the two men who sat drinking, awaiting Juan's return to the room.

Juan's voice was a lazy drawl; one would have said that he had no interest at all in what he was saying, had it not been for the way his eyes narrowed, and the tenseness of his body.

"A tragedy, gentlemen, in place of the usual comedy," he announced. "The husband, as it happens, has killed his wife!"

Rinaldi cried out in protest. Pedrillo and the two men ran to seize him; Juan stood watching coldly while he struggled, shouting accusations against Juan, declaring his own innocence.

GIFT FOR BRIDE.

Miss Lily Weston Receives Presentation From Girl Friends.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 24.—A very interesting event took place on Monday evening when about thirty girl friends gathered at the home of Miss Nellie Dunn, Front street, to make Miss Lily M. Weston a presentation in honor of her approaching marriage.

Miss Dunn's home was profusely decorated with asters and gladioli and in the centre of the room was a "Luck Pie" decorated with many streamers of ribbons. Miss Weston was asked to open the pie and upon doing so, found a handsome case of knives and forks which were addressed to her with the hearty good wishes of all her friends.

Miss Weston was completely taken by surprise but in a few well-chosen remarks, thanked all present for their handsome gift. The evening was spent socially, after which Miss Dunn served a very dainty lunch. The evening was brought to a close by all singing "For Auld Lang Syne," and "She's a jolly good fellow."

Miss Weston has been a valued member of the Baptist church and will be greatly missed from the midst of all as a prominent worker. Her marriage will take place next week to Mr. Robert Cumming of Haileybury and her many Campbellford friends join in wishing her much happiness.

Mr. Fraser offered to pay $1000 to any charitable institution if statement's reflecting on his integrity and character were repeated in public and proved to be true.

Fight Only Started.

"The fight in Northumberland has only started", he continued. "If the Tories think they can get rid of me by slander they are very badly mistaken. I am coming back again if you want me (voice fromthe hall "We do") to do my duty to Canada through the people and riding of Northumberland. I stand before you tonight as I stood during the campaign. My ideals are unchanged. I did my best to explain my position. Now that the smoke of battle has blown away my attitude has not been changed one iota and my aspirations to serve Canada and this county are just the same as when I appealed to you for your votes."

The anniversary services at Mount Olivet United church on Sunday were well attended. In the afternoon Rev. J. F. Everson spoke from Exodus 20 and 8. Mrs. Dawson, of Wooler, sang a solo. The local choir, assisted by Mrs. Dawson and Messrs. Lorne Darling and Clarence Massey of Morganston, sang "Father Take My Hand and Lead Me." In the evening Rev. James E. A quartette, "As the Voice of Many Water," was rendered by Mrs. Carence Massey, Mrs. William Campbell, Lorne Darling, and Clarence Massey.

A sumptuous supper was served on Monday evening to a fair sized crowd. This was followed by a concert of mouth organ and guitar selections given by Flossie Everson, of Norham, and readings, sacred and humorous given by Mrs. Lapp of Brighton.

The Percy township school fair held in Warkworth on Tuesday was well attended and the exhibits shown were more numerous than on previous years. The attendance seemed to say that the school fair was becoming popular. The interest taken was evident in the many entries in every class. There were eleven dairy calves, two beef calves, six lambs, six bacon hogs besides several dozen chickens, also six boys and two girls who rode horses. In the school exercises section 1 and 29 took first, while 1 and 25 took second prize.

Berlin uses more electric current every year. The total energy supplied by municipally-owned plants alone in the city increased 43 per cent between 1924 and 1925, not including increases in current sales by private enterprises.

Since the hectic days of the war the electrical industry has learned how to make a saving of 34 per cent in fuel consumption for each unit of current generated. This is a greater improvement than is recorded in most industries.

It causes a laggard intestine to function as nature intended.

That's the splendid thing about the action of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—it promotes natural, healthy and regular elimination.

Eat two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every day—in chronic cases, with every meal. If eaten regularly, it is guaranteed to bring permanent relief or the grocer returns the purchase price. . . . VOICE OF THE LOWLY AND OPPRESSED . . . ADVOCATE OF THE FRIENDLESS . . . RIGHTER OF PUBLIC AND PRIVATE WRONGS.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

A question that often suggests itself is whether we make as much use of some of our public services as we might do.

There is the Public Library, for example.

It is one of the most useful community services available to Peterboro citizens, and yet there is reason to believe that it is being utilized by only a fraction of the city's population, and then not as fully as might reasonably be expected.

The Library should not be looked upon merely as a convenient place to secure a popular novel.

The furnishing of fiction is only one and by no means the most important of its functions.

It could be and should be a most valuable educational factor.

Splendid works of reference are at the service of the public, many fine newspapers and magazines are available, some kept on file indeed for a number of years, and, in short, the Library is a store-house of information upon all kinds of subjects.

Yet its reference works and other similar departments are being neglected by the great mass of the citizens.

NO CONTESTS WANTED.

The Examiner is sure that the majority of Canadians, regardless of their political affiliations, are unanimous in support of the opinion that Canada should be represented at the Imperial Conference by her Prime Minister, and that the members of Mr. King's Cabinet should be returned without a contest.

It is most desirable that Canada's representative at the conference should be the head of the Government, and no obstacle should be put in the way of Mr. King's attendance.

At the same time the people are tired of election campaigns.

They want to see Parliament get down to business, and any attempt to block progress by compelling Ministers to fight by-elections would be resented in all parts of the country.

There has been a surfeit of politics; as a novelty the people of this country would welcome a sign that their interests and not those of the political parties were being considered.

The new Ministers should be returned to office as speedily as possible in order that national business may be undertaken.

The period of marking time has passed.

A HELPING HAND.

The British Welcome and Welfare League is making an appeal for donations to defray the expenses of its very splendid work on behalf of Canada's new settlers, and the Examiner is glad to bring the campaign to the attention of its readers, some of whom have doubtless come into contact with the league's activities.

The objects of the organization as officially expressed are to extend to all deserving newcomers from the British Isles a hearty welcome and, if need be, temporary accommodation, and to render such other help and advice as will enable them to become worthy citizens of Canada.

This is good business, not only for the new settlers themselves, but for this country.

It starts new Canadians off on the right road and goes a long way toward guaranteeing that they will become worth-while citizens.

Since 1907 the league has been in operation, and hundreds of Britishers have had reason to thank its officials for kindness and assistance on their arrival in this country.

Peterboro people who would like to contribute to this very excellent fund should send their subscriptions to Albert Chamberlain, President, corner Gerrard and Pembroke streets, Toronto.

RECKLESS AUTO-TRUCK DRIVING

There is altogether too much reckless and careless driving of motor delivery trucks in Ottawa. In numerous cases these trucks appear to be in the hands of irresponsible youths. At street intersections they are a positive menace, and the manner in which they "cut in" is hair raising.

Many drivers seem to hold to the impression that if a loaded truck of sorts has not the right of way legally, it is entitled to claim it on the general principle that collision means greater harm for the other fellow. They know that the driver of a nice-looking passenger automobile is not going to try conclusions with a battered up truck that has not seen paint since it left the factory or whose owner is not "good for damages"—and so they tear around, a law unto themselves. Something should be done about it.

In England all drivers of motor cars have not only to take out a permit to drive, but to carry that permit on their person always. Any police officer may demand to see that permit. Infractions of rules of the road are endorsed upon it, and when application is made for a renewal of the permit it may be refused because of these endorsements. People driving automobiles without a permit are subject to heavy penalties and the courts enforce these penalties.

In Ottawa anybody may drive, may be the guilty party in scores of accidents and yet continue to drive. The English system is better. Something of the sort is very badly needed here. The cost of the English driving permit is small; it has to be taken out by visitors as well as permanent residents.—Ottawa Journal.

Judging by-election reports, a training school for deputy returning officers would seem to be badly needed.

SAFETY FIRST WORK.

Mr. B. W. Arnold says accidents are expensive; that safety work pays; that prevention is better than cure, and that all of us pay for accidents. In the course of an article in the Electric Railway Journal of August 21, 1926, Mr. Arnold says no executive can question the fact that safe operation contributes as much to a good or bad showing on the balance sheet as could any branch of his business. He says further: "I have had brought to my mind forcibly a great many times during the past twenty years, the real meaning of safety and the tremendous cost of failure to apply it. In a great many companies the formerly much-talked-of claims agent has combined his duties as claims agent with those of safety director, and in his new line of work has been able to save much more money for his company and build for it better public relations than he ever did when his one thought was to secure the names of the injured, along with the proper witnesses, on the dotted line on the bottom of the release blank.

"Can there be any doubt that organized safety work will pay large dividends on any property? No one man can do effective safety work alone. The first necessity is to have the executive fully sold so that he in turn can secure the confidence and the sincere support of his superintendents, foremen and employees. Who can doubt the wonderful results accomplished in the short time that utility companies have been permitted to have representatives make safety talks in the public schools. They began to study accidents, asking not 'Whose fault was it?', but 'How could it have been prevented?', 'What safeguards are necessary to prevent a repetition?'.

"Ask any mother and father to put a dollars-and-cents value on their children. You couldn't buy them if you could offer billions. But human beings have an economic value—and their estimated economic value has been set at from $5,000 to $25,000. (That is the compensatory value of a human life as reckoned by economists and lawmakers.) $10,000 is generally reckoned to be compensation for death."

Mr. Arnold goes on to show further that with a reasonable amount of caution before the accident, on the part of the person killed or some other person or persons, the accident would not have happened. He asks: "What of the boy or girl who have their lives ahead, when an avoidable accident suddenly scoops their heritage from them?

"I believe to the railroad man the automobile has presented one of the most serious hazards. 'It is getting to be so that the only safe way to cross the street is with a cow.' The average automobile driver is very careful about taking any chances with 'bossy.' Grade crossing accidents will continue to occur, mark you, we say occur, and not happen, until the drivers of automobiles learn to respect the warnings provided by railway companies to the same degree that they now respect the cow."

Mr. Arnold says the executive whose viewpoint does not embrace safe operation of his property is destined to failure. "My thought is to make safety popular; second, to investigate carefully, thoroughly and intelligently every accident and set up proper safeguards to prevent its repetition; third, to be sincere in the work for safety. Only in this way can conditions be improved."

HOME AGAIN.

September sees the return of hundreds of tourist Canadians from Europe. Their impressions and memories of their travels have perhaps little of novelty. The same stimuli arouse pretty much the same reactions in all of us, and we can all sympathize with the stay-at-home who said to his traveled friend, "We're glad to see you back, but for goodness sake don't talk." It is one of the disadvantages of easy transportation that the thrills of travel abroad have become a commonplace.

It is a commonplace, too—because it is so true—to say that the tourist experiences his keenest emotion when he sees again the shores of his own country. The returning Canadian finds this to be true in a special way. Europe, in spite of its wealth of interest and beauty, presents always the tragic spectacle of an under-privileged majority—millions for whom life offers only the most precarious foothold, whose children and whose children's children can scarcely hope for better things. We have our slum districts in Canada—and we have no excuse for them—but there is nothing to compare with the sordid congestion that prevails in the cities of Europe. With us the poorest man has reasonable hope of bettering himself. It is in this respect that the home-coming Canadian sees his country with new eyes—its hopefulness, its spaciousness, its opportunities. It is, he realizes, a country where young people need set no limits to their ambition except the limits of their own competence and industry.

It is true that we have no long history such as stimulates the imagination in Europe. But the Canadian abroad is often depressed by the cruel and tragic character of these historical associations. He can reflect that if the history of his country is a brief one, it is also for the most part a happy and a noble one. Our pioneers fought a winning fight, not so much against their fellow men as against the bitter and stubborn forces of nature. Our people offered a refuge to the escaping slave. They worked out the problem of responsible government peacefully after the comparatively slight disturbance of 1837-38; and there are few more instructive episodes in our history than the struggle, along constitutional lines, following the famous report of Lord Durham. The Reformers not only achieved self-government for Canada, but set an example for all the overseas British nations. Canada was also the pioneer in establishing the Federal system. And if Europe has much to teach us, she too many learn something from us in the fact that we can live at peace with a neighboring nation, and that the relations between French-Canadians and those who have their descent from the British Islands are satisfactory. These things are grounds, not for complacency and boastfulness, but for pride in our past and hope for our future.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

With fighters getting half a million dollars for a few rounds, it is miraculous that peace societies should be making any progress.

So far as the Examiner knows, Miss Agnes MacPhail is not even on the waiting list for Cabinet honours.

Now that the Federal election is over, will some one please proceed to organize a society for the prevention of useless speeches.

Sizing him up from his photographs, W. D. Euler seems to have plenty of determination and strength of purpose. And he'll need both in re-organizing the Customs Department.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Sept 24.—Trade was dull, with prospects that at the close there would be quite a few heavy rough cattle left over. Good butcher and stockers and feeders cleaned up at steady prices.

Export buyers picked up a few of the best of a poor offering of heavy steers and heifers at from $7 to $7.30. There are two boats scheduled for next week's sailing. It is expected that about 800 to 900 cattle will be required.

Handyweight butcher steers were going from $6.50 to $7.25. Nothing of special quality offering. Choicest butcher steers, if available, are quoted steady to firm at $7.25 to $7.50. Common and medium plain butcher, clearing from $4.50 to $5.50.

Fat butcher cows holding firm and in good demand at from $5 to $5.50 for the best.

Bulls, heavy export or good butcher, steady from $4.50 to $5.25.

Calves steady, $12 to $13 tops.

Lamb market was very dull, and buyers bidding $11 to $11.75, tops, about $1 to $1.75 lower than the week's opening prices.

Hogs closed steady, $12 f.o.b., but buyers bidding $11.75, Saturday's loadings.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—With foreign bids for Canadian grain still several cents below exporters' views, the export trade here yesterday was again extremely dull. The local market for cash oats was stronger in sympathy with the rise in the Winnipeg market and dealers generally at the close of the day marked prices up 1 cent per bushel.

Owing to the strength that developed in the Canadian cash wheat situation yesterday, a stronger tone developed in the local spring wheat flour market and prices were advanced 10 cents per barrel, which makes a net rise for the week so far of 20 cents per barrel. The export trade was quiet, but the local movement was fair.

The undertone to the winter wheat flour situation was firmer under a good demand, but prices showed no change.

Prices for all grades of millfeed were well maintained with a good trade passing. A stronger feeling prevailed in the market for standard grades of rolled oats and prices were marked up 25 cents per bag. This was attributed to the steady upward tendency of values for the raw material.

A fair volume of business was transacted in all grades of fresh and storage eggs and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 1,023 cases.

An easier feeling developed in the market for potatoes owing to the more liberal supplies coming forward, and prices were declined 5 to 10 cents per bag. Sales of car lots of New Brunswick Cobblers were made at $1.30 per bag, and Quebec White stock at $1.20 per bag of 90 pounds, ex-track.

The feature of the butter trade was the continued easy feeling that prevailed, and prices were reduced another 1-2c per pound. But even at the lower level the demand from all sources was limited and the volume of business small. The receipts were 2,670 packages.

Owing to the disappointing demand from foreign buyers, the tone of the market was again easier and values declined another 1-8c to 1-4c per pound. The receipts were 623 boxes.

The trade in beans continued quiet, but as the offerings were not large, prices ruled steady with car lots of choice white hand-picked quoted at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

FUMBLING FOR THE KEYHOLE
By Dr. Frank Crane.

Shortly before his death Colonel Coolidge, the President's father, said this about his son:

"When Cal was in school I thought he would make a good doctor. But his main thought in youth was to get a good education.

"Whatever he had to do, he attended to it and did it the best he knew how, whether he liked it or not, and I think that is what he has always done."

I once asked a man who had made a remarkable success in his line of work how he had found what he was best fitted for.

"How," I asked, "can a young person starting out in life discover what work he is most likely to succeed in doing? How can he find what he is best qualified for?"

"There is only one way," he answered. "It is a process of fumbling for the keyhole in the dark!"

If you are one of the thousands of young people who are earnest, ambitious, and yet can't seem to get your feet on the ground, can't seem to find the work you want to devote your life to—remember that most of the men who have achieved have had their moments of similar despair.

Most of them have had their fumbling years.

Most of them have followed a zig-zag trail to the work they became known for doing.

Give your career earnest thought, check up on your development and progress occasionally; but if you can't find a place immediately that is wholly congenial to your tastes and suited to your abilities, don't despair.

It is the way you spend the fumbling years that will shape the future.

The two most important elements in guiding this imaginary hand that fumbles for the keyhole are stated in the father's description of Calvin Coolidge.

If you devote yourself to obtaining the best mental equipment possible and then attend to whatever you have to do the best you know how, you will be following the path followed by most men who finally attained a high place and found the work they were pre-eminently fitted for.

If you fit yourself for something big, something big will find you.

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

MAKING FUN OF ENGLAND'S ENGLISH.

"A character in a recent English novel repeatedly declares that he 'can't stick' certain things," says the Kansas City Star, in an article on the bond of language between America and Britain. "What the poor thing means is he can't stand. They fade him. You'd think he'd say so, instead of saying he can't stick them, which is nutty.

"Another character says, 'Let's have no niggling.' All right, let's not. That is, if he means let there be no ragging. But if he means that why doesn't he say so, or say jawing, or rawhiding? But to niggle, one just doesn't. Not in this country, where language has a meaning.

"There's 'grouse,' too. The British novelists are dippy about that word—if word it is. What they seem to mean is 'grouch.' Any American can understand how a man might be a grouch, or be grouchy or even grouch about something that didn't please him. But how can a man 'grouse?' As purists, Americans will tell the world he can't."

SIX KILLED IN EXPRESS WRECK

PARIS, Sept. 24. Canadian Press—Six persons were killed to-day when the Lyons express was in collision just outside the Hericy Station of the Paris-Monteres line. Eighteen persons were injured.

One of those killed was believed to be Eugene Montgomery, aged 21, an Englishman, while one of the unidentified bodies was believed to be that of his brother.

FREIGHT RATES ON ATLANTIC ARE RAISED FIFTEEN PER CENT. BRITISH COAL STRIKE BLAMED

Ships Have To Coal On This Side For the Round Trip.

TAKES CARGO SPACE.

All Companies But Canadian Government Line Included in Increase.

MONTREAL, Sept. 24.—(Canadian Press.) — Effective immediately, a general advance of 15 per cent, has been made in freight rates from Canadian ports to the United Kingdom by the steamship lines represented in the Canadian Trans-Atlantic Conference, announcement of this having been issued yesterday by A. O. Minshall, conference secretary, on behalf of the companies concerned.

Reasons given for this rise in rates is attributed to the increasing cost of coal and to the necessity for ships having to take coal aboard in this country for the round trip, thus reducing the amount of their available cargo-carrying space.

The commodities that will be affected by this surcharge are only those included in the list dealt with under the jurisdiction of the conference. Cattle, flour and garins are not affected by the new rates, as these do not come under purview of the lines as a whole.

No change has been made in the freight rates to the continent, the assumption being that ships can coal at any of the ports at which they discharge cargo outside the United Kingdom.

It is learned that the North Atlantic-United Kingdom freight conference has had a smilar increase of rates under consideration, and that they will be brought into effect coincidently with the changes made by the Canadian Trans-Atlantic Conference. Thus all shippers on the North American Continent will be affected by the change, provided that their goods are carried to the United Kingdom by vessels owned by companies sitting in with the North Atlantic-United Kingdom Freight Conference and the Canadian Trans-Atlantic Conference.

The Canadian Government Merchant Marine is not a member of the Canadian Trans-Atlantic Conference. It is not known if the company will follow the lead of the conference shipping lines.

Since the beginning of the coal strike in Great Britain, and the enforcement of an embargo on coal exportation from the United Kingdom by the British Government, coal-burning vessels coming to this continent from British ports have had to take on sufficient fuel on this side for the return voyage. Cargo space has had to be utilized for the accommodation of the extra amount of coal, and this has affected the cargo-carrying capacity of the coal-burners.

Canton Lifts Boycott Against British Goods

HONG KONG, Sept. 24.—The Cantonese government Foreign Minister announces the end of the British boycott, which has been in progress for some time. The announcement says: "To what extent this step will lead to a restoration of trade relations between China and Japan, must depend upon British policy."

REJECTS PLEA OF EPISCOPATE

Deputies Deaf To Appeal For Modification of Religious Regulations.

NO ACTION TAKEN.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 24 (United Press).—Efforts of the Mexican episcopate to obtain legislative relief from the new religious law have failed.

A committee of the Chamber of Deputies considered the petition for legislative relief, presented by Archbishop Mora del Rio and Bishop Pascual Diaz, and decided that no action could be taken. The prelates, according to the committee, were not proper persons to present such a petition, because they lost their Mexican citizenship by virtue of public declarations that they could not obey the constitution in its present form.

But even if the petition were considered on its merits alone, the committee said yesterday it could not be acted upon, since it was an infringement on the fundamental principles of reform.

To Continue Debate.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—Although the Catholic Episcopate's petition for modification of the religious regulations was officially announced as rejected by the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, plans have been made for continuation on the question. There is small prospect, however, of the result being altered.

The petitions committee of the Chamber ruled that it was impossible to consider the Episcopate's petition because it was signed by the members of the clergy not having citizenship status. It is considered that the Episcopate may present a new petition signed by citizens, to overcome this objection.

COMMERCE ROOMS ARE RE-DECORATED

Council Room and Offices Have Been Altered and Painted.

Recent alterations and renovations have had the effect of considerably brightening up the premises of the Chamber of Commerce.

The walls have been newly-papered and the partitions placed in altered locations, allowing a greater access of light to the offices. The floors have been recovered with linoleum; the Council Room has been finished in gold and oak woodwork, and the offices of the secretary and stenographer finished in mahogany. W. H. Bradburn, the owner of the building, has also carried out alterations which add to the brightness of the stairway and hall outside the Chamber of Commerce offices.

Organizations which support the Chamber of Commerce and make use of the premises are the Peterborough Automobile Club, the Canadian Manufacturers Association, Peterborough Horticultural Society, and the Retail Merchants' Association. Occasionally, the council room is rented at evening to the Bell Telephone Company, Peterborough Exhibition Board, and the Engineering Institue. The issuing of automobile licenses is handled exclusively by the staff of the Chamber of Commerce.

RECEIVES HONORS.

William Shannon, of Marmora Winner in Juvenile Racing Meet.

MARMORA, Sept. 24.—A young sprinting champion has been discovered in Marmora. The youth is William, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan. Shannon. At the Ontario Athletic Commission's meet at Kingston last Saturday, Will was successful in winning the 220 yards and 100 yards events for juveniles. He received silver medals for each success and qualifies for the meet in Toronto on October 1st. There were twenty-four entries for the races which were won by him. He is the only local boy to respond to an appeal made at the Continuation School some months ago by Mr. Will Hughes of Queen's University for boys to undergo athletic training. His future as an athlete will be watched with interest.

BURNBRAE NEWS.

BURNBRAE, Sept. 24.—The auction sale of the farm stock and implements of the estate of the late J. P. Haig, 3rd Concession of Seymour, held on Tuesday afternoon, was quite successful, good average prices being realized for most of the articles offered. Mr. J. A. Battisby of Campbellford was auctioneer, and with a large crowd of bidders on hand, the sale was quickly handled. Good horses seemed to be in demand, a general purpose team bringing $310, while a Percheron gelding about 1,300 lbs. weight realized $130. A brood sow sold for $52, showing that some one has confidence in the hog industry. Dairy cows of common type sold around $40 each, while a few good Holstein grades brought from $50 to $66 each.

Anniversary services at Wellman's Corners United Church on Sunday, September 19, attracted several from this district. The preacher for the occasion was Rev. Mr. Neal of Wooler, The choir rendered special music at both services.

Although electric household refrigerators are unknown in some European countries they are getting a start in Germany, Switzerland and some of the countries along the Mediterranean.

LAWN SOCIAL.

Churches of Bailieboro Circuit Held Social Gathering Last Tuesday.

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 24. — A most enjoyable and successful event took place at the parsonage grounds at Fraserville on Tuesday evening, in the form of a lawn social and harvest home, the three churches of the Fraserville circuit, Bailieboro, Bensfort and Fraserville all taking part. Rev. H. W. Foley kindly invited the members of the three churches to hold their harvest home social at the parsonage grounds and the spacious lawns were perfectly arranged by the Pastor and his family for the occasion.

Three large tables were arranged each ladened with abundance of good food and the ladies of each church had charge of a separate table. Mrs. Robert Falls and Mrs. P. Barnard were in charge of the Bailieboro table; Mrs. Robert Waterman and Mrs. A. Wood were in charge of the Fraserville table while Mrs. W. Dawson and Mrs. E. Dawson were conveners at the Bensfort table, and the waiters and waitresses were kept quite busy from six o'clock until nine attempting to satisfy the appetites of the large crowd who gathered to partake of the sumptuous supper.

During the earlier part of the evening a soft ball game took place between the "hustlers," and the "never sweats," names adopted during the evening by the two sides. The game started off by a close score, and at the end of the third inning, the game stood 2-2. But at the beginning of the fourth inning the "never sweats" began to play ball in earnest, and at the end of the ninth inning, and at the end of 21 to 7 in favour of the "never sweats."

The line up was as follows:

Never Sweats—L. Dawson, p; H. Dean, c; F. Foley, 1st b.; F. Barnard, 2b; G. Harker 3rd b.; W. Waterman, ss.; J. Willan, rf.

Hustlers—K. Barnard, p.; C. Barnard, c.; A. Dawson, 1st b.; A. Deyell, 2nd b.; J. Barnard 3rd b.; C. Wood ss.; M. Wood, lf.; D. Bothwell, r.f.

E. Hutchison, umpire.

After the supper was served, the benches were cleared and a temporary platform built in the front lawn and a most enjoyable programme was given, consisting of solos by Rev. Jotten of Cavan, an address by Rev. A. H. McConnachie, Readings by Misses Ethel Falls, Isobel Dawson, Ruby Cunningham and Frank Foley. Instrumental by Miss Margaret Falls. Songs by the Fraserville boys glee club. Rev. H. W. Foley acted as chairman and gave an excellent address.

About seventy six dollars was taken at the ticket stand, the proceeds will go towards repairing the parsonage.

In order to deliver water from a distant reservoir to a new power plant, a pipe line 14 feet in diameter and three and a half miles long was constructed of wood staves, milled on the ground and bound together into pipe form with steel cable. The pipe thus constructed rests on steel cradles built on the ground surface along the route.

SMUT CAUSES HEAVY LOSSES

Degrading of Ontario Wheat Makes Treatment Necessary.

O. A. C. STATEMENT.

Fully 700,000.00 has been lost to Ontario farmers owing to the presence of smut in last season's No. 2 winter wheat. This estimate has been arrived at after an inspection of the samples of grain collected from all parts of the Province for use in setting the Standards for Commercial Grades of Grain for the last season, when it was shown that a large percentage of the grain would grade below the Standard Grades.

Records of official inspections in the Eastern Division indicated that over thirty per cent. of the grain had been excluded from the Standard Grades, while it was expected the percentage of the total crop would be larger. The estimate was that the presence of smut would mean a decreased return to the farmer of the Province of from five cents to fifteen cents a bushel below the normal price of No. 2 winter wheat, or a total loss as stated above.

An Avoidable Loss.

Deterioration in the quality of Ontario wheat from smut became so pronounced last year that the Grain Standards Board for the Toronto District of the Eastern Inspection Division directed the attention of the Hon. J. S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture to the great importance of farmers treating their seed grain for smut if they are to produce crops to yield the largest monetary returns. Such treatment will easily remove the heavy annual loss, and to indicate what line of procedure must be followed the Ontario Agricultural College, which has done some experimenting along this line, recently issued a statement.

Two Kinds of Smut.

"There are two kinds of wheat smut in Ontario, namely, Stinking Smut or Bunt and Loose Smut of Wheat. The stinking smut or bunt was very prevalent last year and I expect to hear that it is prevalent again this year, judging by the amount that has developed in our check plots in our experimental work.

"Experiments conducted in the United States during the past few years and this year in Ontario, demonstrated that copper carbonate dust is the most satisfactory seed disinfectant for the prevention of stinking smut or bunt of wheat.

"Directions for the copper carbonate dust treatment: The dust should be applied at the rate of 2 oz. per bushel of wheat. Place the grain to be treated in a barrel or churn about a bushel at a time. Add the required amount of copper carbonate dust and then revolve the barrel or churn until the dust is thoroughly mixed with the grain. After this treatment the grain may be bagged and sown at once. This method of applying the dust involves much time and labor if large quantities of grain are treated. Machines are now on the market, however, for applying dust rapidly to large quantities of seed.

Another Method.

"Stinking smut or bunt can also be prevented by sprinkling with a diluted formalin solution. The directions for sprinkling with a formalin solution are as follows:—

"Mix one pint of formalin with forty gallons of water. Place the grain to be treated in a heap on a clean floor Sprinkle the formalin solution over the grain, then shovel the grain into another pile so as to mix it thoroughly; then sprinkle and shovel again. Repeat this operation until every grain is moistened by the solution. Just enough of the solution should be applied to thoroughly wet every grain, but not enough to make the grain wet and soppy. In treating small quantities, use proportional amounts of the formalin solution. After the grain has been thoroughly sprinkled, cover the pile with bags or sacking that have been sprinkled with or soaked in a formalin solution and leave for three or four hours. At the end of this time spread the grain out thinly to dry. Shovel it over three or four times to hasten the drying. Forty gallons of the formalin solution is sufficient to sprinkle between fifty and sixty bushels of grain.

Avoid Wet Soppy Grain.

"The objection to treating with formalin solution is that there is great danger of injuring the vitality of the seed. It is not wise to use formalin solution stronger than 1 pint to 40 gallons, and care must be taken not to apply too much of it to the grain. To secure satisfactory results, just enough of the formalin solution should be applied to moisten every grain, but not enough to make it wet and soppy.

"Loose smut of wheat cannot be prevented by treating the seed with bluestone or copper carbonate dust. The easiest way of avoiding loss from this smut is to secure seed from a field or district where loose smut is not present. Such seed would produce a crop free from this smut. If loose smut is bad and it is impossible to secure seed free from infection, it may be necessary to establish a seed plot and treat the seed with Jensen's Modified Hot Water Treatment."

REPORT ON COAL NOT PROMISING

Government's Expedition Finds James Bay Field Worth Little.

LAND SET ASIDE.

TORONTO, Sept. 23.—Optimism for Northern Ontario as holding the solution of the province's fuel problem is not furthered by the return to the Parliament Buildings of the Government geogolical party, which was sent out during the past Summer under Professor Montgomery of Toronto University. In a lengthy report upon the geological features of the country on the James Bay slope, where rumors of coal deposits have so far centred, the party gives a largely negative verdict upon the value of the field.

The question was of current interest at the Parliament Buildings in view of the recent support given to the field by Professor W. T. Russell of London, Ontario, who has consistently declared that valuable coal deposits existed in the north country and who, a day or so ago, stated that recognition of this fact had at last been won from the Ontario Government. Officials of the Department of Mines stated, however, that the Government has so far taken no stand upon the value of any showings of coal which may have been from time to time located.

It was said that the Government's only action had been to set aside a tract of land between Missanabi and Abitibi Rivers for the development of Government policy in the event of the coal finds proving of value. The negative quality of Professor Montgomery's report, however, was mentioned as the latest information which the Government has upon the field. It has been placed in the hands of the Government and has not been published.

NEWS OF WARSAW.

WARSAW, Sept. 24.— Farmers, generally are thankful things are as as well as the are. The season has been a very hard one. Work has been doubled. For all the Spring opened early the weather remained cold and wet, and it was late before the crops could be gotten in. Often a field would be prepared for seed and a down pour of rain would necessitate delay, and re-working.

The weeds seemed to thoroughly enjoy adding to the work, for they persisted in growing most luxuriantly, they had such a splendid chance. Sow Thistle roots rarely were given enough hot sunt to dr yout.

Many low places were left idle. When it came to harvesting there was difficulty again on account of rains. Every minute of dry time had to be utilized. Many a field of grain was ready to come in, and the farmers were pushing as hard as they could and perhaps they might manage to get one small load in and the rest would get a good soaking. One man in trying to dry his grain, cut al his bands and opnd the sheaves. Even so he did not get it in at once.

The heavy winds with the rains, laid much grain and corn down, most of the corn up; some grain did but a good deal of grain had to be cut with the binder running one way, and some needed the mower.

There was a good deal of rust, caust by the dampness, and then the heavy rains washed much of it off but the stem was weakened.

While there are some splendid crops of all kinds, there are also some very poor ones. The early sowing seems generally to have been best.

Where Fall wheat lived, it was good. Potatoes promise to a good crop, their tops are generally still quite green. Root crops promise well too. Corn on high or sandy sand is good.

Summer Apples, were pretty good Winter ones are not. Plums are a good crop.

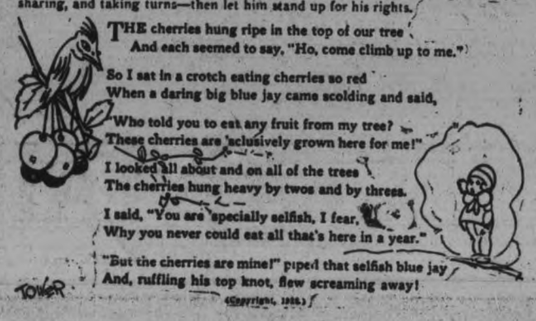
Tomatoes will be good as there are plenty of them, if they only get a chance to ripen.

Threshing was late starting. Usually there is silo filling by this time, but there is none so far. The men will not get at it until they have to, for the corn needs warmth and heat to grow. There is still a lot of which to be sown but it seems a safe risk this season.

The Selfish Blue Jay

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

WE all want our children to be lovable and unselfish. An unselfish, considerate child is welcome anywhere. But occasionally your child will have play contact with another who is so ungovernably selfish that it would be unwise and unfair for you to insist that your child give in to everything. Most children have a deep sense of fairness and if you force your child to give up more than his fair share he has a perfect right to resent it. What's more, it doesn't help the selfish child a bit to continue to have his own way. Teach your child fair play, equal sharing, and taking turns—then let him stand up for his rights.



THE cherries hung ripe in the top of our tree
And each seemed to say, "Ho, come climb up to me."

So I sat in a crotch eating cherries so red
When a daring big blue jay came scolding and said,

"Who told you to eat any fruit from my tree?
These cherries are 'xclusively grown here for me!"

I looked all about and on all of the trees
The cherries hung heavy by twos and by threes.

I said, "You are 'specially selfish, I fear,
Why you never could eat all that's here in a year."

"But the cherries are mine!" piped that selfish blue jay
And, ruffling his top knot, flew screaming away!

Fear and not poisoning by carbon dioxide causes the death of miners and others trapped in airtight compartments, in the opinion of Harry Houdini, above, noted stage magician and opponent of spiritualism, who recently had himself sunk in a sealed coffin in a swimming pool for an hour and a half to prove his contention made in reference to the recent mine disasters. Dr. W. J. McConnell, physiologist of the United States Department of Mines, who attended the test, declared that Houdini's theory might cause important changes in safety methods in mines.

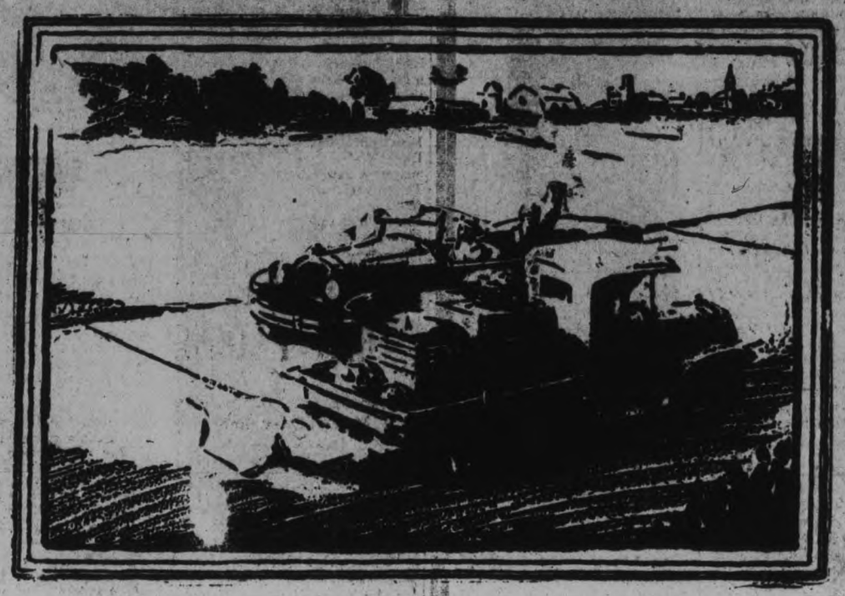
THE SPIRIT OF NEIGHBORLINESS



Another Little Message

About that cup of Sugar

RECENTLY we suggested that the essentials of the true spirit of neighborliness were exemplified in the borrowing of a cup of sugar.

Over the back-yard fence is a short cut indeed, to neighborliness. Miles so often are the fences that divide the comman ground of mutual understanding and good will. The less the distance, the lower the fence.

▫ ▫ ▪ ▪

That's one reason why we've always worked so earnestly and faithfully for better roads. The road that brings you nearer to us is the same broad highway that brings us nearer to you. Literally and figuratively it increases efficiency in the delivery of the goods. Another essential to the true spirit of neighborliness.

You'll find the same spirit at this end of the road—in our stores and places of business. Courtesy, desire to please, eagerness to rectify error, sincerity in quality, fairness in price—these are the elements of neighborly dealing which we are constantly striving to improve.

Just call across the fence. We're neighbors you know.

CANADA'S WHEAT SOLD BY POOL IN MANY PLACES

Largest Farmers' Co-operative in World Has Been Developed.

RUNNING SIX YEARS.

Operates Under Federal Charter Conferring Wide Powers.

OTTAWA, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—The farmers of Western Canada in less than three years, have established the largest co-operative organization of its kind in the world. The Canadian Wheat Pool with its three units in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, now has a total membership of 125,000 farmers, who control 13,230,000 of the 21,000,000 acres sown to wheat last year in the three Prairie Provinces. It is handling the sale of the greater part of the wheat production of Canada, and Canada already exports more wheat than any country in the world.

The first of the three wheat pools commenced business in the Province of Alberta in October, 1923, and at the close of the first pool year on July 15, 1924, had handled 34,500,000 bushels of wheat shipped by its members. The price realized by the pool was $1.01 2-3 per bushel, basis No. 1 Northern in store Fort William. A comparison of this price with the outside market values shows that the pool was instrumental in securing to its members at least two million dollars more than would have been the case had the pool not been in operation.

Meanwhile Manitoba and Saskatchewan were organizing pools. In the Fall of 1924, they had perfected provincial organizations and the three provinces then merged their selling strength into one giant marketing organization, known as "The Canadian Co-operative Wheat Producers, Limited," with headquarters in Winnipeg. This agency is incorporated under a Federal Charter, with very wide powers. Its function is to take delivery of the wheat from each of the respective provincial pools and to place it on the markets of the world in such a manner as to secure a price commensurate with the natural law of supply and demand. Each of the three provincial pools is responsible for gathering the wheat of its own members and placing it at the disposal of the central selling agency, which is controlled by a board of nine directors composed of the president, vice president and one director of each provincial pool.

Agents in 51 Ports

The largest proportion of the wheat is sold by the selling agency to importers and buyers in different countries of the world, for the agency has direct selling connections with every wheat importing country and its own representatives in 51 ports of the world. The funds which accrue from the sales are disbursed to the members of the three pools. This method of handling wheat provides a large volume through one agency and reduces the cost of operation to a minimum. In 1923, the Alberta pool's operating costs amounted to approximately 2-5 of 1c per bushel. In 1924, the cost to the Alberta members was slightly higher, but that the results were satisfactory in the main is evidenced by the fact that over 3,000 new members have joined the Alberta pool since the final payment for the 1924-1925 pool went out.

It is difficult, if not impossible, to estimate in dollars and cents the actual increase in the price of wheat attributable to the operations of the wheat pool, but the pool, controlling as it does over 50 per cent of Canada's exportable surplus, has the opportunity of preventing large volumes of wheat being rushed on to the market and creating a glut which inevitably forces prices down. The strength of the pool lies in its stabilizing power and in its facilities for selling in great quantities and in all countries.

Organization Is Simple.

In the matter of organization, the pool is simplicity itself. Each province is divided into seven main districts, and each of these districts is in turn sub-divided into ten sub-districts, making seventy sub-divisions all told. Once each year the Head Office sends to each member a post card ballot and a list of the members in his respective sub-district. The member has the privilege of voting for some member in his sub-district as his choice of representative at the annual meeting. The seventy delegates so elected are called together in convention to discuss the lay down policies. The delegates also meet in seven groups of ten each and elect a director, and the seven directors so elected constitute the Provincial Board. The by-laws of the Association provide for a recall of the district delegate or the directors by presenttaion of a petition signed by 15 per cent. of the members in any district or sub-district. It will therefore be seen that the responsibilities for the government of the pool are in the hands of the members themselves, which is held to be one of the strongest points of the whole organization.

This vast co-operative organization of farmers, grew out of the experience of fixed prices for wheat established by the Canadian Government during the war, regulated by an official body known as the Wheat Board. Immediately after the war the farmers of Western Canada urged the Government to maintain the Wheat Board, but as it had been brought into being and had functioned under a War Measure Act, the machinery for its maintenance automatically passed out of existence with the signing of the Peace Treaty. The wheat producers of the Canadian West, learning that the Wheat Board could not continue, began to realize the necessity of an organization of their own to handle the marketing of their wheat in a way that would prevent a too wide fluctuation and secure a better stabilization of prices.

Handled at Cost.

Through the Pool the wheat is handled at cost, and therefore at a saving to the farmer. The Central Selling Agency with its direct connections is able to eliminate some of the handling charges between producer and consumer that are incidental under any other method of marketing. Moreover the Pool relieves the farmer of the necessity of guessing the right time to sell his grain and assures him of the average price for the year on all wheat it sells. This orderly marketing avoids the disastrous effects of the flooding of the market in the fall which prevailed under the old system.

Payment for wheat is made by the Pool to its members at an initial price at the time of delivery, and a final price at the close of the crop year, which is August 1st, or as soon after as possible. But if it is practicable and desirable the directors may make interim payments. Where the Pool does not own its own elevators arrangements have been made with elevator companies to take pool grain. Recently the Saskatchewan Pool bought the elevators of the Saskatchewan Elevator Company, another farmers' co-operative organization. It was a big business venture involving the transfer of 451 country elevators, 97 annexes, headquarters office building, two terminal elevators at Port Arthur, one at Buffalo, N.Y., lease of the Canadian National Railways terminal elevator at Port Arthur, and about thirty elevator agents' houses.

In Manitoba the Pool is building 100 new elevators this year, and in Alberta elevators are being bought and built by the Pool.

The Pool is able to acquire these properties, borrow money from the banks, and extend its plans over the future because the members join under long term contracts, aver aging five years. The membership fee is only $3, one dollar of which is for a capital share and $2 for organization expenses

The Wheat Pool in Western Canada is a notable example of the advancement made by the farmers of this stage. Already it has shown the possibilities and advantages of co-operative marketing. The farmer in the Canadian West, who is a member of the Wheat Pool, has realized that under the old system he sold his grain to middlemen, who bought it for the express purpose of making a profit in the reselling of it. Under the old system, too, the farmer sold his wheat and took what the market offered. In the pool system he delivers his grain when convenient and obtains the average price of the selling period, together with the saving in the handling costs. The Pool price to every member is the price at Fort William, less handling charges and freight charges. The latter, of course, vary, according to the length of the haul.

With the development of Canada's agricultural areas, only one-fifth of which are as yet under cultivation, the growth of the Canadian Wheat Pool may reach a magnitude never before conceived in co-operative marketing.

OBITUARY.

JAMES MAHONEY.

DOURO, Sept. 24.—The funeral of the late James Mahoney took place on Tuesday morning from his late residence in the second concession to St. Joseph's church and cemetery. The mass of requiem was sung by Rev. M. J. McGuire, the pastor, and Rev. Father McCarney performed the services at the grave. A large number of neighbors and relatives were present to pay their last respects to one of the township's splendid pioneers.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Michael J. McManus, William J. McManus, William Quinlan, John McMurray and Patrick O'Brien of Douro, and Mr. P. Twomey of Ennismore. Four children of the deceased, Mrs. James Foley, of Indian River, Phillip of Toronto and Jeremiah and Miss Florence at home were present, but a fifth member of the family, Frank of Chino, California was prevented by distance from being present.

CHARLES LEWIS OWENS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 4.—The funeral of the late Charles Lewis Owen took place on Thursday afternoon from his late residence on Frank street at three o'clock.

Rev. James Grier, pastor of St. Andrew's church, spoke a few words and Rev. W. Elliott, pastor of St. John's read the Scripture lesson from 1st Corinthians, 15th chapter, which in its message, is wonderful hope for mankind.

Rev. Mr. Thomson, of Hastings, then led in prayer.

Mr. Grier spoke of his last visit with Mr. Owen at Allandale and reading the 103rd Psalm to him. He said, "A man who could ask so readily for that 103rd Psalm, which we always call the Communion Psalm for it is a paean of praise, is in himself prepared. In this psalm we find a God of kindness always pardoning and redeeming, and we have the wonderful promises He made to all those that keep His covenant, and hearken unto the voice of His word. Mr. Grier spoke as a worker in St. Andrew's church, always ready to his share of the work, and as a faithful elder of the church for the past 39 years, Mr. Owen's death would create a void it would be difficult to fill.

Rev. Mr. Thomson, of Hastings, an old friend of Mr. Owen's, said it was a great privilege for him to be able to speak and do honor to a man of such great personality and strength of character. He said in all the years of their friendship, he had found him a man of strong character, and had often heard Mr. Owen say that in his parliamentary career, he had often renounced things to be safe and sure and feel satisfied that he had done what was right.

The pallbearers were Messrs. F. W. Wood, W. J. Armstrong, Milton Maybee, M.P., Charles Davidson, J. A. Stewart, Neil Thompson, G. A. Kingston and James Allen.

The floral tributes were beautiful and numerous.

His brother, Mr. John Owen, of Jefferson, Wis., who visited here for some time last summer, was present for the funeral.

Nine nations were represented in the Women's International Games held recently at Gothenburg.

WEDDING BELLS.

KNIGHT—RICHARDSON.

HASTINGS, Sept. 24.—A pretty autumn wedding took place in the Hastings United church on Wednesday morning when Joyce Marie Richardson, youngest daughter of Mrs. Louise Richardson, was united in marriage to James Arthur Knight, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Knight.

The church looked beautiful decorated in autumn leaves, berries and flowers of many shades. The front pews were marked in huge bows of white ribbon for the guests, and as the seats were being filled, Miss Ona Doxsee played selections on the pipe organ, accompanied by Mr. Alex Shoud on the violin.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. Everett Richardson to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, and looked lovely gowned in a dress of white georgette with sequin and irridescent bead trimming and wore a white veil with a wreath of orange blossoms around the crown of her head, and white hose and kid shoes ,and carried roses and gladioli.

Miss Muriel Cruikshank was the bridesmaid and was dressed in rose georgette with silver trimmings, large black and silver picture hat and wore white shoes and hose and carried roses and gladioli.

Little Helen Collins, niece of the bride, was flower girl and ring bearer and looked dainty in pale pink satin, carrying a pretty basket of flowers, some of which she strewed in the aisle as the bride and groom left the church.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. M. L. Hinton, pastor of the United church. The ushers at the church were Messrs. Ormond Cruikshank and A. R. Cassidy. During the signing Mrs. J. M. Baker sang "Love Came Calling," accompanied by Miss Ona Doxsee.

The groom's gift to the bride was a three strand rope of pearls, to the groomsman white golf cuff links with the Masonic emblem, to the bridesmaid a white gold ring with topaz setting, to the ring bearer a rope of pearls, to the ushers green golf cuff links, to the violinist cuff links and the organist and soloist cut glass bon bon dishes.

After the ceremony the guests motored to the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Collins, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served. Seven girl friends of the bride waited on the guests at dinner, Misses Mae Hinton, Mae Huycke, Jessie Wilcox, Helen Wilcox, Hazel McDonald, Hattie Smith and Lillian Montgomery.

The bride's travelling costume was a dress of maroon colored satin faced canton crepe with blonde trimming, a coat of golden brown needle point cloth with dyed opossum fur collar and cuffs. She wore a large picture hat of rose and sand silk velvet and carried brown kid pouch purse and wore hose and shoes to match the costume.

The bride and groom motored to Norwood, where they took the afternoon train for Toronto and Kingston and on their return they will reside in Hastings.

On Monday evening a miscellaneous shower was tendered Mrs. Knight at Lynch's Hall. Several gifts both useful and ornamental were bestowed upon her and a pleasant evening spent in music and dancing by the young people present.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE HELD

Next to the danger of forgetting God the speaker placed fogetting to thank God, the dark sin of ingratitude. People, he said, accept the gifts and forget the giver, as did nine of the ten lepers healed by Christ.

Selfishness was another danger against which he gave warning. Men fill their arms with what God has given them and forget to give some to others who are less fortunate. It is seen every day and becomes so familiar that others follow the example. It is opposed to the Gospel of Christ for He came thinking of others and gave His life as a ransom for them. Even the passing along of a pleasant smile or of kind words may help some one.

In closing the speaker urged his hearers to praise God and thank Him for all His blessings, looking forward to the day when the good gifts might be laid at His feet and bring joy through eternity.

Before starting his sermon Mr. Soanes, who comes from Aurora, referred to the fact that the first Sunday school he had attended had been the mission one from which All Saints' churh had grown.

Seasonal hymns were sung, those chosen being: "Come, ye thankful people, come," "The year is swiftly waning," "O Lord of heaven and earth and sea," and "Praise, O praise our God and King." The choir sang an anthem and special music was used for the two chants, the Magnificat and the Deus Miserentur. The Psalm read was the 65th, "Thou, O God, ar praised in Zion." The service was conducted by the Rector, the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson.

LABOR CONGRESS

only way to make it more comply is to fight the injunctions, and that will be by doing as in New York, where the strikers have ignored the injunction.

Delegate Hays of the Nova Scotia Miners, said he had seen a good deal of strikes, and as far as he was concerned the talk of "peaceful picketing" was a joke. The only way to prevent picketing was to organize the strike before it was called. It was useless to whisper in the ear of the strikebreaker. It might not be right to do injury to a strikebreaker, but it was a good thing to give him a ducking in the pond to bring him to his senses.

"Our organization," continued Delegate Hayes, "have no reason to stop picketing, and if there is another strike we are going to picket, no matter what may be the aftermath. We had no trouble with the police because we have 12,000 men, and if they want to put them all in jail it would require more police force. How many strikes will be lost between now and the time this legislation comes if we are to have no effective picketing? Without effective picketing the morale of the men will be easily busted. We have men on this continent who believe in winning a strike, and winning it as quickly as possible, and how they can."

P. M. Draper, Secretary-Treasurer of the Congress, pointed out to Delegate Hayes that his remarks would be quoted, and the result would be that in the next strike the military would be sent in. Furthermore, said Mr. Draper, the situation was not the same all over the country. The union mentioned had 12,000 men, but in other parts of Canada the unions did not have such a large proportion of the population, and consisted of a small minority only, and force would not do. Strikebreakers would not go into the mines unless protected, but the situation was different in the various cities.

Delegate Hayes retorted that strikebreakers never went to work unless protected, and as regards the military, he was convinced they would be sent in any event when there was a strike in the mines.

SCHOOL FAIRS

SOUTH CAVAN.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 24—Over six hundred people attended the South Cavan Rural School Fair held in the Agricultural Park, Millbrook, on Tuesday afternoon, ideal weather adding much to the pleasure and success of the occasion.

Seven schools are included in South Cavan Inspectorate, the list with the teachers, being: Fallis Line, S.S. No. 10, Miss Gladys Gray, teacher; Millbrook (two rooms) S.S. N. 11, B. B. Dawson and Miss Jean Erskine, teachers; Cedar Valley, S.S. No. 12, Miss Alice Armstrong teacher; Zion, S.S. No. 13, Miss Kathleen Lancashire, teacher; Fairview, S.S. No. 14, Mis Margaret Luxon teacher; Cork, S.S. No. 15, Miss Moise teacher; Carmel, S.S. No. 19, Miss Isabelle Syer teacher.

Captain F. McMahon, of Port Hope, and Colonel Odell judged the School Parade and the Physical Culture exercises, only four schools participating the teachers finding it impossible to muster sufficient pupils to take part in this popular event, many children being still absent owing to sore arms following the the recent order for vaccination.

The winners in the Parade were: first, Carmel; second, Millbrook; third, Fallis Line; fourth, Cedar Valley. For Physical Culture the standing was: first, Millbrook (63 pupils were entered from the two rooms of this school; second, Carmel.

The banners carried by each school in the parade were handsomely designed and the costumes deserving of mention. Fallis Line scholars worg a sailor's outfit, the pupil in the lead carrying a full-rigged ship model; Carmel had bright orange caps, a banner in orange and white, and each pupil carried a branch of brilliantly colored maple leaves; Millbrook school had chosen a patriotic outfit, Eva Howson representing "Miss Canada" and many flags being carried; Cedar Valley children represented the British Isles, with the rose, shamrock, and thistle displayed on the various costumes.

A feature that called forth well-deserved applaus was the bringing of all the pupils in the Parade to a halt facing the grand stand, the giving of the general salute to the flag, led by Colonel Odell, one small boy holding a large Union Jack while the salute was given and the massed pupils sang the National Anthem.

In the public speaking contest only three pupils entered and Mr. T. C. Paterson, Agricultural Representative, expressed regret that more interest is not shown in this excellent feature of all school fair work, especially as the local Women's Institute had offered a prize of 50 cents, in addition to the regular reward, to each pupil entering the contest irrespective of whether they were adjudged a winner or not. Captain McMahon and A. J. Fallis, M.P.P. were the judges and the winners were: First, Martha Earle; second, Charles Mason,; third, Eva Howson.

The school concert again demonstrated the utter inadequacy of Warsaw Town Hall. Many did not attempt to go. Some did not get in; others stood, the aisles were filled with chairs, and the children stood where they could or where packed any place. Mr. Cephas Payne was chairman. The program started promptly at eight o'clock and was over before ten. It was the children's night, and their program was:

1. — "Sweep, Sweep Your Troubles All Away," by Warsaw School.

2.—Kindergarten recitation, by Laura Little.

3.—No. 1 School chorus, "Vacation Days."

4.—Song, Muriel Bell, "O, Eva!"

OUR BOARDING HOUSE — — — — By AHERN

Women's Oldest hygienic problem now solved. A new and different way

THE old-time "sanitary pad" is fast becoming a rarity. Millions are discarding it as a needless hazard.

"KOTEX", a new and remarkable way, is now used by 8 in 10 better class women.

It's five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads!

You dine, dance, motor for hours in sheerest frocks without a second's doubt or fear.

It deodorizes, too. And thus stops ALL danger of offending.

Discards as easily as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You ask for it at any drug or department store, without hesitancy, simply by saying "KOTEX."

Do as millions are doing. End old, insecure ways. Enjoy life every day. Package of twelve costs only a few cents.

KOTEX

No laundry—discard like tissue

CROP REPORTS

Weather conditions continue very discouraging. Two good days at the beginning of last week permitted a few more farmers to finish their grain and small seed harvest but during the balance of the week nothing could be done. It will require at least two days of favourable drying conditions to render grain fit for hauling. Some central Ontario counties report from 15% to 20% of the crop still in the fields.

Land for Fall wheat is in most cases entirely too wet for seeding operations and a week of dry weather will be required before this work can go on. Bean harvesting is at a standstill and the crop is deteriorating in quality as the pods have been wet and some of them in mud for days. All late crops are ripening very slowly. Potato rot has been reported from many counties, but it is too early to estimate the extent of the damage. Pastures are luxuriant and young seeds have done well except when long standing stooks have smothered out the tender plants.

Brant.—Considerable grain is still in the fields. A good deal of it in very bad condition. Conditions in heavier land were unsatisfactory. A good deal of second cut alfalfa to be taken in yet. A considerable area of wheat to be sown yet. Seeding of wheat very much delayed due to weather conditions.

Durham.—This county will have about 150 pure bred ram lambs for sale this Fall. These are mostly Shropshires. There are a few Leicesters and a few Oxfords. These rams have all been graded by Dominion Government officials, who have carefully gone over these animals and classified them according to their suitability for use on pure bred flocks or grade flocks, etc.

Haldimand.—Reports of rot in the potato crop are reported in various sections of the county. It is difficult to tell to what extent the rot will affect the crop as yet. The tomatoes are being harvested slowly because they are not ripening, due to lack of sunshine. However, the size and quality of the tomatoes is better than last year. Corn is earing up well and many fields are slightly glazed. The corn crop has turned out a great deal better than was anticipated earlier in the season. Some fields of golden glow will average around twelve feet in height.

Halton.—Considerable harvest is still in the field and is sprouting badly. Farmers who have attempted to save the crop find the grain heating in the mows and some have gone to considerable trouble by opening up the mows and digging holes to try to save the grain from combustion. Present indications are that if the wet weather continues, the potato crop of Halton will be seriously damaged, other vegetable crops such as onions, etc., are also affected by the wet weather and show signs of rot.

Kent.—Harvesting has been very tedious. The majority of farmers threshed from the stook, and weather conditions have been very unfavorable. An occasional field of oats is still to be threshed. Reports from grain buyers are that a lot of the wheat is soft, and smut is very bad this year. The pulling of beans has commenced and with rain every other day, we can expect a lot of low grade beans. Only a few fields of fall wheat have been seen as yet. There is a tendency for the farmers to increase their acreage. This is the result of the decrease of the corn acreage. Our corn acreage of over 70,000 acres has been decreased to less than 30,000. This low figure will again be cut in two. The corn borer was exceptionally heavy this year.

Lennox & Addington.—Farmers in the northern part of the county are making arrangements to feed quite a number of beef cattle this winter. From various parts of the county, inquiries are coming in for pure bred rams. Sheep raising is looked upon as a profitable line of farming. Pasture has been good and live stock, generally speaking, is in good condition.

Middlesex.—There is some grain out in the fields but the percentage is very small. There is considerable alfalfa to cut and there is some that has been cut and is now lying in the fields. Some silos have been filled. The weather was exceedingly wet during the past week and it has been impossible to put in fall wheat. It will be at least a week before the ground is fit for seeding. It is too wet in some places to plow.

Peel.—Still approximately 20% of crop in the field, still a few fields of wheat in stook—all grain and alfalfa still out is growing badly and in many cases will be scarcely worth harvesting as the straw is rotten and grain badly sprouted. Good lots of alfalfa bringing offers of $8.25 to $8.60 per bushel from the machine.

Peterboro.—Probably 80% of the harvest was completed here two weeks ago but the clean-up has been dragging along ever since and some are not yet through. There was very little buckwheat grown in the county this year, so that this fact has been an advantage in getting this work cleaned up. Barley and peas were the best crops in the county this year. Alsike has been yielding fairly well, though there was very little grown. The potato crop is fairly good and no reports of rot have come in so far.

UNITED PRESBYTERY HELD CONVENTION

Delegates From District Meet in Trinity United Church, Omemee.

OMEMEE, Sept. 24.—On Wednesday afternoon, September 15, a sectional convention of the Lindsay District Presbyterial was held in Trinity United Church, Omemee, and as though to challenge the loyalty of the Women's Missionary Society, the afternoon was anything but inviting. The rain was falling in torrents, but despite this handicap, the delegates and representatives from Janetville, Dunsford, Lindsay, and Omemee, turned out in surprising numbers and a splendid session was held.

Mrs. E. W. Rowland, president of the local society, presided in a very capable manner. Following the opening hymn, the Scripture lesson, found in St. John 15th Chapter, was beautifully read and explained with many illustrations by Mrs. (Dr.) Irvine of Lindsay, after which Rev. Mr. Carmichael of Dunsford led in prayer.

Mrs. Bradburn was appointed secretary for the session and following words of welcome by Mrs. Rowland, the roll call of auxiliaries conducted by Miss Dunoon was answered by reports from the various branches represented. As each report was called, the ladies representing each branch stood up. There were four from Dunsford; three from Janetville; eight from Queen Street, Lindsay, and twenty-two from First United Church, Lindsay, as well as a splendid representation from the local branch.

Following the reports from which much information and help was gleaned from other branches, Miss Dunoon, the district president, gave an inspiring address. In the United Church of Canada we have 200,000 interested W.M.S. workers, but there are 400,000 women in the church still not interested. Miss Dunoon pointed out that our aim should be to have every woman in the church a member of the Auxiliary. We must be aggressive and progressive. If we fail, the church mission boards could not supply the need. We must not only maintain but extend the work begun. If we are to blaze new trails, we must have increased revenue on the home base, and if the additional 400,000 women of the church would give support, this would be made possible and they would be blessed and our work would be world encircled. Systematic giving in each society was strongly advocated. The First United Church W.M.S. has adopted a weekly envelope system which is working well. It is the Biblical way, for are we not all enjoined to lay by for the first day of the week? Miss Dunoon urged the W.M.S. ladies to make it a matter of prayer and give in a business-like way.

Following Miss Dunoon's address, Mrs. Carmichael of Dunsford rendered a beautiful solo, which was much appreciated by all present.

A questionnaire was conducted by the president and many helpful ideas were exchanged in this way.

Mrs. Irvine gave the treasurer's report as given at the branch meeting at Trenton in June.

Following the hearty singing of a hymn, the offering was taken.

Encouraging reports of the work accomplished by the Methodist, Congregational and Presbyterian churches were given by Mesdames Glenny, McLennan and Prouse, brought a most interesting meeting to a close.

Following a prayer by Mrs. J. Bradburn of Janetville, the former district superintendent, the ladies were invited to the Sunday School room, where dainty refreshments and a social hour were enjoyed by all present.

Among those who attended from a distance were Miss Vera Johns, Toronto; Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Culbert, Mrs. I. Laidley, Mrs. McCullough, Mrs. Irvine, Mrs. Staples, Mrs. Mulligan, Miss Dunoon, Mrs. G. A. Balfour, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. Helen, Mrs. Glenny, Mrs. Prouse, Mrs. T. Brown, Mrs. Morrison, Mrs. Vickery, Miss Ingram, Mrs. McClennan, Mrs. McLuhan, all of Lindsay; Mrs. S. Stinson, Mrs. J. Bradburn, Miss Bessie Bradburn, of Janetville; Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael, Miss Elliot, and Mrs. Patrick of Dunsford.

Corn Roast

Green Landing was the scene of a moonlight corn boil on Monday evening, when about seventy-five of the young folk of Trinity United Church League, journeyed by canoe, by foot or by motor to this pretty spot on the bank of the Pigeon River. A huge bonfire had been previously prepared and soon after the arrival of the merry-makers, the fire burst forth into flame, rivalling in brilliancy the moon which had shed its silvery beams over the water making a scene which will linger long in the memory of those present.

While the girls husked corn, the boys were busily engaged in carrying water and soon three large iron pots filled to the brim with the autumn luxury were swinging over the fire. Huge logs were rolled into place and the party, comfortably seated in the firelight, were led in community singing by Rev. E. W. Rowland, with ukelele accompaniment by a number of the young ladies.

When the corn was pronounced done, the crowd ceased singing and, carrying their steaming cobs to the butter, they proceeded to roll them, salt them and then—can them. Apples, sandwiches and cake followed the corn and then, those who could still sing, started up the song again. Many of the popular old songs were heartily sung, the closing numbers being "Good-Night Ladies," and The National Anthem, after which three rousing cheers and a tiger were given for the energetic pastor of the church, Mr. Rowland.

On Monday evening, a corn supper was held in the Sunday School room of the Presbyterian Church for the Sunday School scholars and other young folk of the church. A tempting menu was provided by the elder members and grown-ups and following the supper, music and games provided an hour's pleasure for everyone present.

WOMEN LEAVING STRICKEN COAST

Men Remain Behind For Work of Clearing Away Wreckage.

349 KNOWN DEAD.

MIAMI, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—Florida's hurricane stricken lower east coast bent its efforts to the prevention of disease and the removal of homeless refugees to cities to the northward for shelter and refuge. Thousands yesterday bared their arms to the anti-typhoid needle and while serums were being used up quickly aeroplanes were bringing in more from the north.

Meanwhile thousands of refugees were leaving for their former homes in the north and for northern Florida cities where food, clothing, and shelter await them. All the women and children are being removed from Hollywood where the greatest fury of the storm was felt. All the men have been conscripted for the work of clearing away the mass of tangled wreckage.

An additional survey of the sixty-mile coast where the storm was worst felt showed 349 known dead, 1,100 injured, and a property loss of approximately $165,000,000.

4,825 Homes Destroyed

(By Alfred P. Reck, United Press Staff Correspondent)

Southern Florida continued its struggle of chaos today with suffering further mitigated by the departure for their former homes in the north of hundred of persons whose houses were destroyed or damaged by the hurricane.

Henry T. Baker, of the American Red Cross, in charge of relief work said, that at least 4,825 homes in the entire storm swept area were destroyed and that at least 5,000 were damaged.

The work of searchers was to be concentrated today in the flooded everglades area on both sides of the Tamiami Trail because of the lack of boats, that area where practically 300 families lived, has been left untouched. Water was still about four feet deep in many section directly off the trail.

Officials said that the death toll of the storm could not be accurately fixed for perhaps a week, when all the mud covered debris had been searched. A hospital survey revealed 1,500 injured.

DOCUMENTS SEIZED CONCERNING CASE

District Attorney Offers Proof of Communication With Ormiston.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—District Attorney's detectives yesterday seized documents which, they assert, establish that Aimee Semple McPherson and Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, her mother, have been communicating with the missing Kenneth G. Ormiston through a third party.

This third person, they state, was Dr. A. M. Waters, the physician who committed suicide last week and who had been accused by Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman Sielaff of complicity in a hoax to produce a "Miss X" to fulfill the story told by Ormiston that it was she, and not Mrs. McPherson, who occupied a cottage at Carmel with him last June.

The documents were seized in the residence of the dead physician by Chief of Detectives Ben Cohn and three of his staff.

It was declared the papers included telegrams and letters from Mrs. McPherson to Dr. Waters, others from the doctor to Ormiston, and replies from Ormiston.

Angelus Temple followers yesterday were preparing for 48 hours of fasting and prayer asked yesterday by Mrs. McPherson, as a means of furthering her defence fund. Neither the plans for raising the money nor the names of the committee of 12 businessmen who will administer it have been made public.

Clarence Wiseman, aged 19, son of Mrs. Lorraine Sielaff, was found and questioned by the District Attorney.

Before his mother's arrest, Clarence was produced to confirm her assertions that she occupied the Carmel cottage. He is understood to have repudiated his former assertions and to have confessed he was a part of the hoax his mother confessed. Asked who had coached her son in his asserted false story, Mrs. Wiseman Sielaff said she thought it was "pretty obvious."

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

St. John's Branch Holds Regular Meeting.

The Woman's Auxiliary of St. John's church met on Tuesday, September 21st, the president, Mrs. A. W. Turner, occupying the chair.

The opening prayers were offered by the Rev. J. T. O'Connor-Fenton, of Norwood. Dr. Blagrave then spoke of the passing of two valued members.

Reports were given by the officers of different departments. After the meeting tea was served on the church lawn by members of the refreshment committee.

Railroad electrification in France is extending steadily. A new hydro-electric power plant at Erguzon has just been completed to serve the Paris-Vierzon rail line which will be electrified by the end of this year, and to increase the electric consumption of the Paris-Orleans line to about 100,000,000 kilowatts a year.

OVERALLS GARB OF SOUTH SEAS

Days of Romance Gone, Natives Degenerated, Traveler Finds.

TOO CIVILIZED.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 24.—The South Sea islands of the romantic period have gone and in their place is so-called civilization, and a pretty crude brand of it, Dr. George Hamilton Combs, pastor of the Country Club Christian Church, found on a recent tour.

"These islands have been so touched—and for pictorial purposes, so spoiled—by 'civilization,' that native life, life 'in the raw' as it was lived a century ago, seldom or never is seen," says Dr. Combs in a letter to the Star.

"The present day tourist comes too late. Gone are the 'slavers.' Gone are the buccaneers. Gone is the cannibalistic art and era when beachcombers became entangled with princesses and found themselves kings.

"Think of a wireless station where Stevenson sung of the coral and the palm! Think of the Charleston in the New Hebrides! Imagine the phonograph on Thursday Island! Picture to yourself the Tonga Island belles bobbing their hair and debating as to whether their skirts shall miss 10 or 11 inches reaching their ankles! 'Corrugated iron roofs on Samoan dwellings. A Carnegie library in Suva, capital of the one-time cannibalistic isle. Go to a place where you may see 'furniture life' and you are taken there in a motor car!'"

Natives in Overalls.

It is on a hopeless search for romance that modern tourists embark when they set out to "get off the beaten path," according to Dr. Combs. "Even on remote and isolated islands where there are perhaps only a dozen natives one is likely to see some native in overalls of New England manufacture, prying open, with a Sheffield knife, a can of Armour meat," he says.

"Cannibals? To some extent, at some time, nearly all these islanders were cannibals. The black trail of this loathsome practice went over nearly all these sunny islands. How it came to be is a matter for argument. Some contend races cannot thrive on a vegetarian diet, and that, since animal flesh was difficult to obtain, men, being more plentiful than hogs, people turned cannibal just for a change of diet. Others argue cannibalism originating as a religious rite. But whatever its origin it was here when the missionaries came, and now, except for a sporadic outburst now and then on the Gilbert Islands and a few others, it no longer exists.

"A word as to the industries. First in importance is the sugar industry, the largest single source of revenue. It means $75,000,000 or $100,000,000 to the Hawaiian Islands, $10,000,000 or $12,000,000 to the Fijis and substantial incomes to the Carolines, Tongas and other groups.

"Less familiar is the cocoanut industry. The cocoanut palm is a beautiful tree. From its trunk comes the material for bridges and houses, and out of its leaves come the thatch, mat and wrappings for food in cooking. Its bark also has multiple uses. Out of its blossoms can be manufactured a drink compared to which bootleg whisky is like milk. The shell of the cocoanut is water cup, bottle, jam jar, tattoo outfit receptacle, perfume box and what not. Out of its fiber the islanders' twine is made.

Both Food and Drink.

"The kernel of the nut is both food and drink. It is eaten raw and cooked, green and ripe, hot or cold. Dried, the product known as copra is, next to sugar, the chief article of commerce. It is sold by the ton and brings from $100 to $500 an acre. Invaluable, too, is its oil as a base for soap and many other articles.

"Pearl fishing is important. It is carried on to a greater extent at Pearl Island than elsewhere, for the richest beds are there. The oyster in which the pearls are found is sometimes as large as a three-gallon bucket. There may be from one to a dozen pearls in a single oyster. Or there may be none. Not one in a thousand secretes a pearl. Yet the oyster shell is valuable and more money is made out of the shells than out of the pearls. Native divers go down after them as far as 50 feet and are said to be able to remain under water two minutes. Divers in suits go down to a depth of 200 feet. All are in danger of sharks. I have not yet seen the pearl fields, but I have seen the diver and the shark.

"I was leaning over the rail while our ship was in harbor, looking at some small brown boys swimming and diving near the side of the ship. My eye caught an unusual boiling of the waters, and I saw a huge shark, 15 or 20 feet long, circling and cruising about. Alarmed I called to the boys, but they failed to hear me, or, if they did, they went on diving from their canoes. Then I saw the monster literally lunge towards the boys. His great mouth opened. The children were not more than 40 feet away from him. A leap, as if a spring had been uncoiled, and in a moment more those murderous jaws closed—on an empty cask. The shark sank out of sight, to digest its luncheon. A close call."

Record "Muskie" From French River

This record breaking muskalunge of the season; 35 pounds in weight, was taken from the waters of the French River at the Canadian Pacific Bungalow Camps, by E. A. Farintosh, of the Carnegie Corporation of New York City. Farintosh and his guide had a twenty-five minute battle with this monster muskie before it was finally landed. Twice it leaped clear of the water and three times it took more than 75 yards of line.

ANNABORU HUNT HAS ITS THRILL

Lord Apsley Tells of Shooting Gigantic Buffalo in Australia.

CHARGE HUNTERS.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Lord Apsley, who made a cross-continent tour of Australia by motor tractor now relates some experiences with that leviathan of Antipodean jungles popularly called the water buffalo and known to the natives as "Annaboru."

He says that hunting these beasts, which weigh as much as three tons and frequently have horns of seven to nine feet spread, has not been a popular sport with white men because the animal is too big, too slow, too easy to hit yet too difficult to kill.

The Annaboru is hunted, nevertheless, for the sake of his hide in the primitive but exciting fashion in which "Buffalo Bill" Cody secured his bison on the Western plains of this country.

"A herd is located and started moving, generally by the blacks, until it comes into open country," relates Lord Apsley, "then the hunters gallop up from behind or from a flank and shoot from the saddle, with .450 Martini carbines, as many bulls as they can before the herd reaches bush or swamp, through which the buffalo can travel much faster than horses.

"It is a thrilling business, because a buffalo, if wounded, will as a rule swing out of the herd, turn, and charge the hunter. It requires presence of mind and a quick pony for the hunter to turn himself and get in another shot."

Lord Apsley explains that the water buffalo is not a native of Australia but is believed to have been introduced to that continent from Timor by the early Dutch settlers. "From a few they have multiplied until now there are large herds of the mighty beasts roaming through the jungles in the northern part of the country and a few have been seen in Queensland and Western Australia though these are believed to be bulls driven from the herd.

"My own introduction to Annaboru in his native haunts was short, but the recollections of it are very sweet," continues Lord Apsley. "While Michael Terry last year was getting his tractors ready for his expedition across Northern Australia, he sent two members of his party, Redknap, the cinema operator, and myself, on a 'special patrol' to try to get pictures of Annaboru. He gave us a week to do it in, while the caterpillars were being inspected by the customs officials at Darwin and given a trial run.

"Thanks to good fortune and the help given by Harry Hardy, of Burrundie, we were given experiences which we shall never forget, and secured films, the completion of which I am anxiously awaiting. The recollection that I cherish most now, but least at the time, is that of being pursued by Annaboru down the bank of a river on one side and a boggy plain on the other, while riding a three-year-old colt and carrying a .303 carbine and only two cartridges."

THREE PREMIERS TO BE HONORED

Leaders From South Africa, New Zealand and Newfoundland Freemen.

AT GUILD HALL.

LONDON, Sept. 24. — The Corporation of the City of London has unanimously decided to confer the freedom of the city in gold boxes to Premier J. B. M. Hertzog, of South Africa; Premier J. G. Coates of New Zealand, and Premier Walter St. Monroe of Newfoundland, on the occasion of their visit here in connection with the Imperial Conference which opens on Oct. 19.

The freedom of the city is being conferred in recognition of the eminent positions these statesmen occupy in the Dominions they represent, and in recognition of their services to the British Empire.

The ceremony will be held in the Guildhall, the grand civic hall where sovereigns and princes are entertained, freedoms conferred, and the great city functions take place.

A storm-proof overall for police has been invented by an English constable.

The significant announcement by U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Jardine that the weste farmers want tariff revision and the declaration by Secretary Hoover that he has in mind a plan for the private financing of farm operations may be coupled together as the beginning of a new Republican policy.

LADIES' AID MEET.

Bethel United Church Members Held Gathering on Wednesday.

EAST EMILY, Sept. 24.—The members of the Ladies' Aid of Bethel United Church held a meeting at the home of Mrs. Albert Ruth on Wednesday evening.

There were about twenty-five members present, and a splendid meeting held, it being the first meeting held since June, and they hope to start their regular meetings for the winter months.

Mrs. Wm. Howden, president, opened the meeting with all singing "Take the Name of Jesus With You."

Miss Helen Storey read the 45th Psalm, after which the business was discussed, and the date set for the fowl supper, which is to take place October the 20th.

The closing hymn was, "What a Friend we have in Jesus." After which all present enjoyed a pleasant hour in games and contests. Mrs. Ruth, hostess of the evening, served a dainty lunch, after which they all retired to their respective homes.

Personals.

Mrs. Geo. Newman has returned home after spending the past couple of weeks with relatives in Pennsylvania, U.S.A.

Quite a number of people from this district attended the funeral of the late Mr. Robt. McNichol, which was held from his late residence, Lindsay, to Emily Cemetery, on Sunday afternoon.

The crops on a whole throughout this district are not as heavy as last year.

There has not been much threshing done so far. Fall wheat, peas and clover are turning out very good, but oats and barley are very light what has been threshed.

Some of the men have some of their fall ploughing nearly completed; others have not got their harvest in yet.

The gardens in this district are very good, and the potatoes and turnips seem to be a very good yield also.

Most of the farmers have their fall wheat sowed.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Sullivan of Ennismore have moved on to Mr. Michael O'Donnell's farm, previously occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Max McCauliffe.

Mrs. Wm. McQuade is spending this week visiting her son, the Rev. Mr. George McQuade, and Mrs. McQuade, at the parsonage at Elora.

Bringing the School to the Scholars

A school on wheels—a school that suddenly appears one day and goes and comes again—like a magic castle.

It is doubtful if the news of an approaching circus, heralded by dazzling and wonderful advance posters has ever caused as much excitement as the announcement of the coming of the "Canadian Pacific School Train" into the hinterland of Northern Ontario. This unique experiment of bringing the school house to the scholar in this sparsely settled country is being carried on by the Provincial Government of Ontario in cooperation with the Canadian Pacific Railway with a view to providing educational facilities to the children of railway men and residents in the remote stations along the line in the Northern section of the Province between Chapleau and Sudbury. In all, around 400 chilren will be educated by this means.

Evening Examiner "Ideal Fashions" by Jean Betty Hamilton

The Two-piece Style Enters The Mode in a One-piece Frock

The belted line and slightly molded bodice indicate the new spirit in this frock fashioned of claret color crêpe satin. Equally important are the knife-plaited panels designed to insure movement at the hemline. Satin of a deeper tone forms the long tie collar and flat tailored bows used to ornament the bodice front and dart-fitted sleeves. The foundation of this model is in one piece, the plaited panels being sewn to the dress at the low waistline and finished with a pointed belt tied in sash effect in the center back. NO. 1414 is in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Size 36 requires 6½ yards 39-inch material, ⅝ yard 36-inch contrasting. 20 cents.

The designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book are advance styles for the home dressmaker, and the woman or girl who desires to wear garments dependable for taste, simplicity and economy will find her desires fulfilled in our patterns. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

Electricity May Stop Wars of the Future

Power plants and electric transmission lines, pulsing with energy in every country in the world, may some day make war impossible. This declaration by Umberto Pomilio, a hydro-electric engineer of note, aroused great interest at the Institute of Politics in Williamstown, Mass., this month. He said the sources of energy, such as coal and oil and waterpower, are common causes of belligerency between nations, and are at the seat of many "international political questions" which are ordinarily the assigned causes of wars. He looks forward to the day when the rapid spread of electric power, "the modern slave of man," will be so wide that no nation will need to envy that which another nation has.

TREATMENT—Though making up the eyes is not sanctioned by the most fastidious, it is quite permisible to touch up eye lashes that are too light if you do it carefully. As you apply it, brush upward and be very careful that you do not get the tiniest particle of the macara in your eye. Moisten the mascara with witch hazel, rather than water, for the best results.

HOROSCOPE

'The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)
FOR SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1926.

Again good and evil planetary influences contend, according to astrology. This is a day unpropitious for many human interests.

Under this sway executives and all persons in authority should benefit. This is a day for pushing big projects and for planning new enterprises.

While this configuration prevails the mind may be the prey to many destructive or paralyzing thoughts and for this reason it is well to cultivate an opimistic point of view.

There may be rumors and news reports that serve to spread alarm regarding international affairs, but the seers declare that there is no cause for the United States to borrow trouble.

All the planetary signs presage for this country the most remarkable prosperity and for the nation added prestige.

This is a day of promise for all who seek employment and the reading of the stars indicates that there will be much work to do.

Farmers may find this rather a discouraging day, inasmuch as they may meet economic problems not easily solved, but they are to profit from unexpected conditions, it is prophesied.

Food is to become a matter of world interest and famine may again stalk in certain part of the Earth, especially in China.

The birthdate should rise in the next few months and occultists remind us that a new race of extraordinary beauty and intelligence is developing.

The seers prophesy that at a time not far distant the white race is to recognize the fact that it has not yet attained civilization and that it has continued many barbaric customs.

China and Japan are soon to present new problems to the United States, which will consider some important commercial question, it is forecast.

People of moderate means are to be strongly tempted to speculate, it is predicted, and they should be careful to avoid all foolish ventures.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have rather a troublesome year, but they should beware of disputes and safeguard all their interests.

Children born on this day may be quick-tempered and fond of routine. Many military men are born under this sign of Libra.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence t was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)
NANCY

The quaintly demure name of Nanc, which has come into great vogue in modern times, signifies "grace." There was a period in her evolution, when Nancy fell into disuse, or was bestowed as a homely uninspired cognomen, particularly indigenous to rural communities. But Nancy's day has come; she is fashionable and exceedingly pleasant to pronounce.

Nancy's origin lies in the Hebrew Chaanach, signifying "mercy or grace" and her earliest prominent forbear was Hannah, mother of Samuel. But Hannah is a harsh name because of its aspirate initial, so the process of evolution carried the original word through the successive steps of Anna, Anne, and finally arrived at Nan.

It seems curious that Nan was the forerunner of Nancy instead of being a contraction of the latter name; indeed it is one of the few such instances occurring in etymological records. Nannie which is Nancy's diminutive, is indigenous to Scotland, though much used in England. Nancy is Annot in the former country.

France has many equivalents for Nancy and Nan—among them being Nanette, Nanon, Ninon, Ninette, Nichon and Nillon. Nancy becomes Nanna and Ninette under Italian influences. There is even a Dutch form of Nancy—Naatje, and Nann and Nanneli are popular in Switzerland.

Amber is Nancy's talismanic gem. It is a medicinal stone which protects its wearer from danger and disease. Monday is her lucky day and 7 her lucky number.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)
SIR RICHARD STEELE AND MARY SCURLOCK

The originator of one of the most popular parts of the magazine journalism, the "feature article," and founder of one of the first periodicals in the English language, was Sir Richard Steele. Steele was a dramatist and an author, but his chief claim to fame is his founding of the celebrated periodical, "The Tatler" and later, in conjunction with his life-long friend, Addison, "The Spectator." It was in these publications that Steele developed the form of literary composition known by its more dignified term, as the essay.

Sir Richard Steele fell in love with Miss Mary Scurlock, a wealthy and pretty lady, who became his second wife. The following letter Steele wrote to Mary three weeks after he proposed to her and a week before their marriage. It was a very much modern courtship.

"September 1, 1707.

"It is the hardest thing in the world to be in love and yet attend to business.

"As for me, all who speak to me find me out, and I must lock myself up, or other people will do it for me.

"A gentleman asked me this morning: 'What news from Lisbon?' And I answered 'She is exquisitely handsome.' Another desired to know when I had last been at Hampton Court. I replied, 'I will be on Tuesday come se'night.' Pr'ythe, allow me at least to kiss your hand before that day, that my mind may be in some composure. O love!

A thousand torments dwell about thee! Yet who could live without thee?

"Methinks I could write a volume to you; but all the language on earth would fail in saying how much, and with what disinterested passion, I am ever yours, Rich. Steele."

Fashion are now so varied that many high-class stores are obliged to keep in stock as many as fifty different varieties in Women s glace kid shoes alone.

A hundred years ago would-be beauties ate quantities fcarrots, not only in the form of jam sharpened with lemon juice, but grated raw.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thornell

SHE DESCRIBES A SIMPLY MADE DANCE FROCK

My young friend from the Middle West wrote me again to-day.

It seems that she is still in difficulties over her Fall wardrobe, and needs another lift.

"You have saved my life on the clothes question before," se began. "This time my predicament is really sad. I've come almost to the limit of my clothese allowance, and I still need a very pretty dance frock. It must be pretty, and it must be inexpensive without looking it. What shall I do?"

I was flattered that she should ask my advice in a case of such importance, and immediately I began thinking:

"She must make it herself, and she must buy the very best quality of chiffon obtainable, and it must be one of those simple but extremely smart affairs that people turn about to look at."

I called my good friends, the manikins, at Madame's, and asked their ever-ready help on the problem.

Pam came to my rescue, as she so often does.

"As long as it's your friend," she said, "I'll do something for her that I seldom do for people."

Several of us turned toward her expectantly, and she said:

"I've stayed awake nights thinking out a frock for myself that answers all the stipulations of your friend in that letter. You know I never want anyone to copy our frocks, but she is so far away our lines can never cross, so bring me a pad and pencil."

Pam is an expert designer, and this frock I'm sketching in my diary speaks for itself.

We advised emerald green for the fair-haired girl who is to make the frock.

First of all, we instructed her to make a straight slip of matching crepe de Chine. Over this goes a simple chiffon frock, with skirt pulled in ever so little at the waistline, and dropping two inches longer than the slip.

The really expert touch on the frock is seen in the new cape treatment, which forms a diagonal line and drops in a jabot at the back. This is simply a straight strip of chiffon, picotted about the edges.

This Emerald Green Chiffon Is Easily Made and Most Effective.

"That cape," Pam informed us, "is what kept me awake nights. I was determined to have something really smart and different."

FASHIONS

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (United Press).—Writers of women's pages are forever giving advice upon dress to business women suggesting as a rule, dark colors, long sleeves, sensible necklines, little jewelry, no cosmetics, subdued footgear, etc. One would think that the business woman was a creature apart from the smug married ladies who drudge about kitchens. And in a way she is.

It is even more necessary for the business woman to be well dressed than it is for the woman who does house work in the mornings and gads the streets in the afternoons. The business woman must look her best eight hours a day for six days of the week. Looking trim and smart is part of her job. Men do not want drab looking assistants about their offices; girls with unmarcelled hair, sallow skins and hideous frocks. The day of the 'maiden lady' stenographer is passed and those prim old pioneers of the keys are today bobbed, rouged and shorter-skirted along with the new recruits to the ranks.

When I say that men do not want slatterns in their offices I do not mean to infer that they want women with the danger signal written all over them. A man wants an assistant who is neat, becomingly and sanely dressed and with well cared for hair, hands and fingernails. He expects these things in both men and women assistants.

The office vamp with peroxided hair, rouged lips and fluffy frocks which were suitable for an afternoon tea proved herself a liability rather than an asset and thank goodness, we see her type no more. The middle route between the two extremities of dressing is a hard one to follow.

Even the girl who uses the office as a means of livelihood between high-school and marriage must learn that office clothing must combine smartness with dignity rather than with allurement. If she wears sleeveless knee-lengthed, form displaying dresses she merely lessens her chances of advancement and gains the disproval of saner women with whom she is associated.

As to colors, dark shades are easier to keep in condition and they give a business like appearance to the wearer. But—in these days of bright colors, the business-woman need not confine herself strictly to somber shades. Dull shades of green, tan, rose and even certain darker reddish shades can be worn if they are made in tailored styles. We find no uniformity of dress except in ome of the large department stores and in factories. The business woman has achieved a tremendous place in the business world, a place which she perhaps never would have attained had she been garbed as a chorus girl, or as a misfit in navy-blue serges.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Today's talismanic stoner is the turquoise, but this mysterious gem cannot be worn by everyone; if it turns green when it comes in contact with the flesh, it is unlucky for the wearer, and should be avoided. Such a change in color was regarded by the ancients as an unfailing sign of misfortune; however, many a modern girl has dipped her turquoise ring in water to match a green frock, so one must regard such beliefs sensibly.

Today's natal stone is the opal, which the ancients believed endowed its wearer with a changeable temperament and attractive personality.

Today's color is lavendar, which exerts a calming influence on those wearing it.

Today's flower is the pink carnation, potent in dispelling sorrow.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Todays Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND JACK'S LEGS.

Hopping one day through a part of the woods where he had not been looking for adventures in a long time, Uncle Wiggily happened to remember that his wife had told him to go to the six and seven cent store to get some lead pencils.

"Are you going to have them boiled or fried?" asked the bunny gentleman.

"Neither," answered his wife. "You shouldn't be trying to make jokes all the while. I want the lead pencils for our little rabbit children to use in writing out their lessons for the Lady Mouse Teacher in the Hollow Stump School."

"Oh, I'm glad you told me!" said Uncle Wiggily, and he hopped away, fully intending to get the lead pencils at the store. But he forgot all about them until he reached this part of the woods.

It was quite dark beneath the trees, so dark and black, in fact, that it made the rabbit gentleman think of black lead and this, naturally, caused him to remember the pencils.

"I'll hop to the store and get them before I have another spell of forgetfulness," said the bunny to himself. "Then I'll come back here and perhaps I shall find an adventure."

As Uncle Wiggily hopped away he heard a voice calling:

"Help! Help! Help!"

"Ha! Now I am sure I shall find an adventure here in the deep, dark woods," said Mr. Longears. "Some one needs help! That always means an adventure!" So he called aloud:

"Have no fear! I shall soon be back to help you!"

"All right," answered a sad and sorrowful voice. "But please be as quick as you can, for I have lost my legs!"

"Oh, I just know this is going to be a most wonderful adventure!" exclaimed the bunny uncle, and he hopped double quick to the store where he bought many lead pencils, for he had forty-seven little bunny boys and girls who went to the Hollow Stump School.

With his pockets filled with lead pencils, Uncle Wiggily hopped back to the deep dark place in the woods and said:

"Now I am ready to help. Who are you and what is the matter?"

"I am Jumping Jack and I have lost my legs," was the answer, and, seated on a flat stump, the rabbit gentleman saw a Jumping Jack toy with no legs. Jack had a wooden head, body and arms, but no legs.

"What became of your legs?" asked Mr. Longears.

"Oh, I wanted to be smart and show my brother, Jim, how far I could jump—much farther than he," sighed Jack. "So I jumped and jumped until I wore my legs off, and now I have none! Can you help me?"

At first Uncle Wiggily did not think he could, but he happened to remember that Jack's legs were made of wood as were the lead pencils he had in his pockets, so the bunny said:

"If you do not mind a pair of legs with centers of black lead, I can fix you up."

"Please fix me up, then," begged Jack, and in a trice, which is a very short time, Uncle Wiggily had fastened two of his extra lead pencils on Jack's body and the wooden man had legs as good as before.

"Hurray!" he cried, kicking out with them. "Now I can jump back home to my brother Jim," and away he started.

But he had not gone far before, all at once, out of the bushes came slinking the sly weasel, who was starting to whiten his coat of fur as he always does in winter.

"Gurra! Gurra!" said the sly Weasel. "I think I will go me up and nibble Uncle Wiggily's ears!" and away the sly chap started.

"You'll do nothing of the sort!" cried Jumping Jack. With that he began to kick out with the new legs the bunny gentleman had made for him. The Jack kicked the Weasel and as the Pencil legs had black lead inside them, they began making black marks on the white coat of the sly chap.

"Hurray!" he cried, kicking out.

"Oh, you're marking me all up!" squealed the Weasel. "You're making my nice new winter coat all black!"

"Then don't try to nibble my friend Uncle Wiggily!" said Jumping Jack, and the Weasel didn't. Afraid of having his white fur soiled, the bad chap crept back to his den.

As for Jack, he jumped and jumped on his new lead pencil legs until he was safe home once more. And he thanked the bunny very much.

So if the rubber plant doesn't stretch its neck out of the window to see if it's raining and tickle the door knob, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily

Daily Short Story

THE BUZZY BEE

(By Clarissa Mackie.)

Raymond jerked his head out of the engine's vitals and listened intently.

A queer buzzing sound smote the languid summer air. The long country road was empty.

A small boy climbed a fence and paused beside the stalled car. "Something busted, Mister?" he asked.

Raymond grinned back at the freckled face. "Gone dead, dead as a door nail, son. I'll have to telephone for help. Your folks got a telephone?"

"Yes. The house is way over there," pointing across the road.

The buzzing noise was growing louder. "She's comin' along some fast," he said, looking up the road.

"Who is? What is?" inquired the ... a smear of grease along his clean-shaven cheek.

"Miss Weed and the buzzy bee."

"The what?"

"It's a flivver—she had an accident once and it makes that buzzy sound. Folks call it the buzzy bee because Miss Weed does so many things with it—she makes lots of money—she sells eggs and chickens, owns the garage, has bees and sells honey and flowers and garden truck and milk and ——"

"I say, son, I wonder if she couldn't give me a tow to her garage?" Raymond strained his eyes toward a small speck approaching along the road. In his mind's eye he could see a large-boned, sun-browned countrywoman, capable, happy and with that masculine touch that marks some successful women. He gave one last despairing glance at his engine—he thought he knew all the troubles that a motor was heir to, but now he was up against it.

The buzzing had become a noisy roar, and as he turned around, the thing stopped in a cloud of blue vapor. Just then, stepping daintily across the road, came a girl—such a girl as Raymond had dreamed about but never met so far. She wore a short-skirted sports dress of blue cotton, and wide straw hat such as farmers wear, her stockings were blue like her dress and her shoes were sturdy little tan oxfords. Raymond saw these things afterwards, now all he saw was the lovely rounded face, the gray eyes set wide apart, the tender mouth and the dimple in the white chin. Perched on a charming nose were absurdly large horn-rimmed spectacles. Raymond was conscious of his smeared face, but the girl did not glance at him at all but bent and kissed the lucky boy.

"Well, Sammy, what are you going to buy to-day?"

"A settin' of Plymouth Rock eggs. Ma can't spare any of ours—the hens all want to set."

"Did you bring a basket with you? No? Well, run home and get one. I will wait."

Raymond glanced at his watch. He had promised to meet Evelyn Bright at the three o'clock train, and early that morning he had looked upon that meeting as the most important matter of his life. Now, however, he placed Evelyn merely as his sister's particular chum, while the most important person in the world was this girl.

"Miss Weed seems to be delayed in coming," remarked Raymond.

"Why, she is here!" said the girl in a surprised tone. "I am Miss Weed."

"Why—Why—" stammered the red-faced young man, "you're not the Miss Weed who sells eggs and chickens, has bees and sells honey and flowers—and ——"

She smiled! Poor Raymond was completely vanquished when she interrupted in her cool little voice. "You have been listening to Sammy Smith who is my press agent! I am Miss Weed of the Buzzy Bee Farm and wagon—and if you are waiting for me ——"

Raymond wanted to fall on his knees and tell her that he had been waiting for her all of his adult life, but he pointed at the car and inquired about a garage.

"There is a coil of rope somewhere in back here, but you might let me look at your engine." In a moment she was beside him poking at the parts of the huge car—in a moment she pointed out the difficulty, perfectly obvious if he had not been fussed.

The next day at luncheon, Raymond's sister and her guest came in from a motor ride.

"I was driving," cried Evelyn, "and talking to Julia, when suddenly, bump! went the car and there was a fearful crash—such a funny, old flivver full of chickens and vegetables and flowers and eggs—all went up in smoke!—I could smell scrambled eggs for miles," she giggled again. "The girl was very stiff and upstage about it—refused the fifty dollars I offered her and would not take my card and send in a bill. Just smiled coldly and whitely, and when the funniest boy with a wheelbarrow came, they picked up the odds and ends, but the eggs ——!"

"Where/did that happen?" demanded Raymond.

"On the hill road—of course I was not looking and it was all my fault, but she would not accept payment ——"

"Of course she wouldn't—money cannot make good such carelessness on your part," said Raymond ruthlessly. "Miss Weed was right—I'm going over to tell her so—and apologize." After lunch he disappeared, and the two girls stared at each other.

"There was a look in Raymond's eye," said Julia, "that warns me that I am soon to have a sister-in-law."

"You can at least give me credit for helping it along," said Evelyn with a vindictive little laugh.

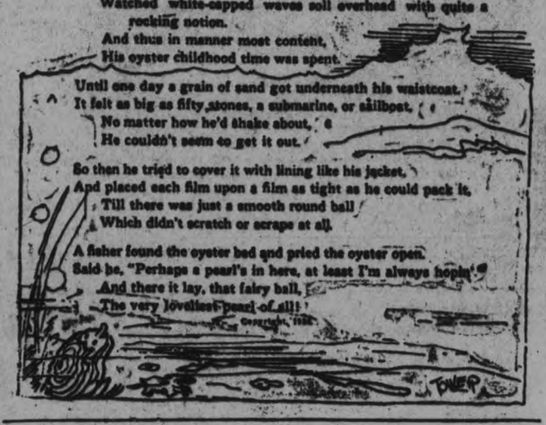
The Pearl

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

SHUT-INS and invalids are often the cheeriest people. Folks who have endured hardships and sorrow are often the kindest, most understanding individuals. It's because they're learned to build pearls about their irritations. If we can teach our children to capitalize life's irritations, to be good sports, instead of letting things get the best of them, we will have taught them the great art of building characters of pearl.



A LITTLE pearl gray oyster in its bed down in the ocean,
Watched white-capped waves roll overhead with quite a rocking motion.
And thus in manner most content,
His oyster childhood time was spent.

Until one day a grain of sand got underneath his waistcoat.
It felt as big as fifty stones, a submarine, or sailboat.
No matter how he'd shake about,
He couldn't seem to get it out.

So then he tried to cover it with lining like his jacket,
And placed each film upon a film as tight as he could pack it,
Till there was just a smooth round ball
Which didn't scratch or scrape at all.

A fisher found the oyster bed and pried the oyster open.
Said he, "Perhaps a pearl's in here, at least I'm always hopin'!"
And there it lay, that fairy ball,
The very loveliest pearl of all!

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE TOAST

We gathered 'round with merry sound,
For many a friend was there,
And many a toast we gave the host,
And many a lady fair.
To every friend with gold to spend
We drank a cup of praise,
And with a tear to friends not here,
To friends of other days.
"And now, old man," they cried to Dan,
Who next the toast shall be?"
And Dan arose and said, "Suppose
We drink a toast to me?"

"So here's to me, where'er I be,
Wherever I may go,
A friend of mine, a friend as fine
As any I shall know.
If poor or rich, no matter which,
With heavy-laden shelf
Or empty dish, I have a wish
I want to wish myself.
I've drunk your toast to friend and host,
To ladies fair to see,
I've drunk to kings and flags and things—
Now here's a toast to me!"

And then the crowd laughed long and loud,
And some were hot with ire.
He stood his ground and looked around,
His eyes were eyes afire.
"May I," he cried, "keep clean inside,
As clean as clothes I wear,
Toast not one lass but all who pass,
And leave them all as fair.
I know the right—God give me light
And strength the right to do,
For he loves best, loves most the rest,
Who to himself is true."

And then the throng cheered loud and long,
And every man arose
And filled his glass to every lass,
Whatever land she knows.
And there were tears as well as cheers,
Hands sought for hands to grip,
And like a flame to fellows came
A closer fellowship.
And then somehow, united now,
Forgotten place and pelf,
Each lifted up the gleaming cup
And drank to him himself.

WINTER STORMS ALL OVER WEST

Snow and Sleet Driven Before Heavy Winds on Prairies.

MILLIONS LOST.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—The Prairie Provinces were experiencing winter storm conditions last night. Heavy winds were driving snow and sleet before them in many districts.

Winnipeg was in the grip of a sleet storm, which was disrupting telegraphic communication. Portage le Prairie, Manitoba, was reported to be the centre of the blizzard of mid-winter proportions, with telephone poles blown down within the town limits.

Rain, Snow and Hail

During the past 24 hours Western Canada has experienced weather conditions varied in the extreme, and including rain, snow and hail in many districts, bringing to a standstill all field operations in the Prairie Provinces.

All Provinces have experienced the heavy hand of winter, and late yesterday the snow area was moving eastward, with Brandon reporting the first fall of the autumn. Winnipeg recorded a heavy rainfall during the past 18 hours, and indications pointed to the coming of a wintry blanket. Rain had quit late yesterday, but the sky was overcast and a north wind prevailed.

Snow was reported in many districts of Saskatchewan and Alberta, and the weather forecast offered little relief. For Manitoba it read: Colder, with local snowfalls.

Losses Total Millions

A serious condition prevails in all Provinces. Many harvest workers brought in from Eastern Canada are stranded in the Western kitis, with no prospects of work for many days to come, while the farmers of the West have suffered losses aggregating millions of dollars.

Farmers of Manitoba, according to an estimate given out by the Provincial Agriculture Department, have suffered a loss of $12,000,000 as a result of the inclement weather which has prevailed during the threshing season. Only 50 per cent. of the threshing has been completed in Manitoba. Saskatchewan has not suffered so severely, but in Alberta, the heaviest hit of all Western sections, the loss, according to local grain men, will be enormous.

TELEPHONE HEARING PROCEEDS SLOWLY

OTTAWA, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—The hearing of the application of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada for authority to increase its schedule of rates to subscribers continued yesterday before the Board of Railway Commissioners, and at the close of the second day's cross-examination of the company's twenty or more expert witness practically only one had been disposed of. Inasmuch as five or more municipalities and other interested contestants are represented by counsel, and each of these legal gentlemen has a battery of expert advisers to guide him, the process of cross-examination is formidable.

Anomalies in Rates

G. H. Rogers, the company efficiency engineer, was closely questioned as to the principles which guided him in grouping the cities upon which the company calculated its revised sale of charges. The main contention of the opposing counsel was that the rating was not equitable, comparing one city with another. While it was admitted that the scale must, in the total, produce the revenue required by the company, there were anomalies which had arisen through an alleged arbitrary placing of cities in what was claimed was the wrong group.

This contention developed evidences of diversity of opinion among counsel. Hamilton's representative insisted that that city should be in a lower-rated group, while Ottawa declared the Montreal rating was too low, which drew remonstrances from the representative of that city.

Four-Party Lines.

An interesting feature which came out during the day was the statement that the company was considering the introduction of four-party lines in Montreal and Toronto, particularly for residential phones.

It was admitted, however, that the present tendency was for subscribers served by two-party lines to apply for individual lines. The suggestion that the company's policy was to endeavor to force subscribers to take two-party service was emphatically denied by the witness.

CHOIR ENTERTAINED.

Members Hold Practice at Home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Armstrong.

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Armstrong, Chamberlain Street, when the Knox Church Choir met and held its regular Thursday evening practice, after which the members joined in games and singing old time songs. Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Armstrong.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered by Mr. Pitchford and Mr. McCannan spoke on behalf of the Choir, expressing their regret of loosing Miss Marie Armstrong for a short time, owing to her ill health and all joined in wishing her a speedy recovery. Mr. Devey spoke a few words of welcome to several new members who intend uniting with the choir. The evening was brought to a close by the singing of God Save the King.

Market Quiet But Firm Rails Receive Good Support

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—Quiet strength characterized to-day's Stock Market. Rails received good buying support on the strength of August earnings statements now being published.

Except for a few foreign producers, such as General Asphalt, oils were sluggish. New peak prices for a year or longer were attained by Advance Rumely Common, Lambert Co. and Wilson Co. Preferred, while Texas Gulf Sulphur duplicated its record high price before the end of the third hour. Substantial gains also were recorded by Adams Express, International Harvester, International Telephone, Coca Cola, and American Power and Light.

Brompton Feature Stock Toronto Tendency Upward

TORONTO, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—Brompton Pulp and Paper was a strong and active spot on the Toronto Stock Exchange today with a noon close of 36 7-8 for a net gain of 2 3-8 points. Loblaw Grocetrias also advanced, the Common jumping 2 for 54, and the Preferred 1 1-2 to 103. The tendency was toward higher prices in most of the issues.

Noranda was weaker with a net decline of 35 cents to 17.90. Brabilian closed unchanged at 120 1-2. Nickel gained 3-8 to 36 1-4. Alcohol 1-4 to 22 1-4, Fishing 1-4 to 73, Locomotives Preferred 1 point to 83, Arnold 1-4 to 24, Sugar 1-2 to 25 1-2, Kelvinator Common 1 1-2 to 16 1-2, and Kelvinator Preferred 1 to 94. Massey Harris Common was off 1-2 to 72, Barcelona 1 5-8 to 37, Steamships Preferred 1-2 to 87 1-2, and Canners Preferred 1-2 to 65 1-2. Standard Bank firmed 3 points to 195, while Montreal eased 1 to 269.

Wheat Prices Go Down As Weather Brightens

CHICAGO, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—Generally clear weather in Canada led to lower prices for wheat today in early dealings. The cold temperatures prevailing were not regarded as likely to cause damage to wheat at this time.

Starting at 1-4c to 1 1-4c off, the wheat market soon underwent a further setback. Corn and oats were steadied by frost predictions, corn opening at 1-8c lower to 5-8c advance and later showing slight gains all around. Provisions were firmer. The announcement today of 37,061,000 bushels increase of the world's available supply of wheat during August tended somewhat to emphasize the bearish sentiment.

Noranda Still Weak Mine Market Irregular

TORONTO, September 24. — Canadian Press. — Noranda continued weaker on the Standard mining exchange to-day, with a net loss of 25c to 18.05. Prices were irregular. International Nickel firmed 13c to 36.00; Hollinger 5 to 19.25;; Wright-Hargreaves 5 to 8.65; Dome 10 to 11.25, and Vipond 1 to 1.72, while McIntyre was off 5c to 24.70, and Lakeshore 5to 13.65. Amulet eased 1 to 1.34. In the silvers Beaver lost 1-2 to 83 1-2, Castle 1 to 1.41, Mining Corporation 1 to 3.55 and Borlamaque 2 to 1.15.

One Fatality Caused By the Storms Which Swept State.

LOSS $200,000.

SANDUSKY, Ohio, Sept. 24.—(United Press). — A tornado blowing out of the west in nearly the same path as that followed by the great 1924 wind storm left a trail of debris and shattered houses in South Erie Country to-day.

Some estimates placed the damage as high as $100,000.

The storm which followed heavy rains which flooded low lands and damaged crops to the extent of thousands of dollars claimed one life at Huron, Ohio, late yesterday, and sent three persons to hospitals, two or whom were injured seriously.

Houses were damaged, trees blown over and wires torn down.

Twenty chidren were saved from possible serious injury by Mrs. Mae Bradford, a school teacher at Hubbell's Corners, who marched them into a cellar near the school at the approach of the storm. The frame school house was splintered.

Mr. Hawkes since last convention of the Prohibition Union has had charge of organizers in the constituen- and has addressed many temperance conventions throughout the Province, advocating prohibition plus a policy of political activity. Asked whether his retirement meant he no longer supported prohibition, Mr Hawkes said he regarded the coming Provincial Elections as probably the most important in Ontario's history and he was merely recovering his freedom to render any possible service without being hampered by official obligations to any organizations.

MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTION

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestents

Most people who suffer either occasionally or chronically from gas, sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestents, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get pure Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

GOV. PINCHOT DEFENDS BOUT TO CLERGYMAN

Tells Morale Welfare Board Boxing Not a Degrading Sport.

TO ATTEND HIMSELF.

No Difference Between Present One and Hundreds of Others.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 24. — Governor Pinchot in a letter yesterday to a Pittsburgh clergyman who had objected to the Dempsey-Tunney fight on Pennsylvania soil, defended professional boxing as conducted under Pennsylvania law, said he was going to see the coming bout, and expressed the hope that Tunney would win.

The letter was sent to the Rev. Charles Scanlon, general director of the Department of Moral Welfare, Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, whose office is in Pittsburgh. The Governor said there had been a good deal of misunderstanding among some of the people of the state as to the match and as to boxing in Pennsylvania in general.

The Governor then explained the facts as he understood them, telling of the fighting in Pennsylvania to 1923 "under conditions of brutality and dishonesty often attended by bribery and corruption of local officials." The Boxing act of 1923 "completely revolutionized the situation," he said.

Sees Principle Same.

"There is no difference in principle between this match and hundreds of others which had been held and are being held under state supervision and in accordance with the provisions of the Pennsylvania law," the Executive wrote. "There was therefore no reaon in my judgment why a discrimination should be made in this case, merely because greater public attention was called to it, the principle being the same.

Boxing is not a degrading sport, he continued, and he referred to the middleweight championship at Harvard held by Roosevelt, of his father's insistence that he learn to box and his hope that his own son would do likewise. Boxing, he said, is an admirable exercise, being one of the principal factors in conditioning soldiers when America entered the World War. The state tax collected from this fight will be used for the erection of memorials in France to Pennsylvania's dead there.

State Treasurer Lewis said that the State tax of 5 per cent. of the total gross receipts of the fight, exclusive of the Federal tax paid, would amount to approximately $75,000.

Text of the Letter

The letter follows:

"Many thanks for your letter of Sept. 16, which has just reached me on my return to Harrisburg. There is, I am afraid, a good deal of misunderstanding among some of the people of Pennsylvania as to the Tunney-Dempsey match and as to boxing in this State in general. Here are the facts as I understand them.

"When I came into office there was much prizefighting in Pennsylvania under conditions of brutality and dishonesty, often attended by bribery and corruption of local officials, which were extremely demoralizing. The local police were as a rule unable (which was common) to meet the situation, and conditions were growing worse rather than better.

"In view of these facts, the Legislature of 1923 passed, and I signed a bill which has completely revolutionized the situation. It substituted regulated boxing for unregulated fighting, provided for careful supervision of boxing exhibitions by regularly appointed State officials, including the continuous inspection of a qualified physician, limited every contest to not over ten three-minute rounds, thus eliminating long drawn out slugging matches, specially forbade boxing on Sunday, and imposed severe penalties for crookedness or any other infraction of the rules.

Followed Other States

"In this substitution of honest regulated boxing for dishonest unregulated fighting Pennsylvania followed the example of other States. This regulation of boxing had been in successful operation in this State for some three years when the question of the Dempsey-Tunney match came up.

"There is no difference whatever in principle between this match and hundreds of others which had been held and are being held under State supervision, and in accordance with the provisions of the Pennsylvania law. There was therefore no reason, in my judgment, why a discrination should be made, although greater public attention was called to it, the principle being the same. Accordingly, when the chairman of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission told me that the commission contemplated approving the match, my answer was that the match was clearly within the provisions of the Pennsylvania law, and that I saw no reason why they should not treat it in accordance with the law, just as they had been treating hundreds of other cases.

"I am very far from regarding boxing as a degrading sport. Roosevelt used to box as a youngster, and with such success that, as I remember it, he won the middleweight championship at Harvard University. And he kept it up. I remember very well boxing with him when he was Governor of New York.

A Legitimate Sport

"It is true that Roosevelt boxed as an amateur, and that Tunney and Dempsey will box as professionals, but the boxing in both cases is done with the same weapons and under the same rules. If the contest is honestly conducted (which the law of the State of Pennsylvania undertakes to guarantee), then I am wholly unable to see that the Dempsey-Tunney match can properly be regarded with horror, or, indeed, otherwise than as a legitimate form of professional sport.

"Boxing in itself, in my judgment, is an admirable exercise. When millions of our young men were in training to fight for democracy boxing was one of the principal factions in conditioning the soldiers for the work ahead of them. Boxing in the army was vigorously supported by the Y.M.C.A., the Knights of Columbus and the Y.M.H.A. and was much followed by our troops in France.

"Moreover, the money the State collects from the tax on gate receipts at this match and all other matches is devoted under the law to the fund for erecting suitable memorials in France to Pennsylvania's sons who laid down their lives on the field of battle. It was in France that Tunney, then a United States marine, by winning the championship of the A.E.F., first came into prominence as a boxer.

Hopes Son Will Box

"My father saw to it that I learned to box as a small boy, and I hope that my son will do likewise. I call your attention particularly to the fact that the nations in which boys and men are in the habit of doing their fighting with their fists are precisely those in which they are not in the habit of using the knife or the bullet for that purpose.

"On the basis of some personal experience, I regard boxing as a sport admirably fitted for physical development, and also for fostering the qualities of initiative, steadiness courage and endurance which are so necessary in the battle of life.

"For all of these reasons, and for many others with which I shall not burden you, I believe that I have done the right thing in standing behind the Pennsylvania law in the matter of the Dempsey-Tunney boxing match. So believing, I see no reason why I should not attend the match myself, and I have arranged to do so. Also I earnestly hope to see Tunney win."

POPE OPPOSED BY ARGENTINA

President Says Archbishop Must Be One of Three Nominees.

SEEKS SUPPORT.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 24. — A contest between the government and the Vatican at Rome, similar to that in Mexico, has been the subject of stormy debate in the Argentine Senate in the last three days. President Alvear has sought from the Senate action which will uphold his contention that the Pope must accept the Argentine Government's advice in appointing the presiding archbishop in the country. The intellectuals and socialists are supporting the president but a strong element of clericals and conservatives oppose him. The controversy now brought to a head has been pending since 1923, because of the refusal of the Vatican to appoint one of three candidates presented by the archbishopric of Buenos Aires.

It is the custom in several of the Spanish-American republics when the office of archbishop becomes vacant, to present to the Vatican a ternary or the names of three prelates acceptable to the government. When the Buenos Aires See became vacant the government undertook to apply this system. The Senate on June 24, 1923, prepared a ternary with the names of Mgrs. Miguel De Andrea Francisco Alberti and Abel Bazan.

Recommended to Rome.

The President sent this ternary to Rome with the recommendation that Mgr. De Andrea be appointed. The Argentine legation at the Vatican was instructed to use all its influence to have the Pope concede the right thus assumed. There was delay in Rome and the President urged the Papal Nuncio to rush matters.

It has never been possible to learn the exact attitude of the Vatican took but after a long delay Mgr. De Andrea finally asked the President to withdraw his name from the ternary. The government did not wish to accept but on the insistence of the prelate it acquiesced. It was powerless to do otherwise, since the canonical laws provide that if a prelate declines an appointment he cannot be considered for the place.

The Vatican brought the issue to a head in July, 1924, when the Bishop of Sante Fe. Mgr. Boneo, was notified that he had been opointed Archbishop of Buenos Aires by the Pope. Mgr. Boneo communicated this appointment to the President. He declared the action of the Vatican was in contravention of the Government's rights and when the matter was laid before the Supreme Court, the President was upheld and Mgr. Boneo's appointment was declared illegal.

KIWANIS CLUB HEARS REPORT OF CONVENTION PROCEEDINGS

Business Like Discussion of Club Programme, Says Secretary.

MAKING LIFE HAPPY.

Peterboro Club's Report on Activities Best Submitted.

To-day's Kiwanis Club luncheon was featured by the reports of the delegates who attended the District Convention held recently in Toronto. The Peterborough Club was well represented at this gathering, forty-one from here being registered at the convention headquarters.

Secretary Jack Heron presented a comprehensive report that included every phase of the activities dealt with during the entire session.

The report roused the members to a high pitch of enthusiasm, and, on the motion of I. P. McNabb and Mark Bredin, a unanimous vote of thanks was tendered the secretary for the very clear and concise account of the proceedings of the convention. The passing of the motion was marked by the members rising en masse, and the dining-room resounded with the vociferous cheers that concluded the reading of the report.

I. P. McNabb, who was also a delegate, presented the reports of the District Trustee's meeting.

The booster for the day was J. Doran and the prize-winners were W. H. Merrill and H. Gilgour.

Among the visitors present were W. L. Hibbert of Toronto, F. Bryan of the Toronto Down Town Club, and John Edgar of the local Children's Aid Society.

The secretary's report was as follows:

The 8th annual convention of the Ontario-Quebec District was distinctly a gathering for the discussion of service. It was indeed remarkable how little time was spent in asides and in purely Kiwanis business; every session fairly bristled with ideas for enlarged activity in the betterment of community and business life. It was an inspiring gathering; a cross-section of many communities, just as this Club is a cross-section of the life of Peterborough. Here was a composite group of business and professional men devoted to the rendition of service to the respective communities in which the clubs are located. There was not much "head in the clouds" talk, such as is common in some service club gatherings, though one speaker did draw some far-fetched analogies from peaks in the Rocky Mountains. The district convention was a business-like discussion of ways of making life more happy for those who need help and more abundant for those who give help.

"It is my duty as your delegate to tell you of the business transacted at the convention—not to talk of the impressions I received personally—but really the whole convention was so Kiwanian — there is no better word—that I must be permitted a little latitude. I realized, as never before, that Kiwanis is founded upon age-old spiritual forces, sometimes indeed called old-fashioned, but now given new power through the organization to which it is your privilege and mine to belong. Integrity, faith, industry, vision, thrift and an abounding and abiding interest in the other fellow — these are the fundamentals of Kiwanis. The message I bring from the District Convention, as best summing up the business transacted there, is that we must catch the vision, and with faith in the cause and integrity of purpose, build with these spiritual forces a greater city with high ideals. And when, laid as brick upon brick, we have all the cities in which Kiwanis Clubs function, then the structure we erect as Canada will be glorious indeed.

One of the most inspiring half hours in the entire convention was that taken up by Mike Gorman, who represented International. After wittily introducing himself in a manner that set the crowded Crystal Ball-room rocking with the laughter of his huge audience, he drove home point after point in Kiwanis teaching with a dramatic intensity that was doubly impressive because of the prelude of laughter. One point stands out pre-eminently in my mind. An American of United States, Mike Gorman recognized our right as Canadians to the title American, and he pointed to the Harding Goodwill Memorial, to which this club contributed its share as more than a monument to a great man. It is the shrine of a nation's faith in a nation, the lasting symbol of a fraternity that knows no bonds but the ties of mutual respect and joint service.

In his reply, Past District Governor B. B. Halliday fittingly referred to the menace to the happy state now existing that lies in the school histories of the United States, where it is not pointed out that the King under whose reign the States became separated was a German who happened to be ruling England, and the red coats who fought the American soldiers were German mercenaries, and urged changes in this system.

I am afraid that like Sam in our stunt I am inclined to wander from the point, which is a report on the business of the convention. There were many conferences, all of which I could not attend, but I obtained, for your information, reports of most of them. The secretaries' conferences, which was first in point of time and also in interest to me, was noteworthy principally for the unanimity with which the suggestion that the secretary is worked too hard, was received. The man who presided was two or three months behind with his reports to District and International—he came from the place that is always marked with a star in your district bulletin—Cobalt, "no report received." He said in excuse that the chairmen of committees failed to report to him. That's an excuse I haven't had to use yet. In my innocence I thought that if the chairmen failed to report it was up to me to fabricate a report for them. But out of the discussion arose a recommendation which was adopted, urging all committee chairmen to present reports of their activities, hopes and aspirations in writing monthly. These are to be filed away in suitable folders for inspection of district officers on their visits. Another discussion centred around the enforcement of the attendance rule, and the reports presented showed that the club with the best records are clubs where the rule is enforced. As one secretary expressed the aim, it is to make Kiwanis Club easy to get out of and hard to get into, seeking quality rather than numbers.

Bill Cockburn, District Lieutenant Governor, paid a neat tribute to the Peterborough club's efficiency, picking out several features of our work as examples to the other clubs.

Out of the conference came a recommendation that the classification rule be not stretched in any Kiwanis club. The belief was expressed by the members of this committee that any elasticity in the classification rule would spell the loss of prestige, if not the actual disruption of Kiwanis clubs. It was pointed out that the rules of classification adopted by the clubs on suggestion from International have hitherto worked very well indeed and the most successful clubs are those clubs that adhere originally to it.

There was a great deal of matter in the report presented by the Under - privileged Child Committee which urged the renewal of the Kiwanian Daddy plan as a general under-privileged child activity. Most of the clubs are carrying on this work, the principal recommendation of which, seems to be the personal contact obtained between Kiwanian and child. The phrase "under-privileged child," is interpreted as meaning "one who has some physical, mental, moral or economic handicap which seems to prevent him from attaining the full measure of citizenship of which he is capable." The committee recommended a general survey of the field and a complete study of the literature on under-privileged child work before a definite programme is embarked upon. One of the points stressed is that the service should be to under-privileged children and not merely miscellaneous activity among children. The plan adopted by the Peterborough club of raising money for this work by shows, fairs, etc., was commended over that adopted in other clubs where assessments are made on the members.

At the discussion of inter-club relations, it was suggested that visits between clubs be not merely fraternal exchanges of goodwill and banter, but that there should be some definite Kiwanis purpose in each inter-club visit. It was pointed out that inter-club meetings offer unusual opportunities to develop the spirit of unity through a better understanding of the constitutional objectives of Kiwanis International. A suggestion was made that at each inter-club meeting and indeed frequently at regular club meetings, the International objects and the objectives in activities, should be read. This is a new slant on inter-club visiting, something different, I think, from our conception during the past and, I think, one that is deserving of some consideration.

There was a very interesting discussion of music in club meetings by Fred Trestrail. Roy Kennedy of Ottawa, appointed by the committee to draft a new song book, explained the work that had been done and submitted for the approval of the convention, a new system whereby songs will be mimeographed on loose-leaf sheets and inserted from time to time in a folder. This will do away with the difficulty that is now apparent in that a song book is out of date so quickly after issue. There are only a few songs, after all, that live forever and by the time some of today's popular songs appear in print, they have run their course and are no longer of interest to members of the club. It was pointed out in the course of the discussion on music that in addition to the formal songs and the stunt songs, there should be eight or ten minutes of different directed singing just before the principal speech of the day. In addition to waking the gang up and getting them together in the right spirit for hearing an address, it is suggested that this practice would give the speaker of the day an opportunity to collect his ideas. The formation of a quartette in the club, with practice in the songs under the heading "Male Quarette" in the yellow-backed song book is advocated as a good means to enliven interest in singing in the club. Co-operation was also urged in music-week activities in which this club had an outstanding record this year.

There was a good deal of talk on the subject of meeting-planning, to much of which we from Peterborough did not agree. It was pointed out, for instance, that by planning the meetings three months ahead we might miss the opportunity to hear an oustanding speaker who happened to be in Peterborough and available to us on the last day of the three months' period. For well-to-do clubs in larger centres, this system of planning meetings would be all right because they could afford to pick their speaker and pay expenses, where we must depend upon getting anyone who is available at that time. The resolution that went through the convention on this point was merely in the form of a recomemndation suggesting that the meetings be planned at the first of each quarter.

In discussing Kiwania education, it was pointed out that it is not in the best interests of the club or of individual members, that they should be allowed to drift into the club without a thorough grounding in the purpose of Kiwanis, the duties involved in being a Kiwanian, and the aims and objects of the particular clubs to which they are being admitted. It is suggested by this committee that the club committee on Kiwanis educaion take each new member and give him these instructions. In the way this report was presented to the convention, it was made apparent that this committee is one of the most important in the club and certainly has the most far-reaching effect on the destinies of this organization. The matter of making initiation the subject of joking was denounced as un-Kiwanian. The entire service should be brief, impressive and to the point; with horseplay avoided but with always a little good-natured humor in keeping with the traditions of Kiwanis. The new member should be immediately assigned to some duty in the club that will make him feel that he actually belongs, and that Kiwanis means business and is not merely an organized luncheon club.

The discussion of better relations between farmer and city man added very little, if anything, to our conception of that work. The suggestion was made that friendship be made the basis for co-operatiaon and, as you all know, the Peterborough Club has advanced along these lines during the past summer. We have attended all the farmer functions in this district, played with the farmers, supported them in their social activities, helped in programmes and invited them to our luncheons. This is a very good basis upon which to start the constructive work of bringing better town and country relations.
